The affair was a dual celebration, it being a farewell for Elizabeth Stone of New Orleans, Miss Moore's cousin and guest, and a get-together party by Miss Moore's friends to congratulate her on her new starring contract, which has just been closed with Marshall Neilan, producer.

BEAUMONT HUNTING STORY

Harry Beaumont is seeking a farce on the type of "Skinner's Dress Suit" and other comedy-dramas that he has directed for his first independent production.

Douglas Bronston, Realart scenario writer, has allowed the dust to accumulate on his typewriter while taking a vacation at Catalina. Bronston has just completed a new story for Bebe Daniels.

Johnny Jones and Lucille Ricksen, who play the leading roles in Booth Tarkington's Edgar comedies, produced by Goldwyn, have been elected honorary members of the Peter Rabbit Club of Chicago.

ELECTRICIANS TO MEET AT CLARK

The E. I. E. S., an association of electrical engineers employed in motion picture studios of Los Angeles, announce that hereafter it will meet regularly every second Tuesday in the Clark Hotel, at which time there will be a dinner and address. At its last meeting the E. I. E. S. was addressed by P. P. Betha, representative of the National Carbon Company, on the manufacture and uses of carbon. The purpose of the association is the standardization of equipment and exchange of theories in regard to motion picture electrical engineering. Goldwyn, Lasky, Universal, Ince, and other studios are represented in the organization.

Bessie Love is soon to publish a series of tales written by herself, known as "Bessie Love's Good Night Stories." These will describe the lives of numerous denizens of the forest, real and fantastic.

In "Nineteen and Phyllis," Charles Ray departs from his rural country-boy role and appears as a dapper nineteen-year-old city boy.

Kathleen Kirkham has returned from Big Bear, where she spent several days on location. She finishes her contract with the Mae Marsh company this week.

Mrs. Frank Lawrence, editor-in-chief of the Allen Holubar productions, has been ill for several days which has delayed somewhat the cutting of "Man, Woman, Marriage," the first Holubar-Dorothy Phillips special for First National.

Monroe Salisbury wires from New York that the trade showing of "The Barbarian," his first independent production, was given at a Gotham hotel recently. He will return to the coast to start his second picture as soon as releasing arrangements are concluded.

"BLACK BEAUTY" INSURED

"Black Beauty" has been insured for $50,000 by Vitagraph. It has been estimated that it would cost this amount to retake alone the scenes of the horses in the special production of "Black Beauty," the Anna Sewell classic, if anything happened to the animal.

them, has a good sense of humor, is versatile, intelligent, strong-willed, decisive. She scrutinizes every little thing, has flamboyant imagination, is original, fond of the bizarre and unusual, of odd color combinations. I get that from her unusually long lower loops which seem to dig right into the earth for oddities. Helen surely is fond of odd jewelry and when she changes the Mulvaney to something else, she'll expect something nifty in solitaires.

Miss Mulvaney likes cultured, refined folks. She makes the graceful, pretty E, with musical proclivities. Note the positive way her capital Aitch hooks about itself, denoting that she will stick by her own opinions just as her Irish forebears wielded the shillalah when things didn't suit them.

7. ISABELLE MCKAY

Ding, dong, ding dong—she IS a belle. There is a dash and individuality to this handwriting, with its tremendously high "T," denoting well-developed ego, imagination, love of clothing herself beautifully, of holding the center of the set wherever she's temporarily hanging her bonnet, and a general force which attract the mere male. Isabelle puts an extra curlicue on the belle—just like the clapper of one of those insistent little dinner-summoners we used when the world was a pup. Nowadays, we hit things that sound like a Fred Harvey eating house, on the Santa Fe.

That final downstroke, however, marks the obstinacy of Miss McKay. She sticks right to any self-outlined task and she won't yield an inch of her opinion through force. You must lead the young lady lovingly, give her sympathy, appeal to her reason.

She will attract financial success either by marriage, personal effort or inheritance. She uses her forceful will and thought power, perhaps unconsciously, but nevertheless none the less magnetically. Women follow Miss McKay's lead. She never follows any one. She is courageous and blazes her own path. No employer would ever dare to antagonize the girl. She can take care of herself anywhere. Note that talkative initial hook on the Mick, as well as on the Kay. See the practical y-stroke, plain, but to the point. That's how Isabelle answers those who make her agreeably indignant.

8. RAYMOND GRAUMAN, LOS ANGELES

Here we have a young man who objects to my readings, because I don't harp on folk's faults. You see, it's not quite fair to give a public rehearsal of defects, so in Camera! we aim to talk constructively, to give people something to work upon. If you've a talent—make it TEN! That's Bible advice—eh, bien?

But since Raymond wants me to pick a few pinfeathers outahim; I wouldn't disappoint him for worlds. He's supersensitive and very fond of praise, rather obstinate, very much interested in himself, quite critical and analytical, and lacking in will power. His force arises from obstinacy.

BUT—always remember that Elbert Hubbard said "sin is misdirected energy." Obstinacy is a mighty fine thing when it comes to sticking to a hard piece of work, of mastering a difficult musical composition, of overcoming a mental defect or physical weakness. Sensitiveness is a good thing also, for it makes one understand and sympathize with the sufferings and ideals of acquaintances. Ever analyze that word, ideal? It means I deal—but in what does the I deal? Think that over? Idealists write high i-dots, because they allow the I to deal in the higher things of life. Raymond does this, which corroborates his sensitiveness to disagreeable things, as seen in looped d's and t's. He is often reserved because not easily understood. His analytical powers should be used for character reading in constructive way. He is very intelligent, naturally studious, artistic, farsighted.

A valuable quarter column was devoted in your last number to the wail of some person, signing himself a "Movie Fan," anent the dire mistake of a director who permits a butler to wear a black tie with full dress.

Whoever "Movie Fan" is, he has suffered, obviously, a lot of mental agony for nothing. As a matter of fact, a butler does wear and SHOULD wear a black cross tie in order to be distinguishable from the guests who wear the conventional white lawn or satin tie.

I was private and social secretary to the Viceroy of India, and naturally had to have the tenets and usages of conventional society and etiquette on my fingers' ends, in addition to my being "reared" in an atmosphere where such things as stiff and inflexible usages are dominant.

It also depends considerably on in what country and under what circumstances the butler wears the white tie. The only time it would be proper for him would be when off duty and attending some middle class social function as a guest and not in a "buttlng" capacity. Also, it has of late become quite prevalent for even young men to wear black-waistcoats with full dress. In fact, it seems that "whatever is, is right" nowadays. But, so far, I believe, the correct and the least presumptuous thing for a butler to do is to wear a black tie on all occasions. It is a good thing since the removal of the mustache has become the vogue in England and France. Until about nine years ago a "gentleman" would not "wear" a smooth upper lip. Then anyone appearing at social functions with a shaved upper lip ran a great risk of having a hat, gloves and walking stick handed to him with instructions to take care of them. As a case in point: I was "crossing" once and a coy little lady's maid of a British family kept making eyes at me all the way across. One night in sight of shore she sidled up alongside of me and asked, "Oose butler are you?"

She judged from my accent that I was not an American, and taking me for a Britisher with a smooth face, naturally drew the conclusion that I was someone's servant. But rules are exceptions nowadays.

Yours,

FREDERICK BENNETT.

Thru Fire And Water The De Brie Proves Its Supremacy

Take time to read the following letter, and be convinced:

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 21, 1920.

G. Gennert, 208 South Spring St.
Gentlemen:

In response to your request for a statement of the performance of the De Brie camera used on my trip to Glacier and Yellowstone National Parks, I will say that it worked 100 per cent perfect.

We traveled over five hundred miles by pack train with the camera on a mule's back. One day I was climbing over a glacier with the outfit and slipped, dropping the camera into a crack in the ice forty feet deep, where it lay at a temperature of fifty below zero for nearly two hours before we got it out. Another time, at the head waters of the Missouri river, I was cranking from the bow of a boat when we hit a snag and off I went, and the camera too. In Yellowstone Park, while taking a close-up of a geyser "playing," the wind shifted and I had to run without stopping for the camera, and for ten minutes it was hid in boiling water and steam. However, the splendid construction of the De Brie withstood all these tests and not a foot of film was lost. Since using the De Brie I have never had a bit of static, scratches, buckles or any other of the common camera troubles.

Sincerely yours, H. C. BRYANT.

Mr. Bryant is President of Southern California Camera Club. He knows his subject, and knows how to talk about it. Read the account of his thrilling experiences elsewhere in this issue.

Pictures Take The Coast

Besides ranking third among the industries of the United States, motion picture making has left all West Coast activities far behind, according to a booklet recently published by the Security Trust and Savings Bank.

Considering the fact that practically all of the western studios are located in or about Los Angeles, such a statement is particularly interesting to Southern Californians, since it means that the picture industry controls this city financially.

Oil, which comes second upon the list, represents an $87,000,000 investment, to the motion pictures' capital of $150,000,000.

Expenditures by the industry last year in this section of the state, which amounted to $120,000,000, succeeded in bringing the banking interests to a realization of the magnitude of this undertaking which commenced but a short while ago, as time is reckoned, on a more or less slender scale.

Such a growth as picture making has experienced is almost unbelievable. Fabulous sums of money have been made in Los Angeles by the members of the profession, and here most of that money has also been spent. It has gone to support the shops and various drives of this city. Moreover, it is the romance of the film colony that attracts the thousands of tourists who flock here yearly with full pockets and extravagant tendencies.

In our opinion, some cities are just naturally lucky!

On Registration

Every person connected with the motion picture industry must register before October 2nd to be enabled to vote at the coming election.

This will be the most important vote ever cast by the profession, as is easily gathered from recent statistics; a few of which have been previously mentioned upon this page.

It is to the interest of all of us to support Harold (Hal) Wilson, motion picture candidate for the Assembly from the 63rd district.

Register now and take no chances.

In Memory of Our Friends

Tomorrow at the Brunton Studio at 2:30 p. m., the Reverend Neal Dodd of the Motion Picture People's Church, will officiate at a memorial service for those who have departed from our ranks within the past few months. Among those especially remembered will be: Robert Harron, Ormer Locklear, Olive Thomas, Frank Elliot and Clarine Seymour.

This, the last service that we can render these friends here, has been arranged by a committee from the Actors' Association which includes: Raymond Cannon, chairman; Roy Stewart, Joseph Dowling, Dot Farley, Mrs. Vin Moore and Louise Fitzroy.

They have been given the hearty co-operation of several of the heads of the various branches of the industry. Robert Brunton not only lends his studio, but has provided the necessary facilities for the occasion.

Sid Grauman has also assisted the program materially by loaning his orchestra, headed by Misha Guterson, the new leader of the Symphony, and through his courtesy, also, the Metropolitan Ladies Quartette will be a feature of the program.

William D. Taylor, director general of the Realart Studio, upon the urgent request of the committee, has consented to give the memorial oration.

No pains have been spared to make of this affair a fitting tribute to those whom we loved. They were, without exception, young people whose time on earth might have been three times as long, but for seeming misfortunes to which many of us have not as yet become reconciled.

The entire profession will be present Sunday to pay its last respects.

Following is the program arrangement:

Invocation.

"The Souls of the Righteous".....Tertius Noble
Choir of St. Paul's Pro-Cathedral.

Scripture reading.

Metropolitan Ladies' Quartette (courtesy of Mr. Sid Grauman).

Orchestra.

Memorial Oration—William D. Taylor.

"Crossing the Bar".....Heinrich
Choir and Orchestra.

Russian Hymn for the Departed.....Kieff Melody
St. Paul's Choir.

Benediction.

FILM CAPITAL PRODUCTION NOTES

LOIS WEBER PRODUCES FOR PARAMOUNT

Lois Weber emerges from a several months' silence this week with the announcement of a contract with the Paramount-Artcraft Corporation to produce four specials.

As a matter of fact, Miss Weber has two of her contracted productions practically completed and is expecting to start work immediately on the third. The two specials which will be ready for the market soon will be entitled "What Do Men Want?" and "To Please One Woman," both original stories from Miss Weber's pen. Just which of these productions will be released first has not yet been decided, but an announcement from the Paramount offices is expected shortly.

THE DE HAVENS TO DO ANOTHER FEATURE

Carter De Haven has wired from New York to his production manager, Ben H. Cohen, to engage a scenario and technical staff to commence work immediately upon the preliminary work for his next picture, "The Girl in the Taxi," which will be his second multiple reel production.

Work will be commenced upon Mr. De Haven's return, which is expected within the week.

MARSHALL NEILAN TO FLY TO GLACIER PARK

Arrangements are now being completed for an aeroplane trip from Los Angeles to Glacier Park, Montana, by Marshall Neilan in connection with his new First National production, "Pards." During the next two weeks the heavy lighting and other apparatus to be used by the company in Montana will be shipped by rail and in the meantime, Mr. Neilan, accompanied by Emery Rogers, pilot, and David Kesson, his cameraman, will make the journey by air, partly by way of recreation and partly in the way of an experiment in "location hunting" by aeroplane.

Pictures will be taken from the air and from the ground along the route of the plane for reference as to different "locations" used in "Pards."

AT THE BRUNTON STUDIO

Work was started this week at the Brunton studios on Benjamin B. Hampton's all-star feature, "The Killer," an adaptation of Stewart Edward White's latest novel. Direction is under E. Richard Shayer and Howard Hickman.

Dustin Farnum returned to the Brunton studios this week after an extended location jaunt to the big timber country near Fort Bragg, California, where several thousand feet of lake and forest exteriors were filmed for the star's latest independent production, "The Trail of the Axe," an adaptation of the best seller of that title by Ridgewell Cullum. Ernest C. Ward is directing this picture and Winifred Kingston is playing opposite the star.

Work has been completed at the Brunton studios on Bessie Barriscale's latest Robertson-Cole production, "The Broken Gate," adapted from the novel by Emerson Hough. Director Paul Scardon is now engaged in cutting and titling the picture.

A special preview of "The Money Changers" was given at the Brunton studios this week by Benjamin B. Hampton for Upton Sinclair, author of the novel from which the picture was adapted. The negative of the film will probably be shipped east this week.

LITSON PROCEEDS WITH EDGAR SERIES

Mason N. Litson, Goldwyn director, will start Wednesday on "The Little Saw," the ninth of the Booth Tarkington Edgar comedies in which Johnny Jones is featured.

Mr. Litson has just finished "Fans," a circus day story. Eleanor Flori prepared the scenarios for both stories.

AT GOLDWYN'S

The first story written originally for the screen by Maurice Maeterlinck during his recent sojourn at the Goldwyn Studios where he came to study pictures, is now being placed in continuity by Elmer Rice. The working title of the first Maeterlinck story is "The Power of Good." This will be produced as a special.

Thompson Buchanan, associate editor of the studio and author of the stage success "Civilian Clothes," has just sold to the Goldwyn company the picture rights to his latest drama, "The Bridal Path." This is now being put into picture continuity by Gerald Duffy, under the supervision of the author.

Louis Sherwin is writing the continuity for Gertrude Atherton's original screen story, "Noble Oblige," which the author is now completing.

Edfrid Bingham is completing the screen technique on Irvin Cobb's story, "Boys Will Be Boys," which will be Will Rogers' next Goldwyn picture under the direction of Clarence Badger.

Reginald Barker finished this week taking "Bunt Pulls the Strings." Frank Lloyd is putting the finishing touches on "Out of the Dark." E. Mason Hopper is on the last stretch of Rupert Hughes' "Canavan," starring Tom Moore. Mason N. Litson today completed "Fans," the eighth of the Booth Tarkington "Edgar" series, and Victor Schertzinger is getting well under way directing "The Concert."

AT THE REALART STUDIO

Bebe Daniels completed "Oh Lady, Lady," last Thursday. She started on her third starring production for Realart on Wednesday. The feature has not yet been named. Maurice Campbell will direct. Douglas Bronston wrote the scenario.

William D. Taylor is "tapering off" production work on "The Witching Hour," his latest special. He will complete shooting in one more week. As he has cut the picture from day to day it will be ready for release in a short time.

"Eyes of the Heart" has been chosen as the name of the last Mary Miles Minter picture. It was adapted from the story, "Blindness," by Dana Bournet. Paul Powell directed.

Wanda Hawley has completed her latest "First Elopement," and will rest until the 27th when a new production is scheduled. The question of a director for the coming film has not yet been settled.

Pinecrest served as the "Ozark Mountains" in "The Witching Hour," William D. Taylor Realart Special, again demonstrating the great variety of scenery to be found in Southern California.

AT UNIVERSAL CITY

Upon cabled instructions from Carl Laemmle, who is now in Europe, to permit nothing to interfere with the pre-arranged program to furnish the exhibitors of the country 48 special star attractions during the current year, E. H. Goldstein, assistant to the president, made a trip to California, and had several conferences with Isadore Bernstein, producing manager, and Irving Thalberg, studio manager at Universal City.

As a result of these sessions production at Universal City has been speeded up considerably. New directors, additional stage space and more dressing rooms are being provided.

"The Flip Flapper," a society romance, will be directed by Rollin Sturgeon. John

WEST COAST EXCHANGE BOOKING CORPORATION FORMED

Space has been leased by the Gore Bros. and associates in the Knickerbocker Building, where an organization has been formed to handle all booking, buying, shipping, and other details pertaining to the chain of theatres that are now under the Gore-Lesser banner.

William Quinn, who has had a varied experience in this nature of work and who until recently was assistant general manager of the local Universal Film Exchange, has been engaged as manager for the new organization.

"WHAT WOMEN LOVE"

Sol Lesser presents Annette Kellerman in "What Women Love" at the Kinema. The production can scarcely be classified, since it combines much comedy and something of melodrama in a story obviously created for the primary purpose of exhibiting Miss Kellerman's unusual aquatic accomplishments. Her tank scenes are undoubtedly the most artistic yet shown in a motion picture. Aside from these facts, there is also considerable entertainment value in "What Women Love."

Wheeler Oakman's characterization of Willie St. John is really clever. It is altogether different from anything that we have yet seen him do.

Walter Long is very interesting as Capt. Buck Nelson, the also unclassified heavy. The audience doesn't know how to take the Captain.

Ralph Lewis is good as King Cotton, the star's father.

"Bull" Montana has a few scenes as Jose and Carl Ullman does Willie's rival.

The two women who represent the purity squad are very amusing.

Nate C. Watt directed.

"ROMAN CANDLES"

Master Pictures, Inc., presents its first multiple reel production, "Roman Candles," at the Philharmonic Auditorium. The story has a somewhat different slant on the old South American revolution situation. It contains an unusual amount of action and will prove very entertaining to its audiences. The direction is very good in spots. Little can be said for the photography, however.

J. Frank Glendon is excellent in the leading role. He plays the enthusiastic young American, Jack Arnold, typically. The part is better suited to Glendon than anything that we have seen him do in Garson productions.

Edward Kimball offers an amusing performance as John Arnold, Sr., maker of fireworks and money.

Phalpa Morgan, whose face is new to the screen, does Zola Gommorra satisfactorily. It is hard to believe a comparative amateur could possess the screen presence of Miss Morgan.

Frederick Starr has a few very interesting scenes as General Manuel Farrio, the blustering impostor.

Jack Pratt, who directed the production, is very good in the role of Lulz Fernandez, the typical Spanish heavy.

Hector Sarno is good as the Presidente.

Teddy controls a great portion of the heart interest as Energy. Teddy is the cleverest canine in the business.

Others in the cast are: Sidney D'Albrook, Felix Whitefeather and Marie James.

PAUL BRUNET SUCCEEDS CHARLES PATHE AS PRESIDENT OF FILM ORGANIZATION

Paul Brunet, for the last two years Vice-President and General Manager of the Pathe Exchange, Inc., at a meeting of the Board of Directors on Monday last, was elected to the presidency on the retirement of Charles Pathe, founder of that organization.

Daisy Robinson, who plays Aurea in "Iris," a Robertson-Cole feature starring Pauline Frederick.

Current Reviews

"A FULL HOUSE"

Bryant Washburn comes back with a "howling" success in "A Full House" at Grauman's. It almost, but not quite, obliterates the nightmarish memory of "What Happened to Jones," a last week's release. Anyway, this story is a fast moving adaptation with clever subtitles and an unusual farce cast.

The star is very well cast as the young newlywed lawyer.

Lois Wilson does his little wife Otilie prettily and tearfully.

Vera Gordon is clever as the interfering auntie.

Frank Jonasson is "the crook"—to the farce's betterment.

A wicked vamp and a few amusing policemen stir things up beautifully.

James Cruze outdid himself on the direction of this production.

CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG TIES UP WITH GORE BROTHERS-SOL LESSER

All future productions of Clara Kimball Young will be handled through the All-Star Features Distributors exchange. This is one of the independent exchanges which is controlled by Gore Brothers and Sol Lesser interests. This new holding will in no manner affect the general activities of the All-Star organization. Two film features made by Clara Kimball Young are now forthcoming. They are "Hush" and "Back from Paris."

"MILESTONES"

The Goldwyn adaptation of "Milestones" played at the California Theatre. The pictures does not compare with the stage production either in effective performances or situations. The cast is fairly interesting but the whole is strung together without much point. In many scenes the number of people within camera range is a bit bewildering.

Lewis Stone is very good as John Rhead at all ages. His type makes a great range of years possible for his interpretation.

Alice Hollister is much better as the Gertrude Rhead of 1885 than of the other two periods. She has much sympathy throughout, however.

Mary Alden is excellent as Rose Sibley Rhead. Her 1885 and 1912 characteristics are by far superior to the first one. She reminds us of her many and versatile past successes.

May Foster provides most of the comedy as Nancy Sibley. Her part is handled cleverly.

Boyd Irwin is good as Arthur Preece.

Harvey Clark and Lionel Belmore play Sam and Richard Sibley, brother and father respectively to Rose.

Gerald Pring has to his credit the varied small parts of Ned Pym, Lord Monkhurst and young Lord Monkhurst.

Correan Kirkham does the Hon. Muriel Pym, whose modern sweetheart, Richard Sibley, Jr., is played by Charles Mason.

Paul Scardon directed the production.

"LOVE MADNESS"

J. Parker Read, Jr.'s Louise Glaum production, "Love Madness," is playing at the Symphony. The picture is a typical Glaum vehicle, overflowing with Chinese dens, dope fiends and a generally heavy atmosphere. However, the cast is very good, and the star's followers will probably get considerable kick out of the whole. It has a more wholesome point than "Sex."

Miss Glaum is conspicuous for her absence in the photoplay's introduction, but she has many effective scenes later. The role of Mary Norwood, neglected wife, fails to suit her as well as does that of the woman who utilizes her wits among the "lower strata."

Matt Moore is not even interesting as Lloyd Norwood. In fact, his one pained expression throughout the piece is far from attractive.

Wm. Conklin has a few good scenes as "Joe, the Swell."

Noah Beery has one of his typical heavies in Jack Frost, the "big boss."

If Jack Nelson's direction is as good as his characterization of "Pussyfoot" Conner, we may expect much of the forthcoming Douglas McLean features.

William Millett plays Wm. B. Ashford, the attorney friend of the Norwoods.

Peggy Pierce has one of her customary roles in "Goldie" Lewis. Some of her scenes are overdone.

Irene Elliott (Yeager) is clever as the Kiddie. Little Irene knows how to play her scenes with much technique. She lacks, however, the unpleasant sophistication of most juvenile actresses.

Fernando Galvez is doing a character in "Passion Fruit," Doraldina's first Metro starring vehicle.

Edouard Trebaol is playing the leading role in "Fans" at the Goldwyn studio, and Marie Trebaol is doing one of the minister's daughters in "Black Beauty" at Vitagraph.

PICKUPS BY THE STAFF

GOVERNOR COX VISITS PICTURE LAND

Governor Cox of Ohio, Democratic candidate for the presidency, visited the Hollywood studios Tuesday, where he was entertained by the industry's foremost lights.

A representative "ship of state" set had been erected by the studio carpenters that the Governor might make his speech and have motion pictures taken of himself, in company with prominent stars and producers, at the helm. No trouble was spared to make his visit an interesting one.

In his necessarily short talk to the studio people and press, gathered for the occasion, Mr. Cox said that he was particularly impressed with the happy, carefree attitude which seemed to be held by the entire profession. He further observed that this same attitude had undoubtedly made it possible for the picture industry to provide the remainder of the world with wholesome entertainment during the dark war days so recently over.

Among those upon the studio reception committee were: A. J. Callaghan, Marshall Neilan, Katherine McDonald, Colleen Moore, Wesley Barry, Pat O'Malley, King Vidor, Bessie Love, and George Beban.

It is understood that Lew Cody and Robertson-Cole have severed connections.

Geraldine Farrar denies that she is to abandon the screen, which rumor has been afloat recently.

Since the completion of "Curtain," Katharine MacDonald's latest "First National" production, she has enjoyed a two weeks' vacation.

Frank Mayo has received an offer from a prominent New York theatrical producer to appear in the forthcoming revival of "Puddin' Head Wilson," the Mark Twain story.

Carlyle R. Robinson, manager of the publicity and advertising department of the Douglas Fairbanks Pictures Corporation, has announced his resignation from that office.

Robert Brunton left Los Angeles this week by motor on a combined business and pleasure trip to San Francisco. Upon his return the producer will start preparatory work on a new all-star feature.

Until a suitable vehicle can be secured for Pauline Frederick, she is enjoying a brief vacation. Henry King, as her next director, is busy perusing many books in search of material suitable to this star's requisites.

Another playwright has been added to the list of captives made by motion pictures. He is William Hurlbut, and his first to be filmed will be his comedy, "Made in Heaven." The Goldwyn company has selected as director Alfred E. Green, formerly director of the Jack Pickford features.

Roy S. Clements, who directed "King Spruce" and "The Tiger's Coat," for the Dial Film Company, is no longer with that organization, according to an announcement given out yesterday by President Otto Bollman. It is probable that Clements will direct for Louis B. Mayer.

Otto Bollman, president of the Dial Film Company, has purchased "The Albatross," a 180-foot steam yacht now lying in Los Angeles harbor, from Albert J. Fenway, Oregon banker and lumber man. The boat is a steel pleasure craft of 4100 tons, fitted with a dining room, salon and spacious cabins. It will be used by Mr. Bollman for both personal and picture purposes.

SPECIAL SET FOR DORALDINA'S DANCES

Madam Doraldina has caused a special set to be constructed on one of the Metro studio stages where she can rehearse and originate her new dance steps for "Passion Fruit," her first Metro starring picture, with her Hawaiian orchestra.

Analysis of Handwriting

By Fritzi Remont

In sending handwriting for analysis, readers will kindly remember that such should have proper placement on a decent sheet of paper, not just a scrap holding a signature. Don't ask for private readings or carbon copies, but send your friends additional copies of Camera! There is a charge for private readings, but those who enjoy the free analyses in Camera should be willing to interest their friends in the magazine, you know.

Write in ink and give me sufficient handwriting to analyse. The signature alone will be reproduced. Don't ask for a reading in the next issue because you must consider traveling time, the necessity for making a cut of the signature, and date on which the feature is required to be in the printer's hands.

NORMAN DAWN

Norman Dawn, the director of "The Adorable Savage," starring Edith Roberts, is one of the old-timers of the industry, as he began his career in 1905 as a cameraman. He photographed scenic pictures of the Andean volcanoes in South America and for seven years thereafter visited and filmed travel pictures of every place in the world except the two poles.

When the first long features were being made Mr. Dawn, then in Italy, turned his skill to double exposure photography and trick effects in which line of work he achieved a wide reputation.

Mr. Dawn invented a camera, many appliances, made discoveries in micro-cinematography and photo-chemistry, and introduced and patented methods and illusion effects which remain unequalled today.

For the past two years he has been directing at Universal, producing the Jewel pictures—"Sinbad, the Sailor," "The Eternal Triangle," "Two Men of Tinted Butte," and such features as "Lasca," "A Tokio Siren," "The Adorable Savage," "White Youth," etc., etc.

GRENBEAUX MAKES RECORD STILL COLLECTION

What is said to be a record number of stills made for one production have been accomplished by Paul Grenbeaux, the photographic expert who has to his credit work with more stars than any other still man in the business, in Allen Holubar's production, "Man-Woman-Marriage." This is Mr. Holubar's initial independent picture.

Mr. Grenbeaux is at present considering several offers, having recently declined the charge of a London laboratory.

PHOTOPLAYERS' EQUITY ANNUAL MEETING

The first Thursday in October is the date set for the yearly gathering of the local Photoplayers' Equity Association members.

The most important matter to be taken up will be the election of officers for the ensuing year.

This being the third anniversary, an interesting program is expected by way of celebration.

All members are expected to attend.

Jacques Jaccard has just celebrated the eighth anniversary of his association with Universal.

Eddie Polo is about to take another trip—this time to Texas—where he will spend a week or ten days with a big circus to make some additional scenes for his current serial, "The King of the Circus."

Dave Boraz, formerly with the Hank Mann comedy company, has been made head of the property department at the Burston studios. In addition to his duties at the studios Boraz is engaged in the construction of his own home in Sherman.

Morris R. Schlank, producer of the Hank Mann and Billy Bletcher comedies, is expected to arrive in Los Angeles this week from New York where he has spent several weeks negotiating new release contracts with the Arrow Film Corporation. An important announcement, it is said, relative to his plans for production this winter will be forthcoming from the producer upon his arrival here.

hand replete with upper loops on d and t, which betrays sensitiveness and giving way to the inspirations. Your shaped i-dots tell the same story. You are original, creative, proud, independent, hate a copy-cat. You'd rather make errors and find out something by your lone, than go along tame and tried ways. The Persian kitty slumbering on a silken cushion wearies of chicken bones and bits of fine fish, while the alley-rabbit discovers rare objects and has strange adventures in her nightly prowlings. You love luxury, but you won't sacrifice it to adventure. You enjoy being surprised. You've a bump of obstinacy, are very positive, can't be satisfied with mediocre attainments.

Your handwriting shows me self-sufficiency, very few intense intimacies, love of the pleasures of the body, belief in sense-testimony. You think very fast but often act deliberately, because you write a long, dashing t-bar and then combine the backhand with it—forward and backward movement, variability in itself, see? You're a good executive and I fear me you'll don the bifurcated garments and let Friend Husband take the rear seat of the marriage conveyance. You do hate to yield!

2. GEORGE B. FORSYTHE:

The antithesis of the former writer, Georgie, Porgie, Puddin' an' Pie, is gona-make the girlies cry. He's highly emotional, demonstrative in showing affection, lets his heart run away every day of his life, is too sympathetic, general and unselfish for his own financial good. He lets the iron men dig holes into his pockets. He's bright, hence the "long green" will grow from the seeds he plants, but it will be cut down early to gratify George's desires. He can make hay while the sun shines, but he doesn't like to HIT THE HAY early o' nights. He loves to roam, to have a good time, dance, enjoy music, tell jokes, give fling to the imagination. He thinks fast, acts on the spur of the moment, seldom repents of what he's lost and comforts himself with the thought that "it's all in a lifetime." He'll make a good actor, for he is the acme of self-expression emotionally. He would succeed just as well as musician or public entertainer. George Forsythe is an extra now, but no one with that amount of energy, eager desire to succeed, hustle, creativeness, good wit and pep could possibly stay in the background long and you may watch for his name in caps before another harvest season rolls around. George loves

Professional Notes

Colton and Douglas Doty are the authors of the story and the title role will be played by Gladys Walton.

Under the direction of Norman Dawn, Edith Roberts will begin work on "White Youth," by Clara Beranger and Forrest Halsey.

Carmel Myers is working on her third feature, "The Orchid," under the direction of Marcel de Sano.

Hoot Gibson has completed "Marryin' Marion," under the direction of Albert Russell and has started work on another western, "Dead Right," under the supervision of Edward Laemmle.

Eddie Polo is at work on the ninth and tenth episodes of his autobiographical serial, "The King of the Circus," under the supervision of J. P. McGowan.

Elmo Lincoln has reached the final episodes of his melodrama, "The Flaming Disc," produced by Robert F. Hill.

Under the direction of William Watson a company of Universal players including Robert Anderson and Joe Moore have left for La Jolla, where the opening scenes of a five-reel feature called "The Hotel Hermit," will be filmed.

TOURNEUR COMPANY IN YOSEMITE

Director Clarence L. Brown, who made Maurice Tourneur's production, "The Great Redeemer," and who is directing "The Last of the Mohicans" with Tourneur, is in the Yosemite Valley with the company, making fight scenes for the Cooper story.

Among the players who are in the north are Albert Roscoe, Henry Woodward, Wallace Beery, Lillian Hall and Barbara Bedford.

They will be gone for a week getting exteriors.

Milton Menasco has just been signed by Maurice Tourneur as art director for Tourneur productions, succeeding Floyd Miller, who resigned last week.

HANK MANN COMPANY TO RESUME WORK THIS WEEK

According to word received this week from Yosemite, Hank Mann, comedy star, will return to Los Angeles from the Northern resort in a few days to resume work before the camera. The comedian went to Yosemite recently at the request of his physician following a nervous collapse which he was suffering as a result of overwork at the studios. During Mann's absence production on his pictures has been suspended.

AT VITAGRAPH

Chester Bennett is starting Earle Williams' next feature, taken from "Diamonds Adrift," a magazine story. The director and star have just returned from Catalina where they studied the script before starting production at the Vitagraph studios.

The filming of "Black Beauty" proper was commenced this week under the direction of David Smith. All animal scenes with the horses alone have been completed and now the production of the story of the human characters has begun. Jean Paige appears in the principal role with James Morrison opposite.

Antonio Moreno will finish his serial, "The Veiled Mystery," in two weeks, and will then start his first feature.

Joe Ryan is back from location at Campo, Calif., and under the direction of William Bertram is filming interiors for his western serial.

approbation and encouragement and we don't mind giving him both. He has a quick temper but an easy disposition, so he's well liked by many friends.

3. NELLA ATREB:

Here we have the eternal feminine, coquettish, sympathetic, with mental dash and good style, fond of culture, very subtle, doesn't tell what she thinks, but what she thinks people would like to hear. That is why she'll be a social success. Note the way Nella ties the A in a knot and puts the t-bar right above the letter and resting on it—a combination of secretiveness, caution and suspicion. She is a breezy soul, spontaneous, imaginative, always getting up something new. She is impatient and quick, doesn't like to sit long at a task, would rather be a mermaid or a worshipper at the shrine of Terpsichore.

She's intuitive, generous, sensitive, creative, enthusiastic, and deft-muscled. Any game or sport is readily acquired by this Scandinavian girl. She has wit, rapid inspirations, is extravagant, can't buy or manage or invest wisely, so will have to annex a spouse with "siller in his pawket"—for she hates poverty, poor quality and stingily set table.

4. J. ELDON COMPTON:

This laddie played opposite Eugene O'Brien in "The Figurehead," so perhaps fans may be able to discover whether he's been correctly diagnosed herein, for I don't know him from a Blue JAY plaster and merely study his writing. Like said plaster, he'll stick. That he's sure to succeed in any line I state boldly. He is courageous, writes a fighting C, a good strong t-bar with courage of convictions back of it, and a high d and t, showing conscientiousness, sensitivity, pride of achievement. He is a very quick worker, has fine mental and physical vitality and endurance, should be in movement work always. He's critical, discerning, punctual, follows a hobby. He is unusually cautious and secretive for so impulsive a being. Yes, he has histrionic talent, plus a quick temper, talkativeness combined with aforesaid uncommunicativeness when occasion demand discretion. He loves elegance, shows good taste in matters sartorial, is kind and unselfish yet alive to his own best interests. Writes a successful hand from business standpoint.

Marion Morgan, creator and director of the Morgan dances, will build herself a home in the classic Greek style in Beverly Hills.

Shooting from the Face of a Glacier

BY H. C. BRYANT

A series of interesting experience; befell the members of the party just returned from a location trip to Glacier and Yellowstone National Parks. The enterprise was under the direction of the Sunset Burrud Company, and the party consisted of Mr. L. J. Burrud and Mr. H. C. Bryant.

The trip to and from the parks was made in a Leach Biltwell, and covered the period from July 15th to September 15th. The excitement and dangerous incidents of the trip are vividly told by Mr. Bryant, cameraman, who says in part:

"For almost a month we traveled by pack train, and had several rather thrilling and unusual experiences. While out on the face of Sexton Glacier, a slide occurred less than fifty feet from the point where the camera stood, and hundreds of tons of ice and snow went roaring over the cliff into the valley, 3000 feet below. A new crevice opened between us and the main body of the glacier allowing the part we were on to slip forward three feet, the whole thing trembling so that we were knocked off our feet.

"As we were working with the Blackfeet

Indians, we became very well acquainted with the tribe, and were taken in as members by what is known as the Sweat Lodge ceremony.

"While in the Yellowstone, I was at one time shooting a close-up of the crater of Old Faithful geyser during an eruption. Suddenly the wind shifted, throwing the entire flood of boiling water and steam on the spot where I stood with the camera. Naturally I took to my heels without any great loss of time, leaving the camera on the spot, where it stood hidden from sight for ten minutes. Fortunately, the camera withstood the ordeal, and the incident occasioned no actual misfortune."

The above incidents prove the actual danger often experienced by our cinematographers in accomplishing the American public's entertainment.

Los Angeles Has Fastest Street Car Service In The World

Tremendous Asset to Motion Picture Industry

Over fifty million dollars is spent annually in Los Angeles by the motion picture industry, and about ninety or one hundred million goes into the producing of motion pictures, which industry has helped to make Los Angeles not only the fastest growing city in the world, but a city far surpassing any other in traffic and transportation problems.

Los Angeles affords the most efficient and wonderful railroad transportation service anywhere on the globe, known as the Pacific Electric Railway System.

This system has been of vital interest to the motion picture industry, for, without its co-operation and working facilities, millions of dollars would have been lost to Los Angeles.

Over one hundred thousand people are supported by the motion picture industry, and most of these workers are carried over the Pacific Electric lines to the different studios. Notwithstanding the fact that thousands of employees must be carried to the city during the same hours, on schedule, the picture man is carried each morning to his work on time.

The Hollywood car line, to make this possible, arranges 15 runs per hour.

Boston, Pittsburg, and hundreds of cities throughout America, owing to the high cost of labor and material, are charging from 8 to 10 cents car fare. The Pacific Electric lines in Los Angeles are giving the best service in America for 6 cents.

The company was unable to get new cars built during the war, which has been a great handicap, with the tremendous gain in population, but let us say that we are proud to live in a city that affords such car service as is ours. The motion picture industry congratulates the local transportation company on its efficiency, courtesy, and fairness at all times.

Consider the factors that make it attractive:

Weigh carefully the factors of strength found in the Sutter Basin Company Land Mortgage 8% Serial Gold Bonds—and you will agree with us that it is difficult to imagine a sounder, more secure investment.

In the first place these bonds are based upon solid land values. The 55,122 acres in Sutter County, belonging to the Sutter Basin Company, are valued at $17,000,000. Mortgage upon this property is preceded by a reclamation assessment, the Company's share of which is $3,850,000. The entire assessment has been funded into a bond issue whose earliest maturity is after the latest maturity of these bonds.

This land is very fertile and productive. The soil is a silt formation deposited by years of overflowing by neighboring rivers. Immense levees or dikes prevent further overflowing. Practically all of the land is under irrigation and profitable cultivation.

This alone would be an attractive investment, but added to it is another feature that makes it doubly attractive: the personal and unconditional guarantee of J. Ogden Armour. Without the land this guarantee would be an attractive feature. Together, the security of the bond is unassailable.

Think the matter over, and if you have money to invest, decide now to call at our office in person or to write or phone for full information today. Let us lay before you the various details of security, tax exemptions, available denominations and maturities for your consideration.

Have you made reservations for your October funds? Better talk it over with us today. No obligation—we are glad to serve you.

Thru Fire And Water The De Brie Proves Its Supremacy

Take time to read the following letter, and be convinced:

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 21, 1920.

G. Gennert, 208 South Spring St.
Gentlemen:

In response to your request for a statement of the performance of the De Brie camera used on my trip to Glacier and Yellowstone National Parks, I will say that it worked 100 per cent perfect.

We traveled over five hundred miles by pack train with the camera on a mule's back. One day I was climbing over a glacier with the outfit and slipped, dropping the camera into a crack in the ice forty feet deep, where it lay at a temperature of fifty below zero for nearly two hours before we got it out. Another time, at the head waters of the Missouri river, I was cranking from the bow of a boat when we hit a snag and off I went, and the camera too. In Yellowstone Park, while taking a close-up of a geyser "playing," the wind shifted and I had to run without stopping for the camera, and for ten minutes it was hid in boiling water and steam. However, the splendid construction of the De Brie withstood all these tests and not a foot of film was lost. Since using the De Brie I have never had a bit of static, scratches, buckles or any other of the common camera troubles.

Sincerely yours. H. C. BRYANT.

DE BRIE

The Bloodhounds Are Loose To Investigate New Picture Companies

After a period of comparative calm, it seems that the studios are again about to be attacked by that most exasperating of all pests, the program space seller. Indeed, if present indications be correct, representatives of some half dozen occasions will bear down upon us together, within the week.

The common object of the species is to collect money from the actors in return for certain space in entertainment programs of the various organizations.

This space will be disposed of under the cloak of personal publicity, which the modern screen actor recognizes as an absolute requirement to his success. That a dance program might, by any chance, prove of value as an advertising medium for the actor is an absurdity, since, even provided that the material therein is noticed, the number of copies printed must of necessity be ridiculously small.

The solicitor may win over a few who see through the above point by waxing eloquent over the worthy cause to which the money thus collected will go, etc., as a feature of this or that benefit performance. In reality, about 50 per cent of the actor's fading cash is destined to find its home in the pocket of his persuader, since in no instance has the last named been discovered in an act of painful sacrifice for the ideal which he is wont to set forth with such gusto. Instead he robs the profession under the protective name of the organization contemplating the entertainment, and then beats the other end by swallowing the profit and cheerfully deserting his employers to face the displeasure of his victims.

Some time ago when the Assistant Directors' Association held its second annual barn dance, a precedent was set against accepting professional notices for the program, and the entire industry will forever be grateful to the A. D. A. boys for the courtesy. Other bodies should benefit by the unusual success of their affair and forbid any attachment that is liable to become an annoyance to an already overly generous class of people.

As for outside projects, such as the well remembered from last year, "Who's Who"—they have at least taught the gullible much. There is no room for the irresponsible "near crook" in our studios. The actor who falls for his line is letting himself in for many losses, since it is impossible to discriminate.

The industry should not encourage further encroachment upon its personal liberty by countenancing such agents as are already upon the ground.

A Vigilance Committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry has been appointed in New York to investigate new picture stock propositions. Already much evidence has been compiled against several outfits, and the result promises to be lively. In regard to the committee's intentions, Variety says:

"It is proposed to give the facts turned up in the investigations the fullest publicity in the trade press, the fan magazines and in the daily newspapers in all cases, and to proceed against questionable enterprises of the stock flotation variety by legal means where prosecution is made practicable under the laws of the various States, such as in Kansas and other Middle Western States where a 'blue sky' law is on the statute books. This is in addition to the dissemination of propaganda and exchange of information between editors, prosecuting officers and the like.

"The committee does not concern itself with the methods of selling or trading in the established picture securities, but devotes its attention exclusively to the flotation of new enterprises. The original announcement of the committee's formation made it appear that the body would make inquiry into 'stock manipulation,' which creates the mistaken impression that it was Wall Street which was under examination.

The committee was made up of James R. Quirk, chairman; Paul Gulick, Nathan Vidaver, of the association's legal committee; Martin J. Quigley, Lesley Mason and Fred Beecroft."

Official of Actors' Association Resigns

John Lancaster, manager and founder of the Actors' Association, has resigned his position, according to an announcement made at the last meeting of that organization, Thursday evening. The information came as a surprise to many who have long looked upon Mr. Lancaster and the association as one. The former manager, however, desires a rest after his service.

Ernest Joy, a well-known actor, will take the position thus vacated.

LIONEL BARRYMORE TO FILM "THE PROFLIGATE"

"The Truth About Husbands" is the title of the first of a series of three special productions which will be adapted from the plays by Lionel Barrymore for distribution by Associated First National Pictures, Inc. "The Truth About Husbands" is the film version of "The Profligate." The first title, under which it will be released, was decided upon by Whitman Bennett, producer of the Barrymore series.

NORMAN MANNING PRODUCTIONS

Norman Manning, formerly general manager of the Balboa studios, Long Beach, and later manager of Pathe productions, has organized his own company under the name of the Norman Manning Productions and has leased space at the National studios, Hollywood, where work commenced last week on his initial picture.

Slim Summerville and Bobbie Dunn are being featured. Joseph Bordeaux is directing, Hap Depew is cameraman, and George Gray is the assistant director. Mr. Manning, it is stated, will supervise production.

WILLAT TO DO "PARTNERS OF THE TIDE" AS SECOND INDEPENDENT OFFERING

With the completion of his first independent production, "Down Home," taken from the book "Dabney Todd," Irvin V. Willat and his brother, C. A. ("Doc") Willat, spent considerable time in the selection of the next story to be produced by their organization.

Joseph C. Lincoln's sea story, "Partners of the Tide," has finally been chosen.

NEW COMPANY GETS UNDER WAY

K. Hoddy Mulligan announces that the initial plans of the Union Film Company are well under way, and that production will start next week. Actors, directors, scenarists and the technical staff have been assigned their parts and duties. Studio space is now under negotiation. The company has also taken the name K. Hoddy Productions and will hereafter be known by this title.

The productions will include two-reel western tableau features and two-reel comedies. Jack Livingston is the featured player in the westerns. The comedies will be headed by Alexander Alt and Helen Howell.

WILSON TO STAR HOXIE IN COMEDY- DRAMA

Ben Wilson announces that he will feature Jack Hoxie, western serial star, in a series of western comedy-dramas.

Francis Ford, who directed the last five episodes of "Thunderbolt Jack," Hoxie's current serial, soon to be published by the Arrow Film Corporation, will direct the first of the features, which will be "A Man's Country," adapted from the Arthur Chapman magazine story, of the same title, by Reaves Eason.

The continuity of "A Man's Country" has been completed and actual production will commence as soon as "Thunderbolt Jack" has been finished, which will be in about three weeks, according to Mr. Wilson.

FREDERICK STORY SELECTED

"The Mistress of Shenstone," by Florence L. Barclay, author of "The Rosary," has been selected by Director Henry King for Pauline Frederick's next cinema vehicle, production on which has already been commenced.

DE HAVEN READY FOR WORK

Carter De Haven arrived from New York last Thursday with a new contract for two additional comedy features to be released by Associated First National Pictures, Inc.

The first will be an adaptation of "The Girl in the Taxi," in which Mr. and Mrs. De Haven appeared in New York during its stage presentation by Al Woods several years ago. Mr. De Haven was a collaborator on the original book.

Two features were started at Universal City during the past week, "Out of the Sunset," directed by Stuart Paton, and "The Flip Flapper," supervised by Rollin Sturgeon.

CURWOOD FILM TO BE SEEN

Associated First National Pictures, Inc., announces that James Oliver Curwood's "Nomads of the North" will be released next month. This production was directed by David Hartford.

Lon Chaney will be seen in the leading role, and Betty Blythe will appear in the leading feminine role.

"DINTY" GOES EAST

With the negative of Marshall Neilan's latest production, "Dinty," as his companion, Pete Smith, publicity director for the Marshall Neilan Productions, left for New York yesterday.

According to the original plans, Mr. Neilan had intended making the trip East at this time, but owing to many delays incurred in the finishing of "Dinty," the producer departed for Montana to begin the filming of his next production, "Pards."

TREASURER OF MACDONALD PICTURES RETURNS EAST

After viewing the shooting of the initial scenes of Katherine MacDonald's eighth First National production, J. G. Bachmann, treasurer of the Katherine MacDonald Pictures Corporation, left this week for New York. Bachmann has been in Los Angeles for several weeks conferring with B. P. Fineman, vice president and general manager of the company.

"THE ADORABLE SAVAGE"

"The Adorable Savage," a Universal production starring Edith Roberts, is running at Tally's Broadway. The picture is a romance of Fiji and has wonderful scenic effects throughout. They are, however, injured by poor photography. The story is a more or less stereotyped and unnatural thriller, which drags somewhat in spots.

Miss Roberts' work as Marama, the educated half-caste, is satisfactory, although her attempt at Oriental dancing is rather sad.

Jack Perrin plays Templeton, the handsome juvenile, which part merely adds the romance.

Noble Johnson is well cast as Ratu Madri. He has several good scenes.

Dick Cummings has an interesting bit as the demoralized white planter.

Arthur Jervis does Frank Maddon well, and Lucille Moulton is his native wife, Moala.

Lilly Phillips plays Akanesi, and we notice Arthur Jasmine in a few scenes.

"AN OLD FASHIONED BOY"

Charles Ray plays Grauman's in the Ince production, "An Old Fashioned Boy." The picture suffers horribly by contrast with "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway," which is also released here this week. It apparently was made in a rush and none of the cast has given any thought to the parts in hand. The picture unwisely includes slapstick and the action is jerky.

Mr. Ray does not offer his usual entertaining characterization, due largely to his poor role.

Ethel Shannon is exceedingly uninteresting as Betty Graves, the feminine lead.

Hal Cooley does the heavy and Alfred Allen is the Doctor.

Wade Boteler provides considerable action for the star as Herbert, the irate husband.

Grace Morse plays Sybil, the mother of Violet (Gloria Joy), Herbie (Frankie Lee) and the Baby (Virginia Brown). The children are all good.

SENNETT COMPLETES LAST FIRST NATIONAL COMEDY

Mack Sennett announces the completion of "Love, Honor and Behave," his second and last five-reel comedy for First National release. The negative will leave for the East this week.

"45 MINUTES FROM BROADWAY"

The Kinema features Charles Ray in "45 Minutes from Broadway," his first independent production, released by First National. The stage success is well adapted, and the cast is good.

The star, in the role of "Kid" Burns, the part originally played by George Cohan, has an entirely different line of work from that which was responsible for his rise to stardom. It is, however, more or less of a relief from the farmer boy action, and Mr. Ray employs all of his youthful charm in the interpretation of the "Kid," with an unusually refreshing result.

Dorothy Devore, as Mary Jane Jenkins, has the world beat for the real thing in kit-tish ingenues. Her work is very clever, and she makes an excellent opposite for Ray.

Eugenie Besserer walked away with most of the scenes in which she appears as Mrs. David Dean. Miss Besserer is an actress!

May Foster has some good comedy as Mrs. Purdy. She does one very clever scene with the star, in which the music only is provided.

Hazel Howell plays Flora Dora Dean, and Harry Myers is the dark villain, Daniel Cronin.

William Courtright is good as the butler. Joseph de Grasse handled the direction very well.

Edward M. Thiery of the "News Enterprise Association" has been visiting Pliny W. Horn, who has now recovered from the accident which he received in the Universal expedition in Africa.

"THE RIGHT TO LOVE"

George Fitzmaurice offers something different in "The Right to Love" at Grauman's Rialto for an indefinite run. The story has unusually beautiful exterior shots and sets, and the season's best photography. Much of the picture's attractiveness may be credited to the art director, whose regard for detail accomplishes some real effects.

Mae Murray is more than appealing as the defenseless Lady Falkland. Here again detail is observed to advantage, for Miss Murray's gowns do much to assist in the establishment of her sympathetic role.

David Powell utilizes all of his aesthetic subtleness in the role of Col. Loring, the Knight from the Land of Heart's Desire.

Alma Tell is successful in making of Lady Alice, the haughty, self-contained Ice Lady of the little mother's fairy tale.

Holmes Herbert is well cast and thoroughly detestable as Sir Archibald Falkland.

Little Archie is interpreted very cleverly by Lawrence Johnston. The child is evidently one who has had much screen experience, but his manner is absolutely unsophisticated and at no time is his action forced.

Frank Losee provides much of interest as the Marshal to the Sultan.

Macey Harlam plays Prince Stani.

George Fitzmaurice personally directed the production.

LESSER PREPARING TO GO EAST WITH BEBAN FILM

Upon his return from San Francisco, Sol Lesser plans to go to New York with the print of "One Man in a Million," George Beban's latest. Mr. Beban will possibly accompany Lesser on the Eastern trip. Distribution plans for this feature will not be settled until Lesser reaches New York.

MAYFLOWER TO RELEASE "ATHALIE" IN OCTOBER

Mayflower announces that the adaptation of Robert Chambers' "Athalie," which was directed by Sidney Franklin, with Sylvia Breamer in the leading role, has been titled and assembled. The production will be known as "Unseen Forces" when it is released by Associated First National Pictures next month.

"THE PENALTY"

The screen version of "The Penalty," by Gouverneur Morris, plays at the California Theatre. This is probably the most successful Eminent Authors adaptation yet made by the Goldwyn Company.

The cast is for the most part exceptional.

Lon Chaney steals the picture outright with his wonderful characterization of Blizard, the human fiend, who, later repenting, is forced to pay the penalty.

Ethel Grey Terry's performance as Rose is very good. Miss Terry's stage experience will stand her in good stead with her picture work, which promises much.

Charles Clary offers a characteristic interpretation as the Doctor.

Kenneth Harlan plays Wilnot, and Claire Adams does Barbara. Neither role particularly impresses. If Miss Adams possesses sufficient life to accomplish a spirited ingenue, that part of her personality fails to screen.

James Mason does the small part of Pete remarkably. His underworld characters are becoming known.

Edouard Trebaol is cast as Bubbles, the bellboy, and Milton Ross does Litchenstein.

Wallace Worsley directed the production.

ALLEN HOLUBAR

Allen Holubar, who possesses the distinction of being one of the most successful directors of filmdom, is also one of the youngest. Born in San Francisco August 3rd, 1889, Holubar went on the legitimate stage with the old Alcazar Stock Company at an early age. Before leaving that company he had played leads in all the principal cities of the West Coast.

Holubar later was leading man in the Belasco production, "The Girl of the Golden West"; the Wm. Brady production, "The Man of the Hour," and the original Henry Savage play, "Everywoman." Leaving the legitimate stage, Holubar's initial appearance on the screen was as Capt. Nemo in "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea."

Following this production he became a director, with Miss Dorothy Phillips as star. He directed this charming star in "Paid in Advance," "A Soul for Sale," "The Mortgaged Wife," "The Talk of the Town" and other plays.

Three of Miss Phillips' most successful plays were written by Mr. Holubar. They are "The Right to Happiness," "The Heart of Humanity," and "Once to Every Woman." The latter will be offered soon at the Kinema Theatre.

In collaboration with Olga Scholl, Mr. Holubar has now written and produced his "Man, Woman—Marriage," a modern, heart-interest story with a series of spectacular views. This picture, which is the initial Allen Holubar First National release, has consumed six months in the making. Those who have seen it in the cutting room declare that it will be a sensation of picture history.

An exact replica of the Alexander Hotel in Honolulu has been constructed at the Metro studios for scenes in "The Passion Fruit," Mme. Doraldina's initial starring vehicle.

MANN STARTS NEW PICTURE

Hank Mann resumed his activity before the camera this week after a several weeks' rest at Yosemite, where he sojourned to recover from a nervous breakdown. ### SCHLANK RETURNS

Schlank, producer of the Hank Mann and Billy Bletcher comedies, arrived in Los Angeles this week after an extended visit in New York, where he negotiated new release contracts and transacted other business in the interest of his forthcoming productions. ## Analysis of Handwriting

By Fritzi Remont

In sending handwriting for analysis, readers will kindly remember that such should have proper placement on a decent sheet of paper, not just a scrap holding a signature. Don't ask for private readings or carbon copies, but send your friends additional copies of Camera! There is a charge for private readings, but those who enjoy the free analyses in Camera should be willing to interest their friends in the magazine, you know.

Write in ink and give me sufficient handwriting to analyse. The signature alone will be reproduced. Don't ask for a reading in the next issue because you must consider traveling time, the necessity for making a cut of the signature, and date on which the feature is required to be in the printer's hands.

1. KATHLEEN KIRKHAM:

Here's a signature with vivid personality and individuality, don't you say so? There is nothing like the copybook style in Miss Kirkham's writing; she has originated odd strokes of the pen, has given energy and great life to her K and the t-bars, and shows that optimistic spirit which makes long strokes and words climb up at the right—just as Kathleen has made a long climb up the ladder of fame. You see, we hear her own company will soon be producing and releasing through First National.

It takes spirit and dash to accomplish something in this world, and the strong, virile writing betrays resistance, insistence, courage and belief in herself, no matter what obstacles Fate may put in Miss Kirk-

MEMORIAL SERVICE A GREAT SUCCESS

The Memorial held last Sunday at the Brunton studio for Robert Harron, Olive Thomas, Ormer Locklear, Clarine Seymour, and other members of the profession who have passed on recently, proved a great success, due entirely to the kindness of the many who assisted the idea.

Mr. Brunton provided the rooms, seats and altar on stage two, and Sid Grauman lent his entire orchestra and the Metropolitan Ladies Quartette for the occasion. Mr. Dick Ferris very generously placed several of his Yellow taxis at the disposal of the committee to be used for the transportation of the musicians to and from the theatre. The Lasky studio also provided cars, as did James La Verne, of the Screenland Magazine, and the Vitagraph and Metro plants gave over their trucks to haul the orchestra instruments.

William D. Taylor delivered a truly wonderful oration in memory of the departed ones, which was greatly appreciated by their friends and relatives, many of whom were present.

The boys' choir from St. Paul's pro-Cathedral was responsible for some excellently rendered anthems.

Reverend Neal Dodd officiated at the service, which was arranged for by a committee from the Actor's Association, composed of Raymond Cannon, chairman; Dot Farley, Mrs. Vin Moore, Roy Stewart, Joseph Dowling and Louis Fitzroy.

MAURICE TOURNEUR ILL

Ben Turpin celebrates this month the fifty-third anniversary of his birth.

Buck Jones, who was shot in the arm during the filming of a scene, is back at work.

They say here Sennett is starting features. At least two well known cameramen have been offered positions to go west.

Thomas Ince, through the C. B. Price concern, has been making screen tests of many stage players whom he intends to take West to star in pictures.

A lot of studios are in the making here. At least ten are in the course of construction, mostly in Long Island City. Jersey seems about doomed as far as studios go.

Metro has stopped all Eastern production for the present, at least. Goldwyn is doing very little, as is Vitagraph. Famous Players are idle and lots of players are inactive. The money shortage has things mixed up some.

ing the cast are Louise Lorraine, Robert Anderson and Joe Moore.

Two new productions will be started next week, "White Youth," directed by Norman Dawn and starring Edith Roberts, and "Gold and the Woman," a tale of the Yukon, directed by Reeves Eason.

Lyons and Moran have completed "Fixed by George," the fourth of their five-reel comedy features. In two weeks they will start on "One Bright Idea," from the pen of Edgar Franklin.

Eddie Polo and his supporting company in "The King of the Circus," has gone to Catalina for a week, where he will film a sequence of daring under-water stuff. Eddie declares he will be disappointed if his current serial does not contain at least twenty distinct thrills to each episode.

AT VITAGRAPH

Earle Williams this week commenced his first feature taken from "Diamonds Adrift," a magazine story by Frederick J. Jackson, under the direction of Chester Bennett. Beatrice Burnham plays opposite the star. The story will be filmed along the Pacific coast, where the original romance was built upon a tale of the coastwise shipping.

William Duncan is finishing the fifth and sixth episodes of his current serial, "Fighting Fate." He will leave soon for location along the coast where a sequence aboard a houseboat will be taken.

Larry Semon is in the midst of "The Hunter," his next special comedy.

Antonio Moreno has returned from Catalina Island and San Pedro where he took final scenes in his current serial, "The Veiled Mystery." He will finish at the studio in a few more days, and will then take a brief rest before starting a feature production.

Joe Ryan and his cowboys are at the studio for interiors, but will shortly return to Campo, Calif., where a ranch has been obtained for use throughout "The Purple Riders."

Jimmy Aubrey is starting another special comedy under the direction of Jess Robbins.

LOVE COMPANY TO GO TO ARIZONA

Arthur Berthelet, Bessie Love's director, is making preparations to take his star and members of the company to Arizona, to film great groups of cattle on the ranges and other scenes requiring the rugged background described in "Penny of Tophill Trail," which will form the basis of Bessie's next picture.

WARNER PRODUCTION STARTS

H. B. Warner has started work in "The Checked Suit" at the Hampton Studio. The story was written by Freeman Putney, Jr., and the screen version is by Fred Myton. Robert Thornby will direct, and Victor Milner photographer.

NEW COMPANY STARTS AT HERMANN STUDIOS

The Van Curen Productions Company closed a contract with the Hermann Film Corporation on September 28th whereby the Van Curen company will immediately start interior work on "The Waif of the Wreck" at the Hermann Studios. The production is founded on the book of the same name by Van Curen, and the company has been shooting scenes on the Sacramento River for the past two weeks.

Ted Dixon is being starred in the picture and Norris Johnson has the leading feminine role.

AT THE LASKY STUDIO

William de Mille begins work this week on his new production, "What Every Woman Knows," adapted by Olga Printzlau from Sir James M. Barrie's play, in which Maude Adams starred on the stage. Lois Wilson will play Miss Adams' role in the screen version, while Conrad Nagel will have the opposite part.

George Melford has been working all week at the Lasky Ranch on scenes of "The Faith Healer." Milton Sills is playing the leading male role with Ann Forrest opposite.

It is now announced that instead of Charles Van Loan's story, which Wallace Reid was to have done next, he will do an adaptation of "The Daughter of a Magnate," by Frank L. Spearman, scenarized by Eugene B. Lewis. The Van Loan story will probably be the following picture. Frank Urson will direct.

Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle is still at work on "Brewster's Millions," under Joseph Henabery's direction.

Cecil B. de Mille is still working on "Forbidden Fruit." He will probably go on location shortly for some of the concluding scenes of the picture.

Sir Gilbert Parker will shortly arrive on the Pacific Coast to arrange for the production of one of his original stories at the Lasky Studio. Another to arrive shortly at the Lasky Studio will be Penrhyn Stanlaws, the illustrator and artist, who has been studying the technique of pictures at the New York studios of the company. The exact details of his work here have not yet been made public.

MARION FAIRFAX SIGNS WITH NEILAN

Under her new contract with Marshall Neilan, Marion Fairfax will prepare the scenarios of the next four Marshall Neilan Productions, which will be released by First National. After that, she enters into a working arrangement with Mr. Neilan in the production of Marion Fairfax Productions. These pictures will feature the work of the author and will be original stories or scenarios based on stories that have already been published in national magazines.

Florence Vidor is co-featured with House Peters in the forthcoming Thos. H. Ince production, "Magic Life." This is the second picture for which she was loaned to Ince by King Vidor Productions in the past three months.

"The Sky Pilot," from Ralph Connor's novel, will be the first picture made in King Vidor's new studio.

MAY ALLISON TO STAR IN NEW WILLIAMS DRAMA

"Are Wives to Blame?" a screen version of Ben Ames Williams' latest story, has been selected as May Allison's next Metro starring vehicle, according to a statement just made by Bayard Veiller, chief of production at the West Coast studios.

The screen version of the story has just been completed by Edward Lowe, Jr.

HORNE DIRECTING INCE SPECIAL

James W. Horne has been assigned to an important directorial post at the Ince studios. Mr. Horne is at present engaged in directing "The Bronze Bell," a Thos. H. Ince special for Paramount.

Margaret Cullington has just finished "A Schoolhouse Scandal" with the Special Pictures Corporation.

Kathleen Kirkham is finishing the organization of her own company and will produce at the Hermann Studios on Wilshire boulevard. The working title of her first picture will be announced soon.

ham's path. It is an easy-going, rounded handwriting, but the strength of it betrays that you must never go the limit with this independent bit of girlhood. She will stand for a lot, but when her patience has run—she's simply THROUGH. Her creativeness is tremendous—so that she would succeed in many other lines if not an actress. This trait gives her style and individuality in clothing herself and others. It shows her imagination, too, and her flights of fancy. She will be a dreamer—but a common-sensible worker besides. She is self-sacrificing, but not a mental doormat.

2. HELEN WRIGHT:

Here's a girl who has wasted reams of paper trying to improve her handwriting, she says. Well, Helen, RIGHT here let us say that you ought to be grateful for the sort of hand you do write. You're spontaneity itself, are imaginative, very quick in perceiving things, have a fine sense of humor, are a cheery soul to have around the house, seldom complain, are sure to take the short cut to solution of problems, and have enough versatility to fit you for a half dozen good vocations. You do lack will power and are too dawgawn good natured, so that I'm rather afraid of your becoming a jack of all trades rather than a specialist. It's true, you have artistic insight, great love of beauty, quite a lot of individuality, independence, inspiration, creativeness and pep, but you are impatient and too eager to get somewhere, so you won't like HARD roads to success. You would make a very good character analyst and people don't fool you with their little bluffs and insincerities. You must be a very graceful, lithe dancer, and you're handy with your hands, too.

3. IRENE RADCLIFFE:

Another English girl—you'll notice that the British give us strong lassies, with fine vitality, lots of common sense, courage, and the force of their convictions. This one underscores her name like a man—believes in herself, isn't afraid of tackling a difficult proposition, is versatile, unselfish, secretive—h'm, er, reticent, I mean—but self-possessed and pleasant to meet. She will never form inferior friendships. You've got to know something and be above the common herd to please Irene. She soars high, is ambitious, idealistic, musical, artistic in her tastes, yet always able to lend a hand in housework, too. She likes prompt action, doesn't want to be bossed or nagged, has a quick temper, flies at conclusions, likes or dislikes you on first meeting, and is very critical, a stickler for order and form, quite proud, self-sufficient, intelligent and all-around clever, deucedly so!

4. RUTH STOLLMACK:

Now here we have the sort of girl who succeeds in making many friendships, who is popular at summer resorts, who made a good showing at school, and who is intensely interested in having a good time wherever she goes. She is quite musical—talented in that direction—would make a pretty good comedienne, and should study for that end. She has a sense of humor and an emotional nature, a talent for dancing and gymnastics, and would surely rise from the "merry, merry" of a musical show in less than a month after entering it. She should devote her talents to merry-making. She may learn to write epigrams or jokes—there is originality in the writing as well as the humor which causes one upper stroke of y to rise above the other.

But Ruth has the same old failing—ambition and not enough will and perseverance. She wants things to come by inspiration and in an easy way. She is not willing to sacrifice joy and change of scene for home-staying and hard work at the piano or some other instrument. She takes life too lightly.

She has more mental than physical vitality, as the light writing denotes. She can readily make money, is far-sighted and deductive, smart. She would make a rapid-fire typist or accountant, but both fields are unsuitable as she is yearning for self-expression and loves action. Yes, Ruth is quite talkative and always cheerful, generous, amiable.

5. PIETRO SOSSO:

He's good-natured and hates to fight for what he wants, but a little touch of obstinacy seen in the slightly downslanting t-bar gives him resistance. Otherwise, the t-bar is weak and will power should be cultivated. He is ambitious, fond of praise, musical, imaginative, versatile and, therefore, in danger of becoming a Jack of all trades rather than a specialist; in other words, a Pietro So-So—doing his work so-so, but not astonishing any one with a sudden spurt of genius. He has talents a-plenty, but is prone to let his wishbone be where his backbone should HUMP itself. Part of this is due to sentiment, love of romance, warm heart, sensitiveness, fear of being ridiculed. He is a lover of beauty, as are all his countrymen, fond of art, music, acting, nature, bright colors.

6. IRMA GUMP:

I'm very much afraid that Irma will marry some CHUMP for she's yielding, too good-natured, too sympathetic and sentimental. She is fond of pathos in plays, likes books with plenty of Prince Charming stuff, has a good eye for the artistic, and innate talent for music. I'm afraid that, like the foregoing writer, Miss Gump never works very hard at any of her talents. She has a vein of discouragement and of getting tired of a duty in her writing, for the lines all slant dejectedly down at the right, even to her very name. You've gotta look UP if you want to climb. Better getcher nose burned looking at a star than dream along gazing at melting asphalt. One road leads to heaven, the other to the spot more famed for lively company than climate.

She is a well brought-up little girl, obedient, conscientious, not extravagant, always doing favors for everybody, never too tired to smile kindly. She'll spread sweetness and win much love in return, but she's not ambitious enough to follow her hobbies to successful conclusion. I call that a shame! With a creative and original mind thrown in the cradle without even the asking, to allow one's self to drift through life.

7. J. RAY MURRAY:

'Ray, 'Ray, Murray! But Ray forgot to use a sheet of paper or to give me sufficient handwriting. I'm no clairvoyant—just an analyst. Consequently, the mental rays usually stored up in my think-tank won't spread over much of Ray's character. He's concentrative, quick-witted, farsighted, critical, obstinate, retrospective, and would make a good lawyer, mechanical engineer, cameraman, accountant, office executive.

8. J. R. HODGE:

Here's the writing with a little hooked nose on n, m, u, etc., That shows curiosity and inquisitiveness, although the writer employs these traits legitimately and not for the expansion of his gossip-fund. He can be quite close-mouthed, I do assure you, although he's easy to meet and not at all formal.

He is kind, conscientious, practical and blest with fine mental and physical health and good common sense. He doesn't get easily ruffled and is careful and painstaking. He should stick to a business career, and work with his brawn quite as freely as with brain. His ambitions are moderate, he's remarkably free from vanity, and studies people rather quietly and shrewdly. I'd advise him to get into the automobile and garage business for real success.

9. ALMA C. NAISMITH:

Now, if you want to see the talkative initial hook in its finest form, look at Alma's capital N. It starts right in with a flourish and you'll find the young lady chatty and easy to meet. She is keenly observant, points her letters well, has a good strong t-bar, conveying her positive ideas and self-dependence, writes a high, idealistic i-dot and a courageous C. She speaks right up when annoyed, but would give away anything she owned to make amends, if she thinks herself wrong, later on. She is attractive, has good style, would make a fine wife—a clever manager, a tender mother. She has undoubted business ability, but is artistic, sympathetic, expressive, musical, should be a graceful dancer, eager to study matters psychic, and to fit herself for character analysis. I'd bet on a young Lochinvar coming along SOON singing, "Alma, Where Art Thou?" Lest we forget, that was an OPRY popular in the east a few seasons ago. Matrimonial chances are all in favor of Alma.

10. ELMER E. McINTURFF:

Bless us, that puts Pasadena on the map. I could almost judge that from Elmer's shaky handwriting, which looks as if it had suffered from the heat one usually finds in the burg famous for swell hotels. He writes a nervous hand, shows a functional disorder and should be careful of his health. He's very quick to judge people, but kindhearted, affectionate, spontaneous, self-sacrificing. He writes an unsuccessful hand, should not attempt business at all, for he can't manage people one bit. He yields his point every time some one gets disagreeable. His writing slopes down in most discouraged fashion. He is swayed by the emotions and yields to sense testimony every time, will go to extremes in all he undertakes, hence he needs boosting and encouragement. He has common sense, is dutiful, idealistic, but partakes of the Micawberian philosophy of existence. He's rather quaint, this Scot, so might specialize in whimsical characterizations, but he MUST get more resistance or a cross casting director will have him shuffling off the lot without even a word of protest. Elmer can't hold on to money nor has he good judgment in making investments, he works best under a directing head and will then show his faithfulness and desire to please.

Spirit of Old Spain is Reflected in Banks' Hacienda

Miss Maud Banks, millionaire oil queen of Wyoming and famous sports-woman, came to Southern California on a visit some years ago, and she has remained to make her home in this locality. Quite recently she purchased the famous Seitz country home at the foot of Lark Ellen Street, southwest of Covina. This beautiful Spanish Colonial home is one of the most picturesque in Southern California. Miss Banks' vivid personality has added to the charm of this home, which reflects the architecture of the great haciendas of old Mexico.

Miss Banks' splendid home was built originally as a memorial to Harold M. Seitz, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Seitz. Young Harold Seitz lost his life during the floods of 1914, and his parents, coming on here from Kansas City, constructed the buildings which Miss Banks recently purchased. Although the residence was complete in every particular, the artistic talent of the new owner has given it new and more homelike touches.

Miss Banks' ranch consists of thirty acres of young walnuts, along the edge of the Walnut wash. At the point where the house has been erected is an enormous sycamore tree, probably the largest to be found in any part of the valley. This tree is a classic in itself; the giant branches making a canopy for a garden just on the edge of the wash. The architect has so designed the home that the patio, facing straight south, has as its opening this gigantic tree. The effect is the loveliest imaginable. It makes a cool, leaf-roofed grotto of the entrance to the patio. Beneath the branches of this tree several hundred people could easily be seated. Leading up the sharp rise from the tree to the patio is a terraced lawn. The tree branches out and embraces both the east and west wings of the house, and beneath this wonderful and natural covering is the fish pool in the center of the patio. The old flag-stone and tile architecture has been used in making a cloistered walk that goes about the three sides of the patio, similar in design and effect to the oldest of mission architecture. It is remindful of the cloister at the Mission San Juan Capistrano, and those who have traveled through Old Mexico say that this cloister is identical with some of the oldest of the arched and secluded walks of early Spanish architecture in Mexico.

Leading off this walk, either by passageway or by direct doors, are many of the rooms of the ground floor. The heavy brass and iron latches and broad strappings of the doors carry out in fidelity the old Spanish idea. There is a passageway leading from the cloister through the west wing which ends in a door of steel lattice and heavy iron bars. Here it is easy to imagine the maiden of old Madrid peeping through the bars at the youthful serenader who woos her in the warm tropic night. It is a touch of real Spain, is this reproduction of old passageway and frowning door.

Southern Pacific-Salt Lake Combination in Los Angeles

Plan Set Forth as Solution to Railroad Situation in This City

For approximately ten years past it has been apparent to officials of the Southern Pacific Company and the Salt Lake Route that a combination of their facilities would be very desirable from the standpoint of the railroads, the traveling public and the City of Los Angeles; and in November, 1917, an agreement was reached under which the Southern Pacific Company gave the Salt Lake access to the Arcade Station in exchange for the use of the Salt Lake's right of way on the east bank of the Los Angeles River for passenger and freight trains of the Southern Pacific and the Pacific Electric.

The Arcade Station was built at an expense of over $600,000, and the buildings, trackage and grounds could not be duplicated today for $1,250,000.

This agreement, if permitted to be carried out by the City and State Governing Bodies, would remove all through Southern Pacific trains from Alameda Street; give the Salt Lake the joint use of a modern and adequate station; afford the Pacific Electric a better means of entering the City and, finally, which is of prime importance, would eliminate all of the dangerous grade crossings in the City of Los Angeles.

The present Southern Pacific Station was constructed with the idea of accommodating also the Salt Lake Route, and is adequate to care for all possible train movements of both lines for a period of at least 25 years to come.

In the meantime a number of owners of real estate in the vicinity of the Plaza became very active in spreading propaganda in favor of the Union Passenger Station idea at that point.

There is no necessity, from the standpoint of the traveling public, for a Union Passenger Station in the City of Los Angeles for the reason that actual checks show that not two passengers out of every 100 transfer.

Los Angeles is a terminal point and practically all of the steam line passengers either terminate their trip at Los Angeles or at least stop over, and this idea should be encouraged for the City's good.

Even were a Union Station desirable, the location of the same at the Plaza would be a grievous mistake as the growth of the City has been south and west for the past 25 years, and the plan proposed for its construction wipes out a vast area of streets without substituting any other way by which vehicular traffic can enter or leave the City from the points in the San Gabriel Valley and beyond.

The so-called Plaza plan does not offer practical means of caring for two million one hundred and fifty thousand interurban passengers handled by the Pacific Electric each month between points on the Northern and Southern Divisions and Los Angeles. It contemplates the construction of a subway between the Plaza and the Main Street Station of the Pacific Electric at an expense of $6,553,000, which under the City Charter, can only be constructed by the City and would likely have to be financed by a bond issue.

With the need of the City for a Library, City Hall, City Jail, Harbor Improvements, the outlook for a favorable vote on such a proposition is extremely dubious. As a matter of fact, the subway could not be operated satisfactorily for the reason that it would only accommodate passengers from the Northern Division and there is no track connection for Southern Division trains or arrangement made to interchange the equipment as is done at the present time. The public would be very seriously inconvenienced if this plan were ever permitted to go through.

Mr. F. P. Gregson, Secretary and Traffic Manager of the Associated Jobbers of Los Angeles, has spoken in no uncertain terms as to the plan proposed under the Plaza scheme for the handling of the immense tonnage of less than carload freight in this city, and a careful study has been made by the Engineer of the Rail Lines, resultant of which they are prepared to show that the total cost for the facilities, provided under the Plaza plan, requires the investment of $47,674,152 as against $22,691,939 under the Salt Lake-Southern Pacific plan for the same facilities.

In other words, the Plaza plan would require the investment of $24,982,213 more new money than would be required under the Salt Lake-Southern Pacific plan which utilizes existing improvements.

Such business and civic organizations as the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, after a series of conferences with the supporters of both plans, the Los Angeles Realty Board, the World Traders, the Produce Exchange, all of Southern California towns, have united on the stand that the Railroad plan accomplishes all of the advantages claimed for in any other plan without the tremendous economical loss they will occasion:

Pasadena Chamber of Commerce
Long Beach Chamber of Commerce
San Pedro Chamber of Commerce
Wilmington Chamber of Commerce
Arlington Chamber of Commerce
Upland Chamber of Commerce
Santa Ana Chamber of Commerce
Newport Beach Chamber of Commerce

Alhambra Chamber of Commerce
Garden Grove Chamber of Commerce
San Dimas Chamber of Commerce
Colton Chamber of Commerce
Ontario Chamber of Commerce
Whittier Chamber of Commerce
Huntington Beach Chamber of Commerce

In view of the existing state of the railroads' financial problems, they should be encouraged to carry to conclusion their complete and practicable plan which would at once remedy existing evils.

The Land Behind This Bond:

The land behind the Sutter Basin Company Land Mortgage 8% Serial Gold Bonds is of the richest and most productive land of the State.

For years the Sacramento and Feather Rivers overflowed their banks onto this land, depositing a layer of fine silt soil. Much of the land is of this character and compares favorably with the best bottom lands.

The massive dikes prevent the rivers from further overflowing now, and this rich land is reclaimed for profitable farming.

Extensive irrigating systems have been constructed, too, bringing over four-fifths of the 55,122 acres under intensive farming.

The crops raised are such as are suited to Northern California—rice, beans, grain, melons, fruits and truck vegetables. The yield is especially high, averaging above that of neighboring lands.

Such is the land that backs these bonds and makes them an attractive investment for your funds. Add to this the fact that J. Ogden Armour personally and unconditionally guarantees prompt payment of interest and principal—and you have a very strong, a very sound and profitable security.

Price, 100 and interest to yield 8%. Call at our office today in person, write or phone for full information.

Today's Picture

Once again the type of the photoplay has changed to meet the favor of its public, and it is interesting to note that the new era bids fair to become the most promising of all from an artistic standpoint.

One by one the standards have passed in review, have known popularity and have grown old. It has only been a few years since the two reel thriller and the wildest of serials seemed necessary if the exhibitor were to fill his house.

Then of a sudden came the star system with its turnout of foolish little ingenue and big bold masculine affairs. Being new they flashed an undeniable glitter over a more than willing to be interested country. In fact this regime was apparently not to be overthrown, for loyal audiences in those times quickly chose their favorites and stuck to them through fair weather or foul. However, having become overly acquainted with many celebrities, who were in reality of his own making, it followed that the most enthusiastic fan, sooner or later, would experience satiation. He did. Something was lacking in his picture entertainment. It had been crowded out by the inevitable close-up, and the close-up much employed had lost its fascination.

So after a siege of war pictures which ran the gamut from tragedy to slap stick, the all star cast was initiated with a luxuriously enameled set of sex plays. As was anticipated by several of our leading directors, such subjects proved most enthralling. Here certainly was the mission of the motion picture—to assist in the solution of those vital problems of modernity—marriage and divorce. Upon what else were nations founded?

Consequently it was inconceivable that after very successful reign, decreasing box office receipts proved to theatre owner and producer alike that something was amiss with this type of entertainment.

The big men of the industry were for the most part little worried, however. With a finger ever on the nation's pulse, they recognized almost before those whom it is their business to amuse, that, with the war practically if not technically over, and immediate labor problems slowly righting themselves, the real questions of the day pertained entirely to the spiritual. And it is true! A universal search has commenced, both from sincere and curious motives, for the truth, and information that bears upon that subject alone is entirely acceptable.

Polished sordidness and foolish stories have sung their swan songs in film production.

The biggest philosophers, authors and cinema producers of the day are combining their best efforts that they may assist individually a questioning world with new ideas and the practical application of old ones. The results of these attempts have already placed the screen miles ahead of the rarest accomplishments of the legitimate stage.

Literature has also been superseded by the more complete visualization and time saving of the cinema. Moreover, the now very popular all star casts, in rendering the characters of a story comparatively equal in importance and disposing of the star foolishness, are providing the actor with an opportunity to make his interpretations live in the memory of an audience as the most lively and detailed word descriptions cannot possibly do.

"Humoresque" and "Earthbound" are but the forerunners of what is to come. Both productions have many weak points but their themes are spiritually big and such themes alone are counting with the American public. It is significant to note that so far, that public has received exactly what it has asked for.

Picture Children in Morosco Play

We dropped in at the Morosco Theatre the other evening, where they are presenting "The Little Teacher," and the most interesting part of the performance proved to be the clever acting of several of our screen children. They occasion every tear and a great portion of the smiles throughout the play, and generally do themselves proud.

Little Bennie Alexander is there, and displays the true troupier spirit. His voice carries well and he appears to enjoy every minute of his work.

Jean O'Rourke, a film kiddie as yet not so well known as Ben, is really wonderful as his little sister. She handles the best "cry stuff" that we have ever seen done by a child on the boards.

Fritzi Fern does some clever characterizing and Burwell Hammerick also accomplishes a good part, not to mention the familiar-looking diminutive darky who goes in for comedy.

All of which only proves that talent cannot be downed, particularly when it has had camera training in its youth.

TO FILM PICTURE ON RANCH

"A Man's Country," Jack Hoxie's first feature starring vehicle, will be made in its entirety on a Pacific Coast ranch, according to an announcement made by Ben Wilson, with whom Jack Hoxie is under contract. "A Man's Country" will be a screen version of the Arthur Chapman magazine story.

Pending the making of several changes in the scenario a temporary studio, including dressing rooms, laboratory, cutting room and stage are being erected on the ranch where the production will be photographed.

Ben Wilson also announces that Francis Ford will direct Hoxie. He will be assisted by Phil Ford, the director's brother.

AT THE REALART STUDIO.

Director Sam Wood started this week on the fifth Wanda Hawley starring vehicle. It is a William J. Neidig story published recently in the Saturday Evening Post.

Bebe Daniels is in the second week of "In the Bishop's Carriage," under the direction of Maurice Campbell.

"Eyes of the Heart," the last Mary Miles Minter picture to be directed by Paul Powell, is in the laboratory for positive printing.

Director Thomas Heffron is in San Francisco on the trail of some hundred odd trained animals to be used in the Mary Miles Minter production, which will start the last of October.

AT UNIVERSAL

Work has been started on "White Youth," under the direction of Norman Dawn. Edith Roberts, who has been on a vacation since she finished "The Adorable Savage," three months ago, is the star.

Stuart Paton is on location at Laguna Beach, filming the opening scenes of "Out of the Sunset." Eva Novak is starring in this story, the work of George Rix.

"The Flip Flapper" has been commenced, with Gladys Walton in the title role and Rollin Sturgeon at the megaphone.

Eddie Polo is engaged on the tenth episode of "The King of the Circus," under the direction of J. P. McGowan.

"Gold and the Woman," written by John Colton and Douglas Doty, has been put in production under the direction of Reeves Eason.

Next week Frank Mayo will begin work on "Tiger," a story by Max Brand, under Jacques Jaccard's direction.

Lyons and Moran have finished "Fixed by George" and are assembling a cast for their next comedy feature, "One Bright Idea."

Dorothea Wolbert is appearing in a satire on "Romeo and Juliet" under the direction of Vin Moore.

Hoot Gibson has begun production of another Western drama entitled "The Brand Blotters." Albert Russell is directing.

AT VITAGRAPH

The filming of "Black Beauty" is occupying the greatest attention of western Vitagraph at present.

Earle Williams' cast has been completed and production begun by Director Chester Bennett on Frederick J. Jackson's story, "Diamonds Adrift." Beatrice Burnham appears opposite the star. The company will soon leave for location along the coast.

William Duncan has been away from the studio this week on location near Los Angeles for the fourth and fifth episodes of "Fighting Fate," which Albert E. Smith has just announced as the final title on his next chapter play. It formerly was called "The Wizard's Spyglass." The company will resume work at the studio shortly.

"TRUMPET ISLAND"

"Trumpet Island," a Vitagraph-Tom Terriss special, plays at Tally's Broadway this week. The picture is a very interesting adaptation of the Gouverneur Morris story. The subtitles are happily different and the action is quite consistent.

Wallace MacDonald proves by his romantic performance of Richard Bedeel, the featured lead, that he has "star stuff." His personality will appeal to any audience.

Marguerite de la Motte appears opposite MacDonald in the leading feminine role. Miss de la Motte's histrionic ability does not equal her beauty.

Arthur Hoyt cleverly characterizes Henry Caron, "the at times amusing heavy." This is the best part that we have seen him play. Others will be looked forward to.

Josef Swickard is very good in the role of Jacques de Merincourt, the girl's French father, and Percy Challenger excellently portrays Valinsky, the unknown genius.

Hallam Cooley gives a refreshing performance as Allen Marsh.

This production will undoubtedly attract big audiences.

"EARTHBOUND"

Basil King's "Earthbound" is released by Goldwyn at Miller's Theatre. The story deals a bit daringly with a strictly spiritual theme, on account of which it will attract the thousands who are thinking along those lines at present. In this picture they will find a truly universal appeal. The subtleties contain some rare philosophy. Technically speaking the photography might have been greatly improved upon.

Wyndham Standing heads the all-star cast as the man who is afraid of what he knows. His performance, first as the materialist and then as the "earthbound" soul, is exceptional.

Naomi Childers offers her best late work as his wife, the woman who knows nothing and is afraid of everything.

Mahlon Hamilton is more interesting than usual as the man who is afraid of what he doesn't know.

Flora Revalles lacks technique and is self-conscious in the role of his wife, who cares for nothing. She is a newcomer to the screen and does not aid the cast in any way.

Lawson Butt is well cast as the man who knows, but is not afraid. It is his philosophy that forms the basis of the story.

Alec Francis' spiritual interpretation of the rector who knows little but suspects much, is another of his noteworthy accomplishments. His work is always subtle.

Little Billie Cotton plays the child.

T. Hayes Hunter has handled this really difficult subject admirably.

"HONEST HUTCH"

The California shows "Honest Hutch," the Goldwyn production starring Will Rogers. The picture is fairly entertaining and will probably amuse Rogers' admirers. His work is typical and at times exceedingly funny.

Mary Alden characterizes Mrs. Hutchins very well.

Priscilla Bonner, as his drab old daughter, is quite good.

Tully Marshall is Thomas Gunnison, the village capitalist.

Byron Munson plays his son, a bit self consciously.

Edouard, Jeannette and Yves Trebaol do the Hutchins' children. The little girl is by far the cleverest of the trio.

Nick Cogley plays Hiram Joy.

Clarence Badger directed the production.

PRODUCTION TO HEAD PATHE RELEASE FOR OCTOBER

The principal release from Pathe Exchange, Inc., for the week of October 10th will be "Forbidden Valley," written by Randolph Lewis and produced by J. Stuart Blackton. May McAvoy is co-starred with Bruce Gordon.

"IN THE HEART OF A FOOL"

Mayflower presents Allen Dwan's screen version of William Allen White's "In the Heart of a Fool," at the Kinema. The story is daring in that it deals directly with the lives and sins of the "respectable" people of our own acquaintance, all of which are strung together on a chain of beautiful philosophy. Its greatest appeal will undoubtedly be to the feminine audience. The cast is very good.

James Kirkwood plays Grant Adams typically. His work with the love child is probably the most subtle action of the kind yet screened.

Mary Thurman does her best work as Laura Nesbit, the girl whose seemingly small mistake causes many tragedies.

Anna Q. Nilsson's performance as Margaret Muller in reality takes the picture. The scenes in which she appears, particularly those which assist in reaching the climax, belong wholly to her. The Lorelei should win for Miss Nilsson a starring contract.

Philo McCullough's interpretation of Tom Van Dorn is his most interesting role. His technique is improving greatly, and he is particularly well cast.

Ward Crane is good as Henry Fenn, as is Maryland Morne in the part of Violet Mauling.

John Burton delightfully characterizes Dr. Nesbit, or "Old Linen Pants."

Margaret Campbell, Percy Challenger, Arthur Hoyt, Kate Toncray and Emmet King complete the satisfactory cast.

"BEHOLD MY WIFE"

Lasky presents the George Melford production, "Behold My Wife," taken from "The Translation of the Savage," by Sir Gilbert Parker. It makes a good program picture, but will never be recorded as a big photoplay of the season. However, there is much to entertain in several of the characterizations.

Mabel Julianne Scott plays the title role, Lali, the half breed Indian. Miss Scott is one hundred per cent more interesting in this part than in her previous Lasky appearances. This indicates that she should continue to do characters, and drop straight parts.

Milton Sills is good as Frank Armour, the squaw man, although, as played, he very nearly loses the sympathy that should be held by the lead.

Elliot Dexter reminds us of his old self as Dick Armour, an exceedingly sympathetic character, and Ann Forrest has the small part of Marion Armour.

Winter Hall and Helen Dunbar offer their usual attractive performances as the parents of the foregoing.

Maud Wayne, who is cast as Frank Armour's English fiancée, has little screen personality, and no apparent ability. Moreover, she overdoes the already overdone situations in which she appears. Jane Wolf very consistently plays first the Scotch housekeeper at the Canadian Company Post and later the little Indian's maid.

Mark Fenton is the Post keeper. His crepe hair beard renders his appearance very unnatural.

A very beautiful baby plays little Richard Armour. He is not given screen mention.

"ONCE A PLUMBER"

Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran slump dreadfully in "Once a Plumber," released this week at the Superba. After their marked success in "La La Lucille" we had looked forward to much real mirth at their hands. Alas, it was not to be! There aren't three hearty laughs in the whole affair. What chuckles are heard in the audience are occasioned by the facial and physical contortions of Lee Moran.

A couple of impossible little empty heads do the boys' country sweethearts. They are not in the same class with the ingenues in "La La Lucille" and their mental effort was certainly far from staggering.

The rest of the cast is equally unknown and poor.

"Too bad, boys; better luck next time."

"THE POINT OF VIEW"

Elaine Hammerstein is playing at Clune's Broadway in the Selznick production, "The Point of View." The photoplay is the program picture with little entertainment value, that has been crowded to the wall by the big pictures of the day. It is merely a story with little charm and no real point.

The star is quite beautiful as the haughty Miss Thorncroft.

Rockcliffe Fellows has the heart interest of the piece as the millionaire from the West.

A juvenile by the name of Houseman does the heavy without impressing particularly.

The lad who plays Lawrence Thorncroft has several really good scenes. He has an unusually sensitive face.

Alma, the six-year-old daughter of Frank Lloyd, Goldwyn director, won two silver cups, one for riding and the other for driving, at the Ventura, Calif., fair.

PICKUPS BY THE STAFF

ROTHACKER TO CONSTRUCT PLANT HERE

W. R. Rothacker will arrive in New York shortly from London, and will immediately journey to Los Angeles, where plans are already under way for the construction of a film developing plant which will do away with the present system, employed by a great many producers, of sending their negatives to Chicago for this work. Rothacker recently renewed a contract with J. D. Williams, general manager of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., whereby he will do all developing and printing of First National pictures.

Viola Dana has purchased a new motor boat.

Alice Lake is to be a guest at the Northern California Exhibitors' Association which convenes in San Francisco this week.

Al Willey, who was placed in the Thos. H. Ince Studios by the Board of Vocational Training, has been appointed to the position of second cameraman under Bert Cann, who is photographing the Douglas Maclean Productions.

GOOD MORNING
THE OTHER day
I CHANCED
TO DROP in
TO THE employment office
OF A LARGE studio
JUST TO inquire
IF THEY would BE SO KIND
AS TO give me
A PHONE number
THAT I wanted
AND I had occasion
TO FIND out
FIRST HAND
HOW THE people
WHO WORK as extras
ARE TREATED
BY THE crown prince,
THE CASTING director.
HE SEEMED to think
THE STUDIO would close
IF IT were not
FOR HIM
AND BEFORE I could ASK MY question
HE TURNED to me
WITH A snarl
LIKE A profiteer's
WIFE'S PET poodle
AND HE SAID—
"THERE'S NO work
IF THAT'S what you want,"
AND HE slammed
THE WINDOW
IN MY face
AND THAT makes ME WONDER
WHAT HE would do
FOR A job
IF IT were not
FOR THE extra people
AND I got MY PHONE number
FROM A grocery
AROUND THE corner
WHERE THE clerk
WAS A gentleman.
I THANK YOU.

WEST HOLLYWOOD

"Hesperides"—A True Assyrian Residence—Highly Improved Grounds

This unique residence of nine rooms is built of hollow tile and finished with the best selected materials. The interior has been decorated by a European artist of repute. The lighting fixtures are of special design, hand wrought. The living-room, with its ceiling of beautiful designs; the solarium, with its roof of glass and artistic fountain; the domed dining-room, with its walls and ceiling stenciled over a background of gold leaf; the patio, opening out upon a yard of rare tropical fruits, afford a charm rarely obtained even at great expense. There are four bedrooms, three tiled baths, electrically controlled gas furnace, instantaneous water heater, garage, sprinkler system, and an extended list of built-in effects, such as dressers, etc. The lot is a raised corner, 88x180. An inspection, by appointment, will reveal this to be a home without a counterpart in Southern California. Price, $35,000. Ask for MR. DAVIS, Exclusive Agent, 608-17.

Antonio Moreno this week finished his serial, "The Veiled Mystery," his last chapter production.

Larry Semon is in the midst of "The Hunter," his current comedy special.

The brief illness of Director Jess Robbins delayed the Jimmy Aubrey comedy troupe for a week, but the company is again at work on one temporarily called, "Spanish Omelettes."

Roe Ryan and his cowboys went back to the Mexican border line this week after two weeks in the studio. On a ranch at Campo, Calif., the western serial, "The Purple Riders," is being filmed by Director William Bertram.

ON THE BRUNTON LOT

J. J. Curtis, vice-president of the Bobbs-Merrill Publishing Company, arrived in Los Angeles this week to confer with Otto Bollman, president of the Dial Film Company, on matters relative to the production of Irving Bacheller's famous novel of pioneer American life, "The Light in the Clearing." Continuity work on the picture is already under way and actual filming is expected to begin shortly.

Final camera work was completed this week at the Brunton studios on Dustin Farnum's latest independent production, "The Trail of the Axe," adapted from the best seller of that title by Ridgewell Cullum. Winifred Kingston is playing opposite Farnum in this picture and the direction is by Ernest C. Warde.

Work will begin this week at the Brunton studios on a new fifteen-episode Pathe serial, starring Charles Hutchison. The serial will be adapted from the Oriental novel, "The Fortieth Door," by Mary Hastings Bradley. W. S. Van Dyke will direct the star and Jack Cunningham is author of the screen version.

The technical department of the Brunton studios has erected a genuine reproduction of the Los Angeles plaza as it was in 1830 for Douglas Fairbanks' latest United Artists film, "The Curse of Capistrano." The set was built at Sunland, in the San Fernando valley, and was derived from old engravings and drawings in the possession of Fernandez Pico, an aged pioneer resident of Los Angeles.

AT THE LASKY STUDIO

Owing to the crowded condition of the laboratory at the Lasky studio, a new cutting room is being built at the corner of Selma avenue and Argyle street. It will afford facilities for cutting eight pictures at the same time.

Gloria Swanson will probably begin work about the middle of December at the Lasky studio in the first of her new Paramount pictures, in which she will be featured under the direction of Sam Wood. The picture is entitled "Everything for Sale," but there is no information as yet available as to the authorship, etc.

William de Mille has begun work on "What Every Woman Knows." Lois Wilson and Conrad Nagel will have the leading roles.

Cecil B. de Mille has completed his production "Forbidden Fruit."

Wallace Reid is scheduled to start next week on Frank Spearman's story, "The Daughter of a Magnate," which was scenarized by Eugene Lewis and will be directed by Frank Urson.

Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle has completed "Brewster's Millions" under the direction of Joseph Henabery and will begin next week on "The Dollar a Year Man," an original by Walter Woods, which James Cruze will direct.

GOLDWYN COMPANY ON VACATION.

The little village of Jackson in Northern California has been selected by Director Clarence Badger for Will Rogers' visualization of Irvin Cobb's story "Boys Will Be Boys."

The company which left the Goldwyn studio at Culver City Tuesday to film scenes in Jackson will be composed of about fifty people.

HANK MANN DIRECTING SELF

The Hank Mann comedy company has been working on a lot adjoining the Vitagraph studios this week, where scenes to the comedian's newest fun film, "His Better Half," are being filmed. Hank Mann is directing as well as acting before the camera until a new director has been obtained.

HALLROOM BOYS START NEW SERIES

Hallroom Boys Comedies have started the production of their new series with Harry Kernan, announces Harry Cohn, who is on the Coast in charge of production.

It is expected that the series will continue in the independent field, state rights by C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation.

COMEDIES UNDER WAY AT L-KO

"A DOCTOR'S DILEMMA," under the direction of Tom Buckingham, is now in its early stages of production. The cast includes Charles Dorety, Bud Jamison and Eardene Van Styne.

Director Fred Fishback is on the second week of his comedy "EIGHT HOURS."

Bill Armstrong and Joe O'Donnell, co-directing, are now in the midst of their comedy called, "TROUBLE BREWING."

Another lion comedy is on its way with Chuck Reisner directing.

May Allison is enjoying a brief vacation.

Corinne Griffith has received an offer to appear on the stage.

Gloria Jane Tuttle entertained a number of little friends at her home in honor of her twelfth birthday, Saturday, Sept. 25, 1920.

Wyndham Standing has been engaged to play the lead with Marion Davies in the Cosmopolitan production now being made at Santa Barbara.

Evelyn Selby will be the guest of Mayor Rolph and the Moving Picture and Projection Machine Operators' Society at a benefit ball to be given in San Francisco this week. Miss Selby will address the assemblage and lead the grand march with Mayor Rolph.

Wallace McDougall, comic artist of New York, has been engaged by the Educational Film Corporation of New York to handle publicity and draw cartoons from this territory in the exploitation of Hamilton-White Comedies. McDougall was formerly cartoonist for the Wheeler Syndicate, New York Globe, Chicago Examiner and San Francisco Bulletin.

Charles Hutchinson suffered a badly dislocated arm and torn tendons while making a scene at the Brunton studios, this week, for his latest adventure serial, "The Fortieth Door." Hutchinson was swinging from one balcony to another on a rope when an overhead arc lamp broke. A heavy piece of glass struck the star on the arm and he lost his hold, falling fifteen feet to the floor. Physicians state that he will not be able to resume his work before six or eight weeks.

FREELANCE PHOTOPLAYWRIGHTS ORGANIZE

No longer will the mass of freelance photoplaywrights, both embryotic and "arrived," who have responded to the appeal of the motion picture producers for more and better stories, remain an unorganized mob.

The Photoplaywrights' League of America, which is described as a protective and co-operative National association of scenario writers, has just been incorporated under the laws of the state of California. The purposes of the League are described as follows:

"To protect its members from having story material stolen by unscrupulous producers or writers—to prosecute any such infringements and recover damages for its members—to market their story material at a standard price—to demand recognition and the proper screen and advertising credit for members whose stories are marketed through the League—to keep its members advised of all new markets and any changes in the existing ones—and to furnish any necessary information or guidance concerning the proper form in which to submit story material."

The headquarters of the organization are in Los Angeles. The national organization will take under its wing Literary Clubs and Drama Leagues, located all over the country.

The officers of the P. L. A. are Wycliffe A. Hill, president, E. F. Hyland, executive secretary, and J. Morgan Marmaduke, vice-president and chief counsel.

JOHN H. BLACKWOOD CONDUCTS BUSINESS FOR INCE.

A number of stories were also purchased by Thomas H. Ince through Mr. Blackwood, a definite announcement of which will be made within a short time.

Lon Chaney has two roles written for him in Tod Browning's present feature. One is the Chinese assistant to the bazaar keeper and the other is the "heavy" characterization.

TO BOOK PROLOGUES

The Arthur Klein Service Bureau has been formed for the nationwide booking of prologues for motion picture theaters.

Arthur Klein of New York, former vaudeville agent, has worked out the scheme which has already been adopted by Associated First National Pictures, Inc. According to Mr. Klein's plan, not only will the theater be furnished with a prologue including lighting and scenic effects, but high class artists will be engaged for the appearances.

Lillian Rich recently sustained a serious injury of her right eye when her eyelid was pierced by a cactus as she galloped over the desert in a scene for the Edgar Lewis production, "The Sage Hen," in which she is playing the ingenue lead.

She will be unable to work for three weeks, but will recover her eyesight, according to her physicians.

Christian Frank has finished his part in the Hoxie serial.

ESTABLISHES BUREAU FOR STATE

Hotel conditions in New York leave visitors with no definite ideas as to headquarters or mail addresses, and this new bureau provides them a permanent New York address.

Beatrice Bee Monson, formerly with Marion Kahn and Monty Banks Productions, has been engaged to play opposite Lloyd ("Ham") Hamilton in his newest comedy, "April Fool," now in the course of production.

Another Question

Since its inception, this publication has been of and for the industry always. It was created that the profession, individually and as a class, might possess, unrestrictedly, a medium of expression whose responsibility it would be to safeguard its doings and feelings with an unpurchasable loyalty. Naturally, this position was an unusual attempt, but it has been maintained despite countless warnings of its impossibility.

And as the months have passed, through bright picture days and those not quite so bright, much has been accomplished. Los Angeles has learned that the film folk have a representative which is given to last-notch battling for its people that they may receive fair treatment at the hands of the citizens and no undue criticism from the press.

We know our big-natured brothers for what they are, and have ever been quickest to justify their lives and interests to the world. If there have been occurrences, have existed practices, that could result only in disaster for the profession as the outcome of its own wrongdoing, they have been taken, through these pages, directly to the studios, with the remedy according to our lights after serious contemplation. At no time, we believe, has our criticism been destructive.

Now we are all faced by a new problem, which is undoubtedly one of the most important yet presented. Its solution is up to you men and women whose duty it is to entertain the world, and whose privilege it is to eat and live on the world's compensation for that entertainment.

A well-known producer has descended into our midst with a recently formed company of his own. He is a man of intellect, and has surrounded himself with artists more than worthy of the name. He has, in the past, made pictures that have commanded the attention and admiration of the world.

With his new outfit he might easily accomplish artistic triumphs that would prove inestimably beneficial to those hundreds of thousands of living, climbing souls whom we so casually lump together and refer to with one little phrase, "the public." Incidentally, his personal reward, even if it is considered only from a material standpoint, would amount to the fabulous.

His entrance, unfortunately, gives little promise of such a finale. Presumably for his initial independent production, so it has been scattered by his employees, he has filmed scenes under disreputable conditions that are an outrage to the industry, the drama and the public. Happily, the last mentioned will be spared general knowledge of these alleged orgies, since no American picture has ever or will ever contain such material.

This obvious fact has given rise to a question as to the utilization of this film. Too many thousands of dollars have been spent, according to current report, to favor one rumor to the effect that the desire for personal gratification and amusement on the part of the higher-ups instigated these performances. It would be interesting to know just who is on the receiving end of this product.

Actors and actresses who have been called upon, and who have unwittingly accepted engagements in the picture, pronounce it the most shameless stuff ever filmed openly. Of course, exaggerations have undoubtedly been made by excitable minds, but if one-tenth of what is being told in the film colony is one-tenth part true, the most dangerous mistake in the industry's history has been perpetrated.

That we shudder to have the matter taken up legally and by the general press could not excuse our tolerance of such a circumstance. Unless we are to let a few of the less worthy natures within our circle ruin its future before the world, this type of thing must be cast out. The law of compensation is the Accounter.

Picture Prices

Griffith's latest picture, "Way Down East," opens this week at the Philharmonic Auditorium. The first performance will bring as much as ten dollars for the better seats in the house, proving that the cinema has been recognized as an art equal in value to any other, irrespective of its age. This is a great triumph for the "newest" in entertainment.

Of course, it would be very bad for pictures to bring straight prices that would exclude the attendance of the masses who have occasioned their unusual success, but that will never occur. The neighborhood theatres will always be in a position to show high-priced productions at the customary moderate rate very soon after their first runs in the downtown houses. Such breadth of scope is unprecedented in the history of the drama.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN'S "KID" FINDS NEW ROLE IN FILMS

Jack Coogan, Jr., known to many as "Jackie," is to branch out from under the spreading wings of Charlie Chaplin, and be featured in his own productions. "Jackie" is "the kid" in the much fought over Chaplin feature bearing that title.

The entire "Peck's Bad Boy" series has been purchased and Bernard McConville is now busy preparing the first Peck volume for screen use.

Nate Watt will have charge of the megaphone. Mr. Watt directed Annette Kellerman's latest comedy drama, "What Women Love." Assisting Watt will be his brother Charles. DeWitte Hagar will have charge of business matters pertaining to production.

The cast is being selected for the initial feature and as soon as the players are obtained, announcements of their names will be made. It is a certainty that Wheeler Oakman will have an important role in the new film. Work will commence October 15th. Space has been leased in the Louis B. Mayer studios and Nate Watt claims that within a few days, all the wheels of activity of the "Peck's Bad Boy Company" will be rolling along at top speed.

TO EXPLOIT FIRST NATIONAL IN INDIA

Arrangements for exploitation of First National pictures through India and the Far East, embracing China, Japan, Siam, the Straits Settlements, Java, the Philippines, etc., have been made between Morris Greenhill of London, David P. Howells, Foreign Representative of First National, and Frederick Shipman, whereby Shipman, who controls a chain of theatres in India, exploits these pictures in his territory.

GOLDWYN'S NEW YORK EXCHANGE MOVES

Goldwyn's New York Exchange moved on Saturday, October 9th, from the outgrown quarters which it has occupied since July, 1917, to the twelfth floor of 729 Seventh avenue, where various motion picture concerns have their headquarters. The quarters previously occupied by the exchange will be taken over by Goldwyn's foreign department.

"PINK TIGHTS"

The Superba runs Universal's "Pink Tights," featuring Gladys Walton, who appeared with Lyons and Moran in "La La Lucille." The story is a fairly entertaining one of circus life. It has some effective fire scenes.

Miss Walton gives considerable promise in her role of Mazie Darnton.

Jack Perrin plays the Rev. Jonathan Meek. Some of his scenes are quite interesting.

Dave Dyas is typical as Jerry McKeen, the circus manager.

Little Reeves Eason, Jr., provides the greatest part of the picture's attraction as Johnnie Bump. His work is absolutely charming.

Dorothea Wolbert characterizes Mrs. Bump very well indeed, while Rosa Gore and Dan Crimmins amuse as Mrs. Shamfeller and Smiley Dodd.

Stanton Heck and Martin Neilan complete the cast.

Reeves Eason directed.

"THE RESTLESS SEX"

The Famous Players-Lasky adaptation of Robert Chambers' "The Restless Sex" has commenced a run at Grauman's Rialto. The screen version is very interesting and the cast is good. Director Robert Leonard has handled the festival crowds with unusual effectiveness. Much money was expended upon the production.

Marion Davies is Stephanie Cleland, the featured lead. This is the most satisfactory picture work that she has done to date. Considering her background, support, etc., it should be.

Ralph Kellard takes many of her scenes from her, however, as Jim Cleland, the male lead, and creates a fascinating personality in his quiet forcefulness.

Carlisle Blackwell plays Oswald Grismer, the sympathetic role, beautifully. Fortunately he fails to take advantage of his opportunity to overact.

Charles Lane is John Cleland, and Robert Vivian does Chilsmer Grismer, the two fathers.

Some clever work is accomplished by Edna Ross and Stephen Carr, who play Stephanie and Jim as children.

Vivian Osborne and Helen Davis complete the cast.

Alex Troffey, film cutter at the Goldwyn Studios, has just completed his third year with the company.

Bertram Bracken directed "Harriet and the Piper," the coming attraction at the Kinema.

CONTRACTS FOR MERMAID COMEDIES

Manager-Director Joe Plunkett, of the Strand Theatre, New York, has contracted for all of the Mermaid Comedies produced by Hamilton-White and released through Educational Film Corporation.

Current Reviews

"THE GIRL WITH THE JAZZ HEART"

An exceptionally clever farce starring Madge Kennedy in a dual role is released this week by Goldwyn at the California Theatre. It is highly entertaining. The subtitles are very clever and the situations are well done.

Miss Kennedy plays Miriam Smith, the demure little Quaker, and Miss Swasher of the telephone brigade. She takes full advantage of the opportunity thus provided to display her versatility. Her characterizations are more than clever.

Joe King does the little Quaker's sweetheart, and Leon Pierre Gendron does the Jazz Artist who finds Miss Swasher congenial.

The atmospheres of Gideon and New York contrast entertainingly, and the whole has been well handled by Lawrence C. Windom.

"THE POOR SIMP"

Clune's Broadway is showing Owen Moore in "The Poor Simp," another of his Selznick releases. The picture, a combination of sincere nightmare and weak slapstick, is more conducive to slumber than anything else. Beautiful sets were utilized for the action, however.

Moore runs about monkey fashion through the reels, greatly assisted by Douglas F. Carter, the darky butler, who has to his credit what undeveloped laughs the piece calls forth.

Nell Craig does the feminine lead.

Victor Heerman directed the production.

"ONCE TO EVERY WOMAN"

"Once to Every Woman," the Universal photoplay produced by Allen Holubar and starring Dorothy Phillips, is running at the Kinema.

The story, which is also by Holubar, is cut out along human interest lines and should possess more appeal than it does. The cutting is probably responsible for the fact that several of the picture's best sympathetic touches as well as its punches miss fire. Unfortunately upon the opening night the big dramatic moment of the entire play was met by a ripple of laughter from the audience. Since it is the public which passes last judgment, this occurrence is rendered serious.

The star's performance as Aurora Meredith is good. She makes a very realistic youngster, and she has some truly remarkable scenes with Margaret Mann, who plays her mother. Mrs. Mann will be remembered in a like role in "The Heart of Humanity." Her work is symbolical of all that is mother love.

Robert Anderson characterizes Phineas Scudder beautifully. His action is a bit too foolish in spots, but it is done consistently.

Rudolpho de Valentino does Judlantimo subtly. He is unusually well cast.

Emily Chichester and Elinor Field are good in the small parts of Patience and Virginia, Aurora's little sisters.

William Ellingford plays Matthew Meredith, the girl's father.

Mary Wise, Dan Crimmins, Rosa Gore and Frank Elliot complete the cast.

"HELD IN TRUST"

Metro releases the May Allison feature, "Held in Trust," at Tany's Broadway this week. The story would be fairly entertaining if it were not for the poor direction and many technical mistakes. The photography is miserable and the lighting worse, if possible. A plainly apparent spot follows the star about through the entire action, like a guardian angel. The subtitles for the most part mean nothing.

Miss Allison reminds us of old days with her work as Mary Manchester.

Darrell Foss plays opposite her in the role of young Gorgas. This work is not as good as he is capable of offering.

Walter Long is present in one of his always well done heavies.

Teddy plays Reginald with technique and appeal.

"HITCHIN' POSTS"

Universal offers Frank Mayo in "Hitchin' Posts" at the New Pantages this week. The picture includes some beautiful river shots and interesting Southern types. The story has no real climax. Little suspense and too much coincidence, but the star's work as Jefferson Todd is good. His 1870 costume is peculiarly adapted to his appearance and personality, and his characterization of the Gambler will delight his fans.

Beatrice Burnham is appealing as Ophelia Brereton and quite typical.

J. Farrell McDonald is very clever as Joe Alabam, the old fiddler, and he does some exceptional teamwork with M. Biddulph, who is the bibulous Major Grey.

Mr. Mayo's pictures would be greatly improved if Dagmar Godowsky were not so inevitably a member of their casts. She is not now, and gives little promise of being an actress. We suggest that there are many clever ones unemployed.

Joseph Harris is cast as Raoul Castigu, and Mark Fenton plays Colonel Brereton.

Duke Lee has a good bit as Colonel Lancy. Jack Ford directed the picture.

GOTHAM GOSSIP

THINGS YOU WON'T READ ANYWHERE ELSE

By Director Frank P. Donovan

Fake acting schools are as numerous in New York as bad actors. Their alleged game is "within-the-law" supposedly.

Samuel Goldwyn may become head of the William R. Hearst picture corporation if present arrangements don't go wrong. This deal is now pending.

Bert Ennis, former publicity man, has branched out as an independent producer, and will shortly launch his first production. His offices are in the Longacre building.

Wray Physioc is directing Muriel Ostriche in two-reel comedies. He has just finished a Biograph feature which will once again bring back the old A. B. trade-mark to picturedom.

Conditions in New York's picture producing business is at a standstill, because money is not available with which to make pictures. It's going to be a tough winter.

Metro has completely shut down in New York, it appears. Famous Players have given up their 56th Street studio and moved everything to their new building and studios in Astoria, Long Island City, where Victor Smith holds sway as manager. He was formerly with Vitagraph, being one of the Smith Brothers.

Charlie Chaplin is around Broadway in a gray overcoat.

Tefft Johnson is to direct First National-Ernest Shipman two-reel comedies, starring John Junior and Edith Shipman.

Billy Bitzer is reported to have left D. W. Griffith after being the "old master's" chief aid for over twelve years. He will produce independently, it is rumored.

Harry Levey has branched out as a full fledged producer. His "Uncle Sam of Freedom Ridge" is going strong all over. Harry deserves success, as does his hard working staff, headed by the popular Benny Blake.

Hymie Silverman, who for six years conducted the Public Projection Rooms at 729 Seventh avenue, New York, is now with C. B. Brice. He is a regular fellow, and one that hands the small producer a square deal. Price, by the way, is buying negatives.

Vitagraph is taking things easy at this writing. Tom Terriss is working on a version of "The Heart of Maryland," with Catherine Calvert. Directors George Sargent and Mrs. Sidney Drew have finished their pictures with Alice Joyce and Corinne Griffith, respectively.

The Green Room Club, which today is New York's home for the picture player, director or writer, is gaining in popularity. Anyone who leaves Los Angeles can be found at the club, where good fellowship prevails always. Ask some of the Coast members; for instance, Paul Scardon or Hugh Thompson.

"Wild" Bill Haddock starts a feature this week.

Mike Ring is getting over his recent illness. Mike now wants to tackle any comedy they will let him produce. He is making his headquarters the Green Room Club, New York, where they read Camera!

William Scully, who used to be an assistant director at Famous-Players, is now directing a two-reel dramatic company that will film the Poe poems for First National. Louis Stern is prominent in the cast. Richard Travers is starred.

Weather conditions in New York and adjacent country the past two months has been very bad. There is no sunshine, even light or anything else. Rain and foggy weather holds the boards. Don't come here for exteriors.

Louis J. O'Connor, the "best cop" in pictures, who makes a specialty of this work for Selznick, Famous, Realart, Metro, Vitagraph and a few more, is going to Los Angeles this winter. So is Harold Forshay, a fine light heavy; Albert Roccardi, the old Vitagrapher of O. Henry Pictures, and a lot more.

Burton King will be in Los Angeles this winter with a contract tucked in his pocket calling for a series of twelve features for Pioneer Pictures Corporation. This will mean work for many good actors. Burt is completing financial arrangements in New York now. His New York address is the Green Room Club.

Leo White

Who made the French Count a reality in Motion Pictures

Now being starred by Pinnacle Productions

Capt. Clayton

has spent 15 years in Africa and India. In addition to playing the part of Captain Jamieson, he assisted Mr. Blache in directing the military scenes of "The Hope," and is probably one of the best authorities in America on British Army details.

He fought in the Boer War, Indian, Zulu Rebellion, and was right through the late war in France, serving as an officer in the famous Anzacs; wounded three times, captured and interned in German prison, but escaped and rejoined his unit.

He played Lord Francis Hope in "The Hope Diamond Mystery." He is now in the cast supporting Pauline Frederick in "The Mistress of Shenstone," on location near San Francisco.

Professional Notes

AT VITAGRAPH

David Smith has finished half of the interiors for "Black Beauty" and will spend the next week on location while the rest of his studio sets are being finished.

Earle Williams will finish in another week on his current feature, temporarily called "Diamonds Adrift," from the story by Frederick J. Jackson. Chester Bennett is directing.

William Duncan and Edith Johnson are on the fifth episode of "Fighting Fate," their next Vitagraph serial. Many of the scenes of the past week were taken at the Pacific Coast Art Exhibition at Exposition Park in Los Angeles.

Antonio Moreno has finished his serial, "The Veiled Mystery," and has gone to Catalina Island for a rest before starting his first feature in some years.

The John Ryan unit, filming "The Purple Riders," western serial, has left the studio again for location on the Mexican border. William Bertram is directing.

Jimmy Aubrey is in the midst of another comedy. Jess Robbins is directing. No title has yet been selected.

AT UNIVERSAL CITY

Production of "Tiger" will be started within a few days. The story is by Max Brand and it will serve Frank Mayo as a starring vehicle. Jacques Jaccard will supervise the direction.

After a short vacation Harry Carey is back in the harness and is at work on his next feature, "Burning Embers," under the direction of Val Paul. The story is by Carey.

Under Norman Dawn's direction, Edith Roberts is well along on "White Youth."

Tod Browning is busy in the cutting rooms, supervising the editorial work on his latest Jewel feature, "Outside the Law," starring Priscilla Dean.

During the past week Erich Von Stroheim added forty scenes to "Foolish Wives."

Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran are assembling a cast for their next comedy feature, "One Awful Night," from the story by Edgar Franklin.

Hoot Gibson is at work on "The Brand Blotter," under Albert Russell's direction.

Eddie Polo has returned from two weeks at Catalina, where some undersea scenes were secured for his serial, "The King of the Circus."

AT THE LASKY STUDIOS

Word has just been received from New York to the effect that as soon as they have completed "The Quarry" in New York, Thomas Meighan and Tom Forman, his director, will return to Hollywood to do another picture there. Harold Schwartz, assistant director, and Harry Perry, cameraman, will also return with the others.

According to his present plans, it is understood that Jesse L. Lasky will be back at his desk at the studio some time in November, after spending several weeks at the New York headquarters of this organization.

Next Monday, October 18, is the date set for starting two important productions. Roscoe ("Fatty") Arbuckle will begin under the direction of James Cruze on "The Dollar a Year Man," an original by Walter Woods.

Wallace Reid will start his picture, "The Daughter of a Magnate," directed by Frank Urson. Mr. Reid has had a week or more vacation since completing "Something Audacious."

At least two weeks more will be required for George Melford to complete "The Faith Healer," after which he will start on an original story by Hector Turnbull, scenarized by Mary O'Connor.

Cecil B. De Mille is expected to start another picture some time in December. He has just completed "Forbidden Fruit."

William De Mille is now engaged on "What Every Woman Knows," by Sir James M. Barrie, scenarized by Olga Printzlau.

Penrhyn Stanlaws is familiarizing himself with "the lay of the land" at the Lasky plant, and spends a great deal of time watching the various directors in their work, so as to gain a close touch with the methods in vogue in the production of Paramount Pictures.

TO RELEASE LOVE PICTURE THIS WEEK

Federated Film Exchanges of America, Inc., handling the Andrew J. Callaghan production starring Bessie Love, announces that the release date of "Bonnie May," made from the novel of the same name which was written by Louis Dodge and published by Charles Scribner's Sons, has been set as October 17th.

FILMING CONNOR STORY IN CANADA

Director Henry MacRae, with Gaston Glass, William Colvin, Vivian Osborne, Gordon Griffiths and a supporting company, arrived in Calgary, Canada, Thursday morning to make the picture, "Cameron of the Royal Mounted," from Ralph Connor's story, "Corporal Cameron."

The picture is being made on the ground actually covered by the action of the story. Ralph Connor himself, who arrived with the company, is assisting in the selection of locations. The company has the full assistance of the Mounted Police, and the old files and equipment of that body.

This is a First National picture, and follows the previous Ralph Connor story, "The Foreigner," just finished at Winnipeg.

BEN WILSON TO EXPAND INTO FEATURE FIELD

Ben Wilson will gradually branch out into the feature field, according to announcement by the Wilson publicity department. Arrangements for release are now being made by Joe Brandt, Mr. Wilson's eastern representative. Jack Hoxie is the first star to come under Wilson's individual banner. He will be followed shortly by three more well known screen players, who will be starred in productions for release on the state rights basis.

MORANTE COMPANY STARTS AGAIN

Production is once more in full swing on the single-reel Morante Comedies being released every two weeks by Special Pictures Corporation. For the present the Balboa Studios at Long Beach are being used, but a move to the Special Pictures Studio on Santa Monica Boulevard is being contemplated. Milburn Morante is the featured comedian, with Tom Gibson directing.

GETTING ACQUAINTED WITH INTERESTING PEOPLE*HARRY BURNS

Harry Burns, retired world's champion bag puncher, has been associated with theatricals since 1900, when he showed in the museums about New York City, finally going into vaudeville, and traveling from Maine to California for nine consecutive seasons.

Coming to the Pacific Coast in 1914 he joined the Pacific Athletic Club as press agent, and secretary to T. J. McCarey, with whom he was associated for three years. When twenty round boxing contests were voted out of this state, Burns turned his attention to the motion picture industry. As a starter he took to acting and finally became an assistant director.

He worked alongside of some of our leading directors, who produced anything from one reel dramas to serials. Now Harry Burns is directing Chester Comedies under the supervision of W. S. Campbell, with whom he has been producing two reel animal comedies for the past twenty-four months.

Director General W. S. Campbell has advanced Harry Burns to a directorship, because Harry has served his apprenticeship as assistant, and the first picture that Director Burns produced under the eagle eye of his boss has been voted as one of the best turned out at the Lincoln Park studio since its inception.

Director Burns is a member of the Assistant Directors Association. It is remarkable to notice the number of A. D. A. boys who have progressed as Mr. Burns has within the last year.

Kathleen Kirkham is finishing the organization of her own company.

Grace Pike has been engaged by Metro to enact a part in "Are Wives to Blame?"

Wesley Ruggles will direct Alice Lake in her new Metro starring picture, "Mother Love."

"Way Down East"

Griffith comes back again with his screen version of "Way Down East," and, as usual, the critics have little to report save good regarding one of his big productions.

As has been the case in some of his previous pictures, this old melodrama will henceforth be more popular as a Griffith offering than it has proven during the many years that it has been an old standby on the boards.

Never before have such photography and light effects been accomplished for the screen. These, combined with the unusual settings which proclaim aloud their genuineness, render "Way Down East" the season's most artistic production by far.

The original plot of the play has been elaborated upon and much invaluable human interest business has been inserted. The performances of the cast are very good and the New England types are excellent. Their action is materially assisted by the music score.

Lillian Gish undoubtedly does her best work to date as Anna Moore, the featured lead. She combines subtly the simple-hearted childishness for which her characterizations have long been known with the hurt reserve that the spirit-bruising knocks of a cruel world accomplish so quickly in dazed youth. There are few light touches in her offering, and it is much more effective so.

Lowell Sherman is exceptionally well cast as the heavy, Lennox Sanderson, whom he interprets cleverly. His work is convincing enough to gather for him the complete loathing of any audience.

Richard Barthelmess does David Bartlett, the well remembered ideal young New Englander, with all of his old-time juvenile appeal. His characterization is equally good in its tender and its dominant moments.

Burr MacIntosh and Kate Price are beautifully cast as Squire and Mrs. Bartlett. It is the home atmosphere that means so much in Griffith pictures.

Mary Hay makes her screen debut in the role of Kate Brewster, the refreshing little ingenue. She is headed toward Dorothy's port with her eccentric comedy mannerisms. Her relief is timely.

Vivia Ogden, Porter Strong and George Neville occasion the more hilarious amusement of the play in the rural characters, Martha Perkins, Jack Setholand and Reuben Whipple.

Josephine Bernard, Mrs. Morgan Belmont and Patricia Fruer are somewhat amateurish as the Tremonts, but their footage is limited and consequently means little.

Florence Short, however, creates a type worthy of mention in her four or five scenes as their eccentric aunt.

Edgar Nelson as Hi Holler, and Emily Fitzroy as Maria Poole, complete the cast.

The remarkableness and thrill of the ice jam and break scenes, which forms the climax, has never been rivaled. It is as spectacular a sequence as has been filmed, even by this director.

Other producers might follow Mr. Griffith's example by including many big brains in their organizations, to the advantage of their productions and resultantly their own material success.

Wall Street Loses Out

It has long bothered some of our West Coast producers, that they have had to look to Wall Street for financial assistance in launching new projects and developing old ones. According to a recent statement from good authority, this is an evil that will no longer be necessary, since it is understood that upon the moving of the crops this year, the Federal Reserve in this district will loan money to the Los Angeles banks on paper.

This fact is vitally important to the industry since it severs the strongest tie that has recently bound California pictures to the East. It leaves Los Angeles not only the film capital, but the arbiter of the industry's financial destiny as well. New York's loss is our gain.

Japanese Censorship Regulations

There are sixteen angles in films, according to Tachibana, chief inspector of films at Tokyo, Japan, which will not pass muster at the Nipponese metropolis. The taboo pictures include those that:

Concern the imperial family or ancestors.

Endanger the prestige of the nation.

Incite radical changes of government, or principles, or social disorder.

Endanger the "reputation and honor enjoyed by great men and sages, dead or alive."

Suggest methods of crimes or means of escape.

Injure international relationships.

Represent "too cruel or atrocious acts, or ignominious or obscene conduct, adultery or vulgar love affairs."

Criticize current events, or suggest or discourage any personal affairs of individuals.

Tend to discourage learning and lawful business, or to "make people rough-hearted and frivolous."

Lead children to "play mischievous sports."

Tend to injure the dignity of school masters.

"Broken or defaced films, or films that shake too much (because of harm to eyes)."

"Contradict morality and consequently the principle 'Good brings its own reward and the devil is punished'."

AT THE REALART STUDIO

Bebe Daniels completed work this week on "In the Bishop's Carriage." She will rest until October 25th, when "shooting" is scheduled on a new story by Elmer Harris.

An original story by Cosmo Hamilton, temporarily titled, "The Almighty Dollar," has been chosen as the next special offering of William D. Taylor. Mr. Taylor is now on a six weeks' vacation, but in the meantime Julia Crawford Ivers is completing the scenario and making preparations for the beginning of work, scheduled for November 15th.

Frank L. Browne, manager of Clune's Broadway, and G. V. Slater of the Los Angeles Realart Exchange, visited Bebe Daniels and Wanda Hawley at the Realart Studio a few days ago. W. H. Clune has signed for the first-run appearances of all Realart Pictures.

Douglas Bronston is at work writing the scenario of a new Wanda Hawley picture, adapted from a play by Philip Bartholomae.

AT VITAGRAPH

SPECIAL CONTRACTS WITH JAPANESE COMPANY

Contracts were signed this last week in Los Angeles between the Kokusai Film Corporation of Tokio, Japan, and the Special Pictures Corporation of Los Angeles, whereby the former company secures Oriental rights to the entire output of Special Pictures for the period of one year.

The papers were signed by President Louis W. Thompson of Special and Kisaburo Kobayashi, president of the Nippon organization. The contracts cover the Chester Conklin pictures, the Comiclassics, starring Neely Edwards and Charlotte Merriam; the Milburne Moranti single reelers, the Clay-play comedies in Animated Mud, the Sunset-Burruud scenics, and the Comedyart productions made by Special.

The contract covers all film rights for the Empire of Japan, the Republic of China and the Philippine Islands. Special sales representatives of the American company will be sent to the Orient to aid the Japanese company in disposing of the film to Nipponese exhibitors, according to the Yankee idea of motion picture salesmanship.

ASSOCIATED PRODUCERS SECURE HOUSE

Associated Producers, the recently organized "big seven," have just concluded arrangements whereby they will have a first-run house in Los Angeles. Robert E. Wells, managing director of the new Mission Theatre, which is to open in a few weeks at 838 South Broadway, has signed a contract which will secure these pictures.

There have been recurrent rumors that Associated and United Artists will amalgamate, and if this occurs, the Mission will get the first runs of Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford and David Wark Griffith pictures.

"DEEP WATERS"

Maurice Tourneur's latest personally directed release, "Deep Waters," an adaptation of "Caleb West, Master Diver," shows at Grauman's Million Dollar Theatre. The interesting water scenes fail to keep the production from being draggy. Many of the situations absolutely lack connection and it is uncertain, for the most part, as to whom is due the sympathy. Near the picture's opening slapstick is utilized, but to rather poor advantage.

We admit to being surprised at the charming screen personality of Barbara Bedford, the newcomer at the Tourneur Studios, who does Betty West. She has a wholesome, natural appeal and gives promise of much to come.

Broercken Christian does the deep sea diver, Caleb West. He makes an interesting character.

Henry Woodward, in the part of Henry Sanford, which, as adapted, has no place in the main story, does not take advantage even of the slim opportunity provided in his scenes.

George Nichols and Lydia Yeamans Titus are immense as Captain and Auntie Bell. Their work can always be depended upon for cleverness.

Florence Deshon and Jack MacDonald do Mr. and Mrs. Leroy.

Marie Van Tassel has some of her customarily amusing village stuff as the gossip.

Others in the cast are: James E. Gibson, Ruth Wing, Edgar Wouthwall, Charles Milfield, Sigrid MacDonald and John Curry.

PREVIEW OF GOLDWYN PICTURE

A preview of "Buntie Pulls the Strings" was held Thursday night at the Neptune Theatre, Venice. Reginald Parker, who directed the production, was present, in company with Abraham Lehr, vice president; J. G. Hawks, scenario editor; M. D. Gardner, assistant to Mr. Lehr; other studio officials and several members of the cast.

ELIZABETH DU BARRY GILL

Who appears with Mitchell Lewis and Florence Turner in "Fool's Gold" at Broadway Pantages

"HARRIET AND THE PIPER"

Anita Stewart's latest First National release, "Harriet and the Piper," plays at the Kinema. The story, which is by Kathleen Norris, is a rather weak one dealing with the free love system of Greenwich Village. It is inconceivable that the plot of any tale should be based upon a more or less debatable dishonor which never existed. The idea that the heroine ceases to exist in that capacity, with her first misstep, is certainly not yet a pet idea of cinema fans. Nothing remains of this photoplay at its insipid finish. However, much expense was occasioned by the beautiful sets, and the cast is satisfactory.

The star will not be able to hold her popularity long in such productions. Her work is not so convincing as it was in the old days before she first retired from the screen.

Ward Crane walks off with most of the picture as Royal Blondin, the fascinating heavy. His interesting poise is probably his best asset.

Irving Cummings and Myrtle Stedman have a very few good scenes as Tony Pope and Isabelle Carter.

Charles Richman does Richard Carter. His work is clumsy in its lack of technique and he fails to gain sympathy for his role, although it is apparent that it should be so classified.

Byron Munson is rather well cast in the small part of Ward Carter, the impressionable juvenile.

Margaret Landis is also quite typical as Nina.

Loyola O'Connor and Barbara Deely are included in the cast.

"THE BRANDING IRON"

Goldwyn releases "The Branding Iron" at the California. Here is a picture, which, although it contains none of the day's big ideas, proves that the tense, consistent drama will always command interest and provide real entertainment. It is a story of nearly primitive natures, and those characterizations continue true to type. The cast is very good. The tinted night snow scenes are the most beautiful that we have witnessed. Percy Hilburn is to be congratulated.

Barbara Castleton displays all of her unusual ability as Joan Carver, mountain woman. She makes her character live and make its mistakes in the most human of manners.

James Kirkwood is equally good as Pierre Landis. This role is exactly opposite to the quiet, sweet spirited one which he enacted in "In the Heart of a Fool." He does the crudely honest, dominant rancher whose jealousy forms the plot, with mastery. His interpretation of that jealousy is wonderful.

Russell Simpson adds another laurel to his record of versatility as John Carver, the drunken father of the girl.

Richard Tucker offers a very interesting heavy in Prosper Gael. With subtleness, he shows to the audience a sinner, almost likeable in his human impulsiveness.

Sydney Ainsworth and Gertrude Astor are well cast as Jasper and Betty Moreno. Their parts are comparatively small.

Marion Colvin and Joan Standing have some entertaining business as Mrs. Upper and Maude.

Reginald Barker accomplished some unusual effects with his direction of the picture.

"THE HOPE"

Tally's Broadway runs the Metro production of "The Hope." It is a disappointment from almost every standpoint. The story's plot is an antiquated affair which is made still more dull by much dragged out and unmeaning action. Nor can the cast be credited with coming to the rescue. The performances are disinterested and the direction is poor. In this, the day of big themes and new twists, we have a right to demand more than this old time inefficiency in our screen entertainment.

Jack Mulhall plays Lord Ingestre, the male lead. The entire action centers around the question "Did he do it?" and not even the audience is kept guessing.

Marguerite de la Motte walks through the part of Lady Brenda in several dainty frocks.

Ruth Stonehouse does Olive Whitburn. She is not particularly well cast.

Frank Elliott is about the worst yet in the role of Hector Grant, double dyed villain, who unsuspectingly shifts letters in open envelopes. He provides the comedy of the otherwise drab piece.

Herbert Grimwood does the best work in the picture as Michael Whitburn. He offers a real characterization.

The cast is completed with Lillian Langdon, Maym Kelso, Capt. Arthur Clayton, J. P. Morse and Bobbie Mack.

Herbert Wenstrom is responsible for the direction.

PICKUPS BY THE STAFF

AFFILIATION OF LITERARY CLUBS WITH PHOTOPLAYWRIGHTS' LEAGUE

The Photoplaywrights' League of America, which has its headquarters in Los Angeles, has been invited to affiliate with the National Association of Literary Clubs.

There are said to be in the neighborhood of seventeen hundred literary clubs and leagues in the United States. More or less interest exists among all of them, in writing photoplays and numerous inquiries concerning conditions of membership have been received by the Photoplaywrights' League of America in response to a news item which recently appeared in the papers announcing the formation and purposes of the organization.

The Photoplaywrights' League intends to stimulate more interest in the writing of photoplays among the intelligent class of people who constitute the membership of the various literary societies, and hopes to open up a source of material for the photoplay which has in the past been comparatively dormant. At the same time, no individual who has the ambition to write and sell scenarios, will be barred from membership. A manuscript sales department and legal protection is afforded to all its members by the league.

Six sportsmen from the Goldwyn studios have returned from a three-day hunting trip on Baldwin Lake, where they bagged 175 ducks. The party included M. D. Gardner, Percy Hilburn, Jack Dunning, George Hoover, James Adamson and Alfred Middleton.

John Fleming Wilson's latest story, "Uncharted Seas," has been purchased by Metro, according to an announcement by Bayard Veiller. It is now being put into continuity form for immediate filming.

Herbert Brenon is to join Goldwyn. T. Hayes Hunter is starting his own company, having left Goldwyn. Sidney Olcott will also resign from Goldwyn after his present picture is completed here in New York.

Mrs. George Siler, widow of the sport expert, George Siler, has been visiting at the home of her nephew, Kalla Pasha, of the Mack Sennett forces. She left for her home in Chicago last Saturday.

W. W. Hawkins, of New York, president of the United Press, visited Thompson Buchanan, associate scenario editor at the Goldwyn studios, last week.

Neely Edwards has finished "Pajama Wedding," the first of a series of twelve two-reelers for the Special Pictures Corporation, and has the second well under way.

Fifteen assistant directors worked with Rex Ingram in the staging of the battle scenes for the Metro all-star production of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse."

Rumors that Mack Sennett is about to abandon the two-reel comedy field are met with emphatic denial from his publicity department.

Don Jarvis of the Universal property department, has invented a simple device which instantly manufactures cobwebs.

Hal Ferner has just completed his work for Metro in Viola Dana's latest vehicle, "An Off Shore Pirate."

Margery Wilson made some two-reel comedies for Reelcraft Pictures while in New York.

AN APPRECIATION

What is the greatest thing in life? Unselfishness! Doing good for others. Charity does not begin at home, but in the blessedness of humanity.

Who does not know that fine old character man, Tom Bates? A great misfortune has overtaken him. He is greatly in need of money. A week ago he underwent a very serious operation that will confine him to the hospital for weeks, perhaps months. The operation was so serious that it was thought possible that his leg would have to be amputated.

It is little enough we can do for our friends in misfortune. Poor Tom would greatly appreciate whatever help you can give. In a case of necessity, it is not the amount, even "the widow's mite" would be welcome. Think of the weeks of Tom's suffering; relieve his mind of worry. He has never before asked, but has always given.

We feel sure that any amount, no matter how large or small, will help to relieve his distressed condition. All contributions may be sent to Tom D. Bates, Clara Barton Hospital.

As we all love sunshine, bring a little of it into "Tom's" life.

Pietro Sosso.

Professional Notes

Universal scenario department has purchased the screen rights to Philip V. Miguel's well known novel, "Bruvver Jim's Baby," for Harry Carey's use. The scenario is being prepared by George C. Hull and it will probably be produced under the title of "If Only Jim."

The two serials, "The King of the Circus" and "The Diamond Queen," are fast approaching their final episodes. J. P. McGowan, directing Polo, promises the completion of the circus story within a week, while Edward Kull, directing Miss Sedgwick, is filming the fourteenth chapter.

AT LASKY'S

Roscoe Arbuckle has started work on "The Dollar a Year Man," an original by Walter Woods of the studio scenario staff. James Cruze is directing. With the start of this picture, an innovation in production methods has been introduced. Arbuckle will hereafter work with alternating directors, the two being James Cruze and Joseph Henabery.

Work is progressing upon "The Daughter of a Magnate," starring Wallace Reid, under the direction of Frank Urson.

George Melford has completed the location scenes for "The Faith Healer," and is now working at the studio.

William De Mille is getting on with "What every Woman Knows," by Sir James M. Barrie.

Jesse L. Lasky is due to return to the West Coast Studio by the middle of November.

ON TENTH EDGAR STORY

Mason N. Litson will start taking scenes for the tenth episode of Booth Tarkington's "Edgar" stories, Monday. The continuity for this episode was written by Elinor Flori and will tentatively be known as "Edgar's Country Cousin."

BEACH STORY BEING PREPARED

Rex Beach, president of the Goldwyn Eminent Authors, has completed an adaptation of his novel, "The Net," for the screen. The film version will be known as "The Vendetta."

Agnes Ayres, who recently completed work as leading woman in C. B. De Mille's production, "Forbidden Fruit," has been selected as Wallace Reid's leading feminine support in his latest picture.

Monte Blue is scheduled to return from New York where he is playing the featured role in the Charles Maigne production, "The Kentuckians," about November 15th.

Thomas Meighan and his director, Tom Forman, who are now at work on a picture at Long Island City, are not expected back until December.

Among the passengers arriving on the S.S. New York October 11th was H. D. Wood, general manager of the John D. Tippetts Productions, Ltd., of 37 Oxford Street, London. Mr. Wood brought with him the negative of the six-reel feature, "Hindle Wakes."

to the depths of things, going where the nourishment is greater, the soil richer. He would never be satisfied with superficial attainments. He writes the concentrative hand of a thinker. He connects words—showing argumentativeness, farsight, logic. The t-bars are full of strength, force and decision, and the writer shows secretiveness in the backcurling terminals, even on the t-bars, and the closed a's and o's which distinguish this handwriting.

Great creativeness is betrayed in the peculiar capitals in lower strokes of y and g, as seen in the body of his letter. He is original, emotional, very ambitious and is going to see everything to a good conclusion via his obstinacy, for the little hooks—like those of a crochet needle, fairly hooking themselves into the paper—show that he sticks by his work and his convictions and that he's going to win or die in the attempt. The t-bars corroborate this, being very heavy at the finish. The i-dots are idealistic, floating high shaped like comets, indicating quick inspirations. The writer may be quite talkative but entirely uncommunicative. Many musical curves show in this talented hand, as well as good head for business. Investments should prosper under Mr. MacDonald's supervision.

2. JULIAN L. LAMOTHE: Scenario Writer

This signature shows immense pride and self-restraint, for the capital J fairly swells out to the extent where one wants to put buttons on its little shirtfront. The letter leans back strongly, betraying reticence and secretiveness, self-sufficiency. The capitals are plain and unornamented, betraying a great love of elegance, luxury and beauty and a freedom from vanity which is rather unusual nowadays.

Mr. Lamothe is a trained thinker, beginning all words without an upstroke, this device being time and energy saving, and showing that he gets right down to the main point of a theme or argument—working from sound premises. This trait should certainly be of immense benefit to a continuity writer. He is retrospective, for many letters curl backward. The letters are often separated, which means that the young man is intuitive as well as logical in his deductions, and he writes the concentrative hand of one who loves to study, who lives in the mental realm. The downturning stems of the capital L's show just a touch of obstinacy, which ought to be beneficial in any line of work, keeping the writer sticking to his task until well accomplished, making it difficult to overrule his objections or to lead him save by sympathy and affection.

3. L. W. JEFFERY, Whittier State School, Calif.

This is a very spontaneous handwriting, showing quick temper and bright inspirations, sudden changes of mood, a very sensitive, high-strung nature, originality, talent for mechanics, acting, music, salesmanship, but so much restlessness that the writer is not going to fulfil his ambitions until he specializes and becomes self-controlled. He is of the nervous type, ambitious but not concentrative. He is farsighted, intuitive, observant, likes to learn from experience and hates nagging or advice.

4. LILLIAN MARTIN:

This hand loves elegance and beauty, is fond of self-adornment, very discriminating in making intimacies, particular about the sort of men who take her out. She is punctual in her business dealings, inspirational, has lots of energy and initiative, is positive even a bit obstinate, for you notice that the L stroke goes below the line—which means, "I've put my foot down, what are you going to do about it?" On the other hand, Miss Martin may be led by love, she has a good sense of humor, is a very industrious worker, concentrative, bright, imaginative, practical—yet of the artistic trend of thought. She would excel as clerk, bank teller or saleswoman.

5. PAULA R. FISHER:

This is a very intuitive, impressionistic hand, and the middle name betrays this jumping at conclusions, with its separated letters. The whole writing is very light—showing a nature far more spiritual and super-earthly than material in its love and tendencies. She is highly conscientious, too unselfish and generous for her own good, can't accumulate money or property, and leaves her s's open so wide at the bottom that they are a mirror of the way she handles her purse. Money is always leaving her—time is given freely to her friends, and she gets few rewards. She is impractical, idealistic, quick-witted, jumps at conclusions, saves time. The hand is very analytical and the writer would make a good medium, palmist, clairvoyant-analyst, church worker, police matron, and so on. She should be in humanitarian work. She is intensely sympathetic and loving and no one appeals to her in vain for aid.

HANK MANN ENTERTAINS EXHIBITORS FROM N. E.

Three New England exhibitors, who were on their way this week to San Francisco on business, stopped in Los Angeles long enough to pay Hank Mann a visit at his studios in Hollywood. After making the personal acquaintance of the comedian, the exhibitors were taken through the studios and later watched the filming of scenes for the comedian's newest fun film, "Hold 'Em, Yale." They were George Williams of the Strand, of Rhode Island; Harry Turner of the Rialto, Waterbury, Conn., and Jack Eddie of the Empire, Boston. They are considering the purchase and construction of theatres in California, it is stated.

Fred Caldwell has returned from a two month's business trip to the East, and announces that he has resigned as director for the Union Label Film Company, and has accepted a contract with Mr. Milliken of the Union Film Corporation of the K. Hoddy Productions to direct Alexander Alt in a series of comedies.

Want Beauty?

To possess beauty is worth more to woman than the rarest of pearls and rubies, the dearest of silks and seals, the finest of laces and plumes. Beauty is woman's greatest asset and power; through it she wins and holds the world.

Womanly beauty is triune in nature: physical, mental, spiritual.

Tell me, gentle reader, are you beautiful? Can you claim all the attributes of perfect womanliness?

Have you an abundance of strong, healthy, lustrous hair? A clean, clear, fresh, velvety complexion? Large, bright, expressive eyes? Pretty brows? Long, dark lashes? A full, shapely mouth? Red, moist lips? Ivory teeth? A throat that resembles a lily in its whiteness and grace and feels like a rose petal to the touch of human hand? Hands soft and delicate? Bust, arms, shoulders well developed? Figure graceful? Carriage queenly?

Have you a physical personality that appeals to everyone? Do you spell sweet loveliness and grace? Do they find you womanly and charming? Do you know how to unfold the hidden beauty that lies within yourself? (Oh, yes, there is such a thing!) Do you know how to overcome the various faults and shortcomings of your physical make-up? Does each day find you growing in grace and beauty as it was meant for you by your Creator?

Mlle. Wladyslawa Tytkowska in Native Dress of Her Country—Poland

If not, why not? You were meant to be perfect, why be faultful? You were meant to be sweet, lovely, attractive; why be otherwise?

I will tell you. It is so because you do not know different. You don't know how to overcome your present lack of beauty, and how to supplant physical imperfections with their perfect opposites. You either accept neglect and old age as your natural share in life, which is by no means so, or resort to the wrong ideas of beauty culture and receive little or no result.

But I can help you. I have devoted many years to the study of personal culture in all its phases: physical, mental, spiritual. It is through this wonderful study that I did overcome my own numerous shortcomings and homeliness and gained considerable perfection and beauty in many forms; and I will gladly teach you what I have learned and do for you what has been done for me. I will make you what you wish to be; nay, I will make you what you were meant to be—a physically perfect and beautiful woman. That is, if you will let me. Please let me. The world is so full of beauty, why not reflect some of it in yourself? The whole universe manifests the ever-present, eternal law of perfect beauty; why shouldn't you? This world will be better and happier for it if you will.

I want you to see me and talk with me a half an hour. I want your acquaintance and patronage. I want to improve you even as I have improved myself and others. Life is always before us; why not make the most of it in every way? My knowledge, the sum total of many years of study, struggle and experience, is yours to obtain and gain by.

Ship Repairing, a Profitable Business

One of the most important phases of the business of the Los Angeles Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company is its ship repair business. The need for a repair plant in this location has been very pressing. The Company's new 12,000-ton dry dock, built at a cost of approximately $1,250,000, affords the only dry dock facilities between the Canal and San Francisco.

The splendid equipment of this Company at San Pedro will do much to increase the value of the port, especially in face of the international trade that is now rapidly developing.

In addition to the dry dock, the properties of the Company consist of extensive buildings, plants, machinery and valuable lease rights. Their value is estimated at $4,844,623. A first mortgage on these properties is the security back of the 8% Serial Gold Bonds of this Company. Total assets are over $8,300,000, or more than six times this issue. Net quick assets must be maintained at 125% of outstanding bonds.

The bonds are exempt from personal property taxes in California and from normal Federal Income Tax not to exceed 4%. Serial retirement of bonds from 1921 to 1930 operates to increase constantly the already large equity in property.

We recommend these bonds for your investment as a sound, profitable security. Call at our office today, write or phone for full information.

The price of these bonds is 100 and interest for all maturities, to yield 8%. Get full information today.

AN UNSATISFACTORY PROCEDURE

There are approximately two dozen agencies in Los Angeles whose business it is to place, and keep placed, those of our actors who, for professional reasons, do not feel that they can afford to spend their leisure time "job hunting." For this service the offices handling these engagements charge a commission, usually on a ten per cent basis.

Their profit comes from the actor. However, they depend for their demand upon the director who needs assistance in filling his casts. He will naturally choose the outfit which has accomplished the best results for him in the past; and, as has already been intimated, competition in this line is very strong. Thus the mission of the agent is to also please the producer in his choice. Directly due to a recently formed policy, he has failed in this, if complaints are to be credited.

Given a part to fill, he will, with comparatively small effort, telephone a dozen or more actors to report for an interview with the casting director who has given the order. Of course, it is fairly safe for the agent to figure that some one of the number receiving his ring will be chosen, and his ten per cent is cinched. This is obviously a much easier and surer method than that of taking a chance upon the selection of one or two individuals, even if they really are suitable for the role in hand.

But it is this "safe" practice which is at the bottom of the growing unpopularity of the agent, both at the studios and with the men and women of the profession.

It is only natural that the director finds it extremely annoying to have to interview a large representation of the population of Hollywood when he has a part to fill. This is especially true when perhaps three-fourths of that company fit the type desired in no particular whatsoever. Time to him is money, and such a performance unnecessarily wastes an alarming amount of both.

Meanwhile the artists who, for the most part, have been sent out upon blind quests, feel cheapened when they are reported unsuitable for the work in mind. In addition to the exhaustion of their time and patience, they have failed to meet requirements, which is certainly not flattering, even though someone else is at fault.

Even the man who procures the engagement does not experience satisfaction. It is now up to him to pay his agent's commission, and what for? Ten per cent of his salary must go, in many cases, for the telephone call from the office which sent him, not alone, but with much competition, to the studio. His part has been procured only by his type and known ability. He could not conscientiously resent the money payment were he convinced that his representatives had earned it, after recognizing his fitness, by using their influence concentratedly for him. This knowledge is rarely his, however.

This system of commercial casting is one which might easily make itself indispensable to the industry, but it must watch its corners. Upon the long way around which may seem involved depends the continuation of its usefulness.

TIME TO VOTE

It is the duty of every person connected with the motion picture industry to get out Tuesday and vote in a manner that will for all time settle the political position of that industry before the world and Hollywood.

Naturally, there will be as many differences in opinion with regard to national issues among us as among any other class, but locally we must hang together. Hal Wilson is the profession's choice for State Assemblyman from the Sixty-third District, and he will undoubtedly receive full support.

Our attention has also been called to Amendment No. 17 on the ballot, which also should be of especial interest to all actors. It has to do with absent voters, and "authorizes legislative provision permitting registered voters absent from their voting precincts at any election, because of occupation requiring travel, to vote in their home precincts prior to election."

New York has passed this law, and for the first time actors away from home on election day are able to vote.

It is our privilege to control our own district, and we will be just plain darn fools if we don't.

AMERICAN DIRECTOR GETTING STALE?

And here comes the Billboard with a surprise for us! We wonder how many real pictures their critic has seen recently, for we can agree with him not much. However, he hits a note of interest concerning our foreign trade. Judging from the eighteen-months-old productions which we understand are being thrust upon Europe, we can readily see why there should be discontent. But isn't it a bit unfair to attempt a comparison of any two years of pictures thus far? Kindly remember we are young.

"The American director today excels in two big points: First, the creation of atmosphere, and, second, lighting effects. The continued hold of the American picture on the foreign market is to be accounted for largely on these two points of excellence.

"In the matter of stories we are not only standing still, but we are actually going back. Deep are the ruts worn by the similarity of plots. Many of the scenarios are painfully reminiscent of the single-reel era of productions. There's nothing 'big' in the stories; nothing from real life.

"If there is no change for the better, if we continue to lack strength and originality in plots and in the treatment of plots, we will not only lose our foreign markets, even if the exchange again approximates the normal; we will also suffer from the competition of the foreign-made film.

"The American director is in danger of getting stale."

NEXT STEWART PRODUCTION TO BE MADE HERE

Edwin Carewe has arrived home from New York and is authority for the statement that Anita Stewart will soon return to California to begin the picturization of a story from the pen of Jane Murfin, author of "Lilac Time." It will be an adaptation of "The Tornado," but will probably bear another title before it reaches the screen.

Mr. Carewe's visit to New York was a hurried one, as he left Los Angeles but a fortnight ago. His activities in the Eastern metropolis consisted of a conference with Louis B. Mayer, and a visit with Associated First National officials, who release the Anita Stewart productions.

TO MAKE COMEDIES OF FOX CARTOONS

Associated First National Pictures, Inc., announce that they have concluded arrangements with the Betzwood Film Company for the release of a series of comedies adapted from the cartoons by Fontaine Fox.

The first release will be titled "The Toonerville Trolley—That Meets All Trains." The Fox characters will be enacted by Dan Mason, Wilna Wild, Helen Gerould, William Randall and Irma Irving.

First National will release one of the "Toonerville Trolley" series each month. The first comedy will go to the exhibitors this week.

NEILAN COMPANY RETURNS

Marshall Neilan and his company of players have returned from Glacier Park, Montana, where they spent three weeks in the wilds, filming the outdoor scenes for "Not a Drum Was Heard," the newest Neilan-First National production.

Work on the interiors for this production will start in a day or so, when Mr. Neilan has assembled the balance of the cast necessary for the portrayal of the story.

ACORD TO MAKE WESTERN FOR SPECIAL

With Art Acord as the star, the Special Pictures Corporation this week entered the two-reel western field of production. Eighteen two reels will be released yearly by the company that has previously specialized in comedies and scenics.

Acord began work this week. Walter De Coursey, formerly of Fox, will handle the megaphone for the western productions. J. Anthony Roach is the staff scenario writer. "Bullets of Justice" is the title of the first story.

SANTCHI BACK FROM LOCATION

Director Robert Bradbury, of the Cyrus J. Williams Co., has returned with his troupe from location at Red Rock Canyon, near Mojave, where scenes were made for the sixth picture of their series starring Tom Santchi. Bradbury is assisted by Jack Pierce, while B. Longnacker and Ralph Cross handle the camera. Art direction is in the hands of W. E. Silsby. Production will be continued at the company's studio in Hollywood, formerly used by the Brentwood Film Company.

TO FEATURE BRADBURY TWINS

The Pathe company announces the beginning of a new one-reel series of boy stories to be produced by Cyrus J. Williams of Los Angeles, to be called "The Adventures of Bill and Bob."

The series will feature the eleven-year-old twin sons of Director Robert N. Bradbury.

TO MAKE AERIAL SCENICS

An aeroplane trip around the world for the purpose of taking a series of motion pictures from the clouds, which will be made into serial scenics of the principal cities of the world, will be accomplished by Captain Theodore L. Tibbs, formerly of the British Royal Air Force and now a captain in the aviation division of the New York City police department. He left New York on Oct. 23d from the Columbia Yacht Club landing, 86th street and North River, in a flying boat of the Aeromarine Plane Company, on the first leg of his world tour.

Capt. Tibbs is accompanied by James W. Morse, camera operator.

HALLROOM BOYS WORKING AT SPECIAL STUDIOS

From now on the Hallroom Boys comedies are to be produced at the studio of the Special Pictures Corporation, according to announcement made this week. The Wilnat Film Company, recently organized with Marion Kohn as president, is now sponsoring the adventures of Ferdie and his chum, and henceforth the Hallroom Boys comedies will be released by the C. B. C. Motion Picture Sales Company, of which Joe Brandt is president.

Harry McCoy and Sid Smith are to be starred in the title roles under the new arrangement, with Gilbert Pratt and H. J. Raymaker directing.

Reed Heustis and James Colwell are adapting for screen purposes the former's stage play, "The Eternal Three," which was originally produced by Oliver Morosco with the Burbank stock company, in which Marjorie Rambeau, Brian Beasley and Dave Hartford were the featured players.

AT BRUNTON

Work was completed this week on the sixth episode of Ruth Roland's latest Pathe serial, "The Avenging Arrow," and production of the seventh will begin immediately. Edward Hearn is playing opposite the star in this picture.

The technical department of the Brunton studios is erecting a lighthouse set on the coast near Del Monte, California, for Mary Pickford's latest United Artists production, "A Flame in the Dark." An Italian fishing village is also being built at Point Firmin, near San Pedro harbor. Frances Marion is directing the star in this picture.

Robert Brunton returned to the Brunton studios in Los Angeles this week after nearly a month's business sojourn in New York, where he conferred with distributors regarding the production of a new series of Brunton features.

AT THE ASTRA STUDIOS

Doris Pawn will be starred in a forthcoming Robertson-Cole feature, directed by L. J. Gasnier.

"Dynamite," a Hamilton-White Mermaid comedy, starring "Ham" Hamilton, has been booked by Gore Bros. and Lesser for a showing at the Kinema, starting Saturday, October 30th.

Ray Berger, who produced "Punty," with Audrey Monson, has left the Hamilton-White forces to go on the road in a vaudeville.

L. J. Gasnier, who is associated with Lloyd "Ham" Hamilton and Jack White, producing Mermaid Comedies at the Astra Studios, plans a re-organization this week of the Astra forces.

LOEW GOES NORTH

Marcus Loew, chairman of Metro's board of directors, who has been at the company's studios in Hollywood for the past week, left Sunday for San Francisco, where he will spend several days conferring with Ackerman and Harris, his West Coast representatives. Mr. Loew also plans to stop in Stockton, Sacramento and all other cities where he has theatres under construction. While in San Francisco, Mr. Loew will be the guest of honor at a luncheon tendered him by West Coast exhibitors.

"BLACKMAIL"

Metro releases "Blackmail," a Viola Dana vehicle, at Tally's Broadway. The story is one of those rare examples of an old plot with an entirely new climax, which will cause the public, at present fed up on stereotyped screen plays, much relief. The entire play is entertaining in spite of a somewhat draggy start, and is the best opportunity that the star has had in several months. The cast is good.

As already intimated, Miss Dana has a role unusually suited to her personality. She takes full advantage of it, and reminds us of the days when few screen ingenues could hold a candle to her cleverness. This time she plays a rather precocious little blackmailer.

Wyndham Standing is delightful as Richard Harding, one of the few modern men as yet depicted on the screen.

Alfred Allen has a few good scenes as Harry Golden.

Edward Cecil plays Larry, and Florence Turner is Lena. They form a rather competent opposition.

Lydia Knott is very good as Mrs. Venable, and Jack Roi is well cast as her grandson.

Fred Kelsey plays the police inspector.

Dallas M. Fitzgerald directed the production.

"OFFICER 666"

Goldwyn's adaptation of the stage farce "Officer 666" shows at the California Theatre. The scenario will never be accused of lack of action, as it about breaks all records for fast movement. But it is at all times lucid and on the whole is entertaining. The sub-titles are quite clever.

Tom Moore is Travers Gladwin, the featured lead. His performance is typical and somewhat of a relief from the comedy attempts of his brothers, Owen and Matt.

Jeanne Calhoun is Helen, the female lead. Much is expected of the feminine in farce, even the ingenue.

Jerome Patrick is well cast, and quite clever as Alf Wilson, picture thief.

Raymond Hatton, as usual, precipitates considerable mirth in the role of Whitney Barnes, and Priscilla Bonner compares more than favorably with the lead as Sadie, a sort of guardian angel cousin to Helen, and, incidentally, the sweetheart of the amiable Mr. Barnes.

Kate Lester plays Mrs. Burton in her most majestic of manners.

George Kuwa is particularly funny as Bateato.

Harry Dickinson, Hardee Kirkland and M. B. Flynn are all good as various members of the police force.

Harry Beaumont handled the farce very well indeed.

In preparing the continuity for Monroe Salisbury's "Practice What You Preach," Reed Heustis and James Colwell arranged to have each scene written upon a separate card, with cards of distinctive colors used for the various sequences.

MOORE TO DO GUNTER PLAY

"Mr. Barnes of New York," by Archibald Clavering Gunter, will be Tom Moore's next starring vehicle for Goldwyn. Victor Schertzinger will direct. Gerald C. Duffy is adapting the story to the screen.

Current Reviews

"THE BRANDED WOMAN"

Joseph Schenck presents Norma Talmadge in "The Branded Woman" this week at the Kinema. The story's plot is as antiquated as they get, and is unrelieved by new angles, but it has considerable of what is always considered entertainment value and will undoubtedly get by with the star's admirers. The sets are exceptional.

Norma Talmadge has fairly won her position as the most popular American dramatic actress on the screen today. As Ruth Sawyer she offers the public another clever characterization, particularly in her interpretation of the heroine in her youth. Later she swings the somewhat lame situations by the sheer strength of her personality. Provided with wonderful stories, we consider her capable of anything.

Percy Marmont, a newcomer to the cinema, makes a very interesting role of Douglas Courtenay. He is an unusual type of leading man.

George Fawcett walks away with the comedy unassisted, as Judge Whitlock, Ruth Sawyer's grandfather. His is a personality that has never yet been duplicated and he can be depended upon to produce audible amusement in any audience, at will.

Vincent Serrano is satisfactory in the part of "Velvet" Clarke, gambler and blackmailer.

Grace Studdiford displays possibilities as "Dot" Belmont, although she is not particularly well cast.

Gaston Glass has the unimportant part of William Bolton, a character that is dropped without sufficient reason in the scenario.

Others in the cast are: Edna Murphy, H. J. Carvel, Charles Lane, Sidney Herbert, Edouard Durand and Henrietta Floyd.

Albert Parker directed the production.

"YOU NEVER CAN TELL"

Bebe Daniels makes her screen debut as a star in "You Never Can Tell," showing at Clune's Broadway. Her support is undoubtedly the most interesting thing about the production which is a fanciful tale of poverty and princes. The art titles are particularly good. They are by Gene Ross.

The star means a great deal less in drama than she did in comedy, and she means less as a star than she did as a supporting lead.

Jack Mulhall is romantically cast as the male lead.

Milla Davenport and Graham Pettie are very good as the star's mother and father, Mrs. and Mr. Jones. Considering character the Mrs. in this case comes first.

Leo White cleverly plays another French modiste, M. Brian in this story.

Harold Goodwin has the droll youth, Jimmy Glannery, to interpret, which he does very well, and Gertrude Short plays an interesting bit.

Neely Edwards very cleverly characterizes the mysterious stranger, but she is given so much footage that the picture is thrown out of balance.

Edward Martindale and Helen Dunbar each have a good part.

"ALWAYS AUDACIOUS"

Wallace Reid plays at Grauman's Million Dollar Theatre in an adaptation of the Saturday Evening Post story by Ben Ames Williams, entitled "Tour de la Audace."

The star plays dual roles in a somewhat new and quite interesting fashion. He would be much more convincing as hero and heavy, however, had he not been permitted to wear the same costumes as both characters, when doing double exposure. At any rate he is successful in keeping the identity of each part clear with really clever differentiation.

Margaret Loomis improves in each Paramount picture in which she appears, it seems. In any event, she is delightful as Camilla White, the feminine lead.

Clarence Gelart is satisfactory as Theron Ammidown.

J. M. Dumont, Rhea Haines and Carmen Phillips form the villain's chief support as Joey the Gent, Denver Kate, and Mollie the Eel, all of which sounds rather promising.

Guy Oliver and Fannie Midgely complete the cast.

Jimmie Cruze directed.

WESTERN PICTURES GETS SPANISH FILM

"The Toreador," made in Madrid, Spain, and showing many of the celebrated bull fighters in action during "Queen's Day" in Madrid, has been taken over by Irving Lesser of the Western Pictures Exploitation Company. The film is in four reels and is said to be full of action. Within a week's time nearly all of the state rights have been disposed of, according to Lesser.

LESSER AND BEBAN LEAVE FOR NEW YORK

Sol Lesser and George Beban left for New York City Thursday. They will first go North where Mr. Lesser will confer with San Francisco and Seattle film representatives. Immediately upon reaching New York, Lesser will arrange distribution matters for George Beban's latest photo-production, "One Man in a Million." Mr. Beban will be joined by Mrs. Beban and little "Bob White" Beban. They expect to remain in the eastern metropolis over the holidays.

NEW YORK NEWS

By J. J. Livingston

Charles Gerrard is quite a busy man these days at the Famous Players-Lasky studio in Long Island City.

Gladys Leslie has just returned from the South, where she completed her latest production with the Cosmopolitan Films, Inc.

The American Cinema Corporation will resume production activity shortly at the Biograph with Mollie King as their star.

Louis J. Selznick has returned from a trip to Chicago and Pittsburg after having arranged for new headquarters in both cities.

Zena Keefe will be seen playing the leading feminine role in the latest Ralph Ince-Selznick production, entitled "The Red Foam."

Maxwell Karger has started work on the Maxwell Karger productions starring Bert Lytell. The first story will be entitled "A Message from Mars."

John Adolphi has arrived in New York with a print of Mae Marsh's latest production, entitled "A Little Fraid Lady," a Robertson-Cole production.

The American Bioscope Company, with Allan Hale as its general manager, is arranging to construct at Tampa a film city with every modern convenience.

William Fox starts working on a new addition to this present studio building at 56th street and 10th avenue. It will be used mainly for the expansion of the executive offices.

Julia Swayne Gordon has completed a picture with Dorothy Dalton under the direction of Frank Reicher at the Famous Players-Lasky studio, Long Island City.

Arthur S. Friend, who has been treasurer and counsel for the Famous Players, has sent in his resignation to that company. It is understood that Mr. Friend will go back to practicing law.

Dora Mills Adams is spending a great deal of time on Fifth Avenue these days, arranging for costumes that she will be called upon to wear in the part she is to play in "Determination."

The gross business of Paramount from September 5th to September 11th reached $1,012,262.40. Independent producers, please notice. Is the motion picture worth while, or is it not?

Arthur Donaldson, star and general director of his own productions, has been on a hunting trip up in the Maine woods and has returned to New York ready to start his new production, entitled "The Sun Valley."

In large twenty-four sheets posted about the town we have the announcement of an additional star who is entering motion pictures. His name is Hon. James Thornton, and he is one of our best known vaudevilleans.

The United States Photoplay Corporation, headed by Captain F. F. Stoll, president, marched from the Pennsylvania railroad station to the tune of "Determination," to their new executive offices at 225 West 44th St., New York City.

Florida is at last taking a step forward in trying to get the producers in the East to go down there and make their productions. Should any producer or director in California desire to work at Tampa, communication with the writer will give them full and complete details of the studios, equipment, etc.

ARTHUR MILLET

Playing John Hayden in "Drag Harlan"

Winifred Sheehan has left for California, to look over William Fox's companies now working on the Coast.

The free lance picture directors are all idle again in New York, waiting for new outfits to start.

Lionel Barrymore's latest picture, "The Devil's Garden," will be shown at the Strand Theatre next week. It is directed by Kenneth Webb.

Belle Bennett has made good here in New York as a stage star. Al Woods has signed her up for four years longer. Louise Orth is another movie star in Broadway plays.

"Wild" Billy Haddock is assisting Edward Hemmer in his second independent production in which Coit Albertson plays one of the principal leads, as does Howard Hall.

Ralph Ince and Maxwell Karger of Metro have been in several important conferences of late, and the wisecracks of Broadway are wondering whether Ralph will affix his signature to the contract offered him.

There are nine directors busily engaged at the Astoria Famous Players Studio. This is about the only real activity in the picture game here. Emile Chautard has started a Florence Reed production for F. Zeigfeld at the old World studio in West Fort Lee, also.

They say there are more efficiency experts in the new Astoria Famous Players studios than there are working people. There is some contention, too, over this. Efficiency experts are all right in sweat shops, but not in the picture studio, if results are sought. Art and time clocks never worked together. That has been tried and proven.

THINGS YOU WON'T READ ANYWHERE ELSE

By Frank P. Donovan

Charlie Chaplin, since he has been in New York, has been ducking process servers like he used to duck custard pies. Last week he made his getaway from the Ritz Carlton Hotel after nine days captivity, but after he played the big town with Brother Sid and rode in a taxi all night, failing to locate a place to lay his head, he accepted the kind hospitality of the chauffeur and slept with the chauffeur's kid brother in Trinity Street, the Bronx, N. Y. He told the chauffeur who he was, etc., and when the kid brother, who was a rabid Chaplin fan, awoke to go to school his ma conveyed the news to him that he had slept alongside of Charlie. Now the kid is the pet of the neighborhood. His name is Willie Weinstock. Charlie has since made up sufficiently with his better half to be able to make the rounds of the Broadway cabarets without being handed a summons. He says Mildred only wants fifty-fifty of what he's got. He says he ought to get fifty-fifty of what she has, as he is "financially broke and out of a job." He may sail for bloomin' Hingland, if he can.

Billy Quirk, who used to act in comedies is now affiliated with Betts & Fowler, in the Fitzgerald building.

Burton King may go with Robertson-Cole to direct special features. Jack Adolphi, who recently made a Mae Marsh picture in Hollywood for R-C, is back on Broadway again.

Bill Turner, whom everyone on the West coast knows, is suffering from an attack of neuritis at his quarters in the Green Room Club. He is one of the featured players of the picture, "Determination."

Robert Ellis is being sued by Selznick for breach of contract. Bob, it is said, wallowed Myron on the jaw some weeks ago and now the split. The sympathy is all with Bob here in New York.

Paul Maske is now chief cutter for the Swedish Bioscope, Reelcraft, Nick Carter Pictures, Muriel Ostriche Comedies and Erbograp. He used to cut all the Vitagraph Comedies. He is affiliated with Tom Brett.

Johnny MacCutcheon's mother is very ill. The best physicians obtainable are in daily attendance. Johnny is the director of the Captain Stoll picture, "Determination," and is a well liked fellow.

D. W. Griffith has been offered an interest in an independent company if he will supervise the pictures produced. From all accounts he is seriously considering the proposition.

Harry Franklin, the director, is to be found daily at the Green Room Club, renewing old acquaintances before starting again to shoot movies. There are a lot of Green Roomers going to the Coast to duck the snow and ice this winter.

Arctic City, Port Henry, situated on Lake Champlain, is now in readiness to accommodate any producer or director taking pictures of the frozen north. Arctic City is unique in every way, having more than 45 Eskimo dogs, and in fact, everything that is necessary to the producer can be had there. Rex Beach's "Northwind's Malice" was photographed there, and it might be worth while for directors to see this picture.

AT UNIVERSAL

Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran have begun work on the fifth of their comedy features, "The Awful Night," again from the pen of Edgar Franklin.

Under the direction of Norman Dawn, "White Youth," in which Edith Roberts is starring, is progressing towards its climax. Following its completion she will make "Hidden Fires," written by Mr. Dawn.

After three weeks spent in the San Gabriel Canyon and two weeks on sets at Universal City, Reeves Eason promises the early completion of his latest production, "Gold and the Woman."

Frank Mayo's latest feature, "Tiger," is taking shape, under the guidance of Jacques Jaccard.

Harry Carey is working on his own story, "Burning Embers," under Val Paul's direction.

Stuart Paton announces that he is working on the final scenes of "Out of the Sunset."

Erich Von Stroheim is still engaged on "Foolish Wives."

Eddie Polo has filmed the final episode of his eighteen-chapter serial, "The Circus King," under the direction of J. P. McGowan, and will leave for Havana in a few days. Edward Kull is at work on the twelfth episode of "The Diamond Queen," the story by Jacques Futelle, starring Eileen Sedgwick.

In her next Universal feature, "The White Peacock Feather," Carmel Myers will probably be directed by Rollin Sturgeon, the man who supervised her first two features.

At the request of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, the Park to Park party, blazing a trail between all the national parks under the auspices of the Department of the Interior, was entertained at Universal City recently. The party watched scenes being filmed by Lyons and Moran, and Edith Roberts. They also had themselves photographed on Von Stroheim's $100,000 Monte Carlo set.

WITH THE B. B. HAMPTON FORCES

Howard Hickman replaces Jack Conway as director in Benjamin B. Hampton productions. Mr. Hickman's next will be "There Was a King in Egypt," adapted by Elliott Clauson from the novel by Norma Lorimer. He is assisted by Eliot Howe, former director for Frank Keenan. Camera work starts within a week.

Norris Mumper of the Benjamin B. Hampton organization has returned from New York and again is at his desk as studio manager. Mr. Mumper journeyed to the metropolis to confer with W. W. Hodkinson, head of the releasing company through which the Hampton product is distributed, concerning future productions which are being made for that corporation. Besides a number of photoplays completed but not yet released, several novels from the authors under contract with Mr. Hampton are in continuity.

"PECK'S BAD BOY" COMPANY WILL SOON RETURN TO L. A.

According to a telegram received from Nate Watt, directing Jackie Coogan in "Peck's Bad Boy," the entire Peck company will leave Pleasanton within a few days for Los Angeles, where work on interiors will commence in the Louis B. Mayer studios.

"The Soft Boiled Yegg" is the title that has been given to Chester Conklin's second Special Pictures Corporation comedy, which was originally christened "Who Am I?"

Alice Lake has started work on "Mother Love," her new starring picture. Wesley Ruggles is directing.

AT THE LASKY STUDIO

George Melford will travel northward this week to the hills back of Fresno, California, with his company on location for his production, "The Faith Healer."

Wallace Reid, under the direction of Frank Ursch, making a picture based on the story by Frank H. Spearman entitled, "The Daughter of a Magnate," left this week for the Yosemite Valley where special water scenes will be secured.

Elliott Dexter has returned from a vacation in the state of Washington and, it is understood, will shortly resume work in a new picture.

The new cutting room at the Lasky studio is now completed and in a few days eight directors will be accommodated in the new quarters.

Sir Gilbert Parker and Penrhyn Stanlaws, famous British author and American artist respectively, are spending practically all their time at the Studio watching production in the making.

Arthur J. Messier is collaborating with John P. McCarthy on a story soon to be put into continuity by Mr. Messier. The John P. McCarthy Productions expect to begin shooting in three or four weeks.

Eddie Baker, formerly in stock at the Christie studios, this week signed a long-term contract with the Special Pictures Corporation whereby he will play the heavy in a series of forthcoming pictures to be produced by that organization.

GAIETY COMEDIES START AGAIN

After a lapse of a few months, production on the series of Gaiety Comedies was resumed last week at the Christie studios. James Clemens, who directed the pictures originally and who has been assisting Al Christie in the direction of five and seven-reel specials at the studio during the postponement, is again handling the megaphone for the stories.

Eva Lewis is playing a character part with Frank Mayo in "Tiger," Universal.

C. B. C. ANNOUNCES WESTERN FOR STATES' RIGHTS

UNEARTHING OLD BOOKS FOR SCREEN

Members of the Photoplaywrights' League of America are urged to delve into attics, old libraries and second-hand bookstores for musty old books or magazines, which may contain the germ of an idea for a screen production.

This does not mean that P. L. A. members will be discouraged from submitting original stories, however.

HERBERT STANDING TAKEN ILL

At the eleventh hour, Herbert Standing, who was cast as old man Peck in the forthcoming "Peck's Bad Boy" production, was forced to retire from that cast, due to his ill health. Mr. Standing has been working very hard this season and his illness is in the form of a nervous breakdown. Nate Watt, directing "Peck's Bad Boy," made hurried arrangements for George Pierce to assume the role.

THOMPSON GOES EAST

President Louis W. Thompson of the Special Pictures Corporation, will leave for New York this week end for conferences with Max Roth, eastern division manager, and Frank Marshall, central division executive. From New York he will start on a tour of the various exchanges owned and controlled by Special.

John Griffith Wray is finishing production on "Magic Life," for Thomas H. Ince.

Tom Santschi is in the Sierra Nevada mountains, finishing the sixth of a series of Westerns for Pathe.

Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., the "millionaire reporter" of the New York Times, has been making the rounds of the Hollywood studios.

Nils Boufeng, distributor of foreign films in Norway and Sweden, was a recent visitor at the Metro studios in Hollywood as a guest of Alice Lake.

William H. Crane will make Hollywood his future home. Mr. Crane has just returned from San Francisco, where he spent three months.

The Colorado River desert has been chosen to represent the African Sahara in the desert scenes of Ben Hampton's latest production, "There Was a King in Egypt."

A unique feature in the home which Joseph De Grasse and his wife, Ida May Park, are building in Glendale, Calif., is an absolutely sound-proof room.

Bayard Veiller has departed for New York where he expects to secure a number of stories for future Metro productions. He will return in about three weeks.

Edward Jobson of the Metro stock company is rapidly recovering from the effects of a serious operation on his face.

In the cast of "The Girl in the Taxi," Mr. and Mrs. Carter De Haven's cinema production, now being directed by Lloyd Ingraham, are several members of the original cast of the stage success.

S. M. Tompkins, head of the Universal camera department, has arranged to manufacture all the tripods used by the studio's cinema machines. About forty Bell and Howell cameras are in constant use at Universal, and owing to the rough usage received on location work the tripods must be constantly renewed.

Director Casts Unwisely

We were speaking to a big producer the other day, whose complaint was that he is suffering from the effects of having two supposedly satisfactory actors fall down upon one straight part. He admitted that he had engaged them both without personally knowing their work, but, considering that their names are continually before the profession in the trade journals and newspapers as artists of ability, he had no reason to imagine that either of them might not be equal to his really simple role. In proving themselves rotten actors, however, they had wasted thousands of dollars and much of the director's enthusiasm.

A casting director, or a director who casts, besides being a business man, must possess the ability to discriminate between an actor and a would-be picture performer, regardless of which has accomplished the greater amount of publicity, if he is to succeed in this day of all-star productions. He must know, in common with all newspaper people, that any "diplomatic" individual with money and a bit of press "pull" can soon place a W. K. (well known) after his signature. Even he who has neither the mental requirements for writing his own stories nor the personality to get them over always has the prerogative of hiring for this double purpose one of those extraordinary individuals commonly known as press "hounds" or agents. Of course, publicity is invaluable to all who must commercialize popularity, but a thousand syndicated stories cannot alone make one actor.

Our aggrieved director friend also intimated that previous to this misfortune he had always been able, with careful direction, to make act whom he chose. We have since figured that this very feeling, so prevalent among producers, whether expressed or not, is the cause of many poor performances and cheapened photoplays.

When the director rids himself of the ego through which he imagines himself competent to make up a single deficiency in any actor, he will have grown greatly in wisdom. A director is a director, and an actor is an actor. They are absolutely necessary to each other, but neither can efficiently be both at one time. At least, it has never yet been successfully done.

He who would have a meritorious production, let him cast well.

F. R.

Poor Titles

Peculiarly enough, the screen drama is at present suffering from what appears to be a dearth of good picture titles. Consequently, many satisfactory and some exceptional productions are laboring along under impossible names which are really injurious to the box office.

This condition is all wrong, from a financial standpoint. As every exhibitor has learned, the greatest factor in exploitation is an appropriate and catchy title which can be played up to attract the public's curiosity, and it is a well remembered fact that many mediocre photoplays which have been successful in the past have, in great part, to thank their happy "labels."

Naturally enough, with thousands of these titles copyrighted, there is not today the scope to choose from that there once was; but there does exist one practice among the producers which might be eliminated to advantage. Given an ordinarily good novel or stage play to film, they will often change the name chosen by the author for an almost invariably less attractive one of studio concoction. If a writer is unable to title his own work, certainly it is not logical that a continuity department will be more successful. Many of the attempts are ridiculous, and some are sickening. In other cases, there have been many sad repetitions of the few clever ideas already utilized in this line during the past twelve months.

No one claims that the individuals responsible for this christening of young films have an easy job; but somehow they are going to have to speed up a bit, if they don't desire ridicule.

A. S. C. Has Official Organ

We have at hand a copy of the first issue of the American Cinematographer, to be published twice a month by The American Society of Cinematographers, and edited by Captain Jack Coland and Mary B. Howe.

It promises to be a very interesting little sheet for the cameramen, since it intends to run, from time to time, articles upon the newest and most artistic developments in motion picture photography.

The A. S. C. boys have always been representative of the industry's best camera work, and the Cinematographer will undoubtedly assist in their future progress.

LOUIS B. MAYER PLANS SEASON'S ACTIVITIES

According to a wire received from Louis B. Mayer at his studio, the First National producer will leave New York within a few days on his return journey here. It is expected that production activities will be resumed shortly after his arrival.

Mr. Mayer's plans for the coming year include the making of a number of all-star productions in addition to pictures starring Anita Stewart and Mildred Harris Chaplin. He now owns the Harold MacGrath story, "Drums of Jeopardy," which appeared as a serial in the Saturday Evening Post, and also has the screen rights to a number of James Oliver Curwood's works.

TALMADGE PARTY GOES TO JAMAICA

When Norma Talmadge and Joseph M. Schenck sailed on the Tonaco for Jamaica last week, they were accompanied by Montague Love and Harrison, who will appear in the picture "Satan's Paradise," which will be filmed in Jamaica, and Leslie Stuart, who will impart his knowledge of this tropical country to Albert Parker, the director.

Chet Withey was invited to accompany Mr. Schenck to talk over scripts for Constance Talmadge on the voyage back and forth. "The Man From Toronto," a play by Douglas Murry, which is now having a run in England, has been chosen as the first picture which he will direct for Constance Talmadge.

TARZAN COMPANY RETURNS

Harry Revier, director; Roy Somerville, photodramatist, and a company of over twenty players have returned from San Francisco, where they spent a few days filming scenes for the fifteenth and final episode of "The Son of Tarzan," which Mr. Revier is producing as a special serial for the National Film Corporation.

Included in the party were: Karla Schramm, Manilla Martan, Eugene Burr, P. Dempsey Tabler and George Morrell of the cast; Ad Linkoff, assistant director, and Lee Humiston and Charles Clark, cameramen. The world's rights to the serial are controlled by David P. Howells.

ANNIVERSARY OF GOLDWYN OCCUPATION

Monday, November 1st, marked the second anniversary of the occupation of the Culver City studio by the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation. The studio was officially transferred by the old Triangle Company to Abraham Lehr, vice president in charge of production, H. E. Edington, assistant to Mr. Lehr, and Mason N. Litson, then production manager, at 10:30, November 1, 1918.

Because of the coal shortage the previous year, and the limitation of fuel to motion picture companies in New York, the Goldwyn authorities deemed it best to begin production in California, the land of sunshine. Mr. Lehr came west from New York and concluded negotiations for the use of the Triangle studio, which was later purchased.

TO RESUME COMPANY

Popular Photoplayers Productions have taken over all interests belonging to the Oakley Productions. That organization will resume activities in the near future.

"Lavender and Old Lace," the first picture produced by the Renco Film company, is completed, and President H. J. Reynolds will leave for New York soon with the film.

HAYAKAWA IN CUTTING ROOM

Upon returning to the Haworth Studio, after a few days' rest between pictures, Sessue Hayakawa has been kept busy in the cutting room with his director, Colin Campbell, giving his latest production the final editing. The story is an adaptation from the novel "East Is East," by Lloyd Osborne.

STUART PATON

AT THE REALART STUDIO

William D. Taylor will return Tuesday from his six weeks vacation in the mountains of Central California. He is to start production November 15th on his newest special. This will be an adaptation by Julia Crawford Ivers from an original story by Cosmo Hamilton.

Douglas Bronston is adapting "All Night Long," a comedy by Philip Barthomae, as a coming production for Wanda Hawley.

"She Couldn't Help It" is announced as the final title for the photoplay adapted from "In the Bishop's Carriage," from the novel by Miriam Michelson and the play by Channing Pollock. Bebe Daniels is the star in this production.

Work overlapped during the past week on two Mary Miles Minter productions. Director Chester Franklin was completing scenes in "All Souls' Eve," which did not require the presence of the star. Miss Minter had already started work on her current production.

AT SENNETT'S

Mack Sennett intends to invade the legitimate realm of motion picture production. Ethel Grey Terry has signed a contract with him providing for her appearance in his forthcoming production of a romantic comedy, the working title of which is "Heart-balm."

This will be devoid of the characteristic qualities that have identified the two and multiple reel Sennett comedies.

Richard Jones has been added to the directorial staff working under Mr. Sennett's personal supervision.

Frank Powell has also been engaged by the comedy creator.

ROBERTSON-COLE ACTIVITIES

A. S. Kirkpatrick, Vice President and General Manager of the Robertson-Cole distributing organization, has returned to New York after spending two weeks in Los Angeles conferring on the Robertson-Cole studios and the future west coast developments of that organization.

William Christy Cabanne has returned to the coast and is now at work on his second production, the story of which was written by himself.

Pauline Frederick has returned to her studio after a location trip to Northern California, where exteriors were filmed for her next special, a film version of Florence L. Barclay's book, "The Mistress of Shenstone." The production is being made under the direction of Henry King.

Louis J. Gasnier is considering the starting of a new production to follow "Kismet."

Sessue Hayakawa will start producing an original in a short time and two originals have been purchased for Pauline Frederick.

AT UNIVERSAL

Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran are busy with their fifth comedy feature, "One Awful Night," by Edgar Franklin.

Under the direction of J. P. McGowan, "Tiger," Frank Mayo's latest starring vehicle, is progressing.

Harry Carey is at work on his latest story, "Burnt Embers," the product of his own pen, under Val Paul's direction.

Edward Kull is working on the fourteenth episode of "The Diamond Queen."

Hoot Gibson's latest western is called "Dawg Gone." It is being directed by Albert Russell.

The scenario department announces the purchase of "It's Never Too Late to Mend," by Helene Christine, which will be used as a starring vehicle for Eva Novak. Leo McCarey, who has been assistant to Tod Browning and who has been recommended for directorship by his chief, will handle the megaphone on this production under Browning's supervision. Douglas Doty is preparing the scenario.

It is announced that Stuart Paton will direct Priscilla Dean in her next Jewel feature, "Under False Colors," work on which will begin within two weeks. This will be the first time in two years that Miss Dean has been directed by anyone but Tod Browning.

Vin Moore, who has been directing the series of comedies featuring Dorothea Wolbert, is planning a series of burlesques on screen and stage successes. He has just produced a satire on "Romeo and Juliet," and intends to film a burlesque on "Way Down East" in the near future.

AT THE HAMILTON-WHITE STUDIOS

"Luck," the latest Mermaid Comedy produced by Jack White, and featuring Jimmy Adams and Syd Smith, has been finished, and the film shipped to New York for release by Educational.

"April Fool," the "Ham" Hamilton Comedy just finished, will be given a preview this week. It will be released by Educational in December.

"Ham" Hamilton and his partner, Jack White, after four weeks of "gagging" in their comedies, are going on a hunting trip before starting in their new Mermaid Comedies.

FAIRBANKS TITLE CHANGED

Douglas Fairbanks' forthcoming production of Johnston McCuller's "The Curse of Capistrano," is to be called "The Mark of Zorro."

"SITTING ON THE WORLD"

D. N. Schwab Productions, Inc., presents probably the most entertaining story of the week at the New Pantages, where it releases "Sitting on the World," a David Butler feature. It is an exceptionally clever rural comedy-drama, containing a hundred laughs and a dozen or more honest tears. The subtitles are catchy and the cast is good.

David Butler is wonderfully refreshing in his new type of country youth. His title, "The Cheer-Up Boy," is certainly appropriate, in this instance at least, and the picture will undoubtedly gain him an immense following. It is some relief to witness the screen characterization of a rural lad who can be awkward without paining by his bashfulness.

Lillian Hall gives one of the cleverest ingenue performances that we have recently seen as Little Rosy Redhead. Rosy may be country bred, but she knows a thing or two which is also a surprise in screen fiction.

Eugenie Besserer employs all of her well known subtleness in the interpretation of the fanatical mother. She takes the scenes in which she appears.

Harry Todd is excellent as the henpecked father. Always he gets a laugh.

Julianne Johnson plays Janie Cullison and Fred Bond does Harvey Sparklin, the heavy. William Sharpe and Helen Gilmore complete the cast.

Fred G. Butler directed the production.

"HER HUSBAND'S FRIEND"

Thomas H. Ince presents Enid Bennett in "Her Husband's Friend" at Grauman's Million Dollar Theatre this week. The story is a bit weak in spots, but the cast is good.

The star plays Judith, the girl whose alimony is paid by her husband's friend. Her work is, as always, pleasing.

Tom Chatterton is good in the leading role, the friend who supports another's widow.

Roland V. Lee handles the erring husband beautifully, although his part is comparatively short.

Ailene Manning does her most interesting characterization, or rather the best that has come to our notice, as the Doctor.

Mae Busch has a few scenes as Clarice, the vampish damsel of the cabaret.

Fred Niblo directed.

"WANTED AT HEADQUARTERS"

Universal releases "Wanted at Headquarters" at the Superba this week. The story is one of crook life, but in dealing with a "big job" gang it is very inconsistent since the action all around is crude and bungled. In fact, the entire plot is reminiscent of the old "hokum" railroad serials. It suffers by comparison at that. The play was obviously constructed and filmed in a hurry. The photography is poor.

Eva Novak is the featured lead, as Kate, a female crook. She lacks the appeal of her sister, Jane, and plays the entire role without once gaining the sympathy of the audience. The part is an unrelieved heavy.

Leonard Shumway plays Moya Flanbaugh, the male lead.

George Chesebro does Tommy Carter, whom we took to be the "villain." It is really difficult to classify the characters, although this last is not due to their versatility.

Agnes Emerson, William Marion, Lloyd Sedgwick and Howard Davis add to the general confusion.

The release of this picture is a serious mistake. Its kind are doomed by the arrival of the film at the most artistic point yet reached.

AMBASSADOR TO OPEN NEW YEAR'S

Progress is being made on the building of the New Ambassador Theater for Gore Bros. and Sol Lesser.

The managers believe that the opening will fall on New Year with the world premiere of Allen Holubar's production, "Man, Woman, Marriage."

JAMES MASON

Country Masher, "Something to Think About"

Current Reviews

"NOMADS OF THE NORTH"

The Kinema offers James Oliver Curood's adaptation of his story, "Nomads of the North," this week. The scenic effects and photography of the production are truly wonderful, and the four animals that play Brimstone and Neewa both as infants and as full grown "individuals" are beautifully trained. The pup and cub get many laughs and the full grown animals assist greatly in the various climaxes.

There are many points in the story which are rendered weak by the lack of proper handling, and the suspense necessary during the forest fire falls flat, but the idea is unusual.

Lon Chaney introduces himself in a sympathetic lead as the French Canadian, Raoul Challoner. We who have always thought of him as one of our heavier heavies were surprised at the part and delighted by his versatility.

Betty Blythe does the feminine lead, Nanette Royland. Parts of her work are much better than others.

Francis MacDonald is good as "Buck" McDougall, as is Melbourne MacDowell in the role of his father, Duncan McDougall. Their opposition is convincing.

Lewis Stone has the comparatively small part of Corporal O'Connor of the N. W. M. P. Strange to say he misses several of his opportunities to make things lively by acting.

Spottiswood Aitken does Old Rowland, the invalid father.

David M. Hartford directed the picture.

"HIS OWN LAW"

J. Parker Read, Jr., presents Hobart Bosworth in "His Own Law" this week at the California Theatre. The story is of a man's self-sacrifice and has much of entertainment value. The setting is beautiful and the photography good.

The star has one of his characteristic roles which he plays in true Bosworth form. His action with the child, little Mary Jane Irving, is unusually touching.

Mary Jane is always clever.

Roland V. Lee plays Jean Saval, the man who wins, and Jean Calhoun is the woman.

"BODY AND SOUL"

The Metro release, "Body and Soul," shows this week at Tally's Broadway. The story is a rather novel one and is at least interesting.

Alice Lake, the star, plays Claire Martin, who intermittently goes out of her mind, assuming another personality. However, the film comes during one of her correctly conscious moments, which should be satisfactory! Aside from this uncertainty, however, the role is entertaining. She is particularly good as Lorette, who laughs at life.

Stuart Holmes cleverly interprets Scott Houghton, the heavy who can be fascinating. Mr. Holmes is a good bet for Metro.

William Lawrence plays the male lead.

Carl Gerard has several good moments as Charles Houghton, the coward, who murders.

Fontaine La Rue, William Orlamond and Hugh Saxon complete the cast.

Charles Swickard directed the production.

KEATON COMEDIES SCHEDULED FOR LONG RUNS

At Grauman's Rialto, "Convict 13," a Buster Keaton comedy, has just finished six weeks' run, in conjunction with "The Restless Sex," and Mr. Grauman states that he has signed for the entire Keaton output.

At the Alhambra Theatre, which is managed by Gore Brothers and Sol Lesser, "One Week," Keaton's initial comedy, is scheduled for a three weeks' run.

POLISHING MACHINES IN INCE LABORATORIES

Two of the latest model "Cinex" film polishing machines were this week installed in the laboratories of the Thomas H. Ince studios.

The polishers, which are manufactured by the Cinema Machine Company of Los Angeles, have a capacity of 10,000 feet of film an hour. Among the improvements is an automatic alcohol feeding device, which washes the celluloid and returns the surplus alcohol to be filtered and used over again.

FIRST MOROSCO PRODUCTION TO BE FILMED

Oliver Morosco this month will begin the personal direction of the first picture of the Oliver Morosco Productions, Inc., at the Brunton studios in Los Angeles.

Mr. Morosco has chosen as his film premier "The Half Breed," one of his stage successes.

Howard Gaye, who was a member of Pauline Frederick's supporting company in her first Robertson-Cole production, "A Slave of Vanity," has been cast in one of the important parts of Christy Cabanne's next Robertson-Cole production, which is now in the course of filming.

ARMY OFFICER BACK IN PICTURES

First Lieutenant David Durant, who was associated with several motion picture companies before the war, is now back in Los Angeles ready to resume work in pictures. His first experience before the camera was in 1913 for the old Lubin Company at Galveston, Texas, after an extended trip of three years throughout Alaska and Mexico. Lieutenant Durant served more than two years in the recent war with the 63rd Infantry and was athletic officer of that regiment, winning popularity as a boxing instructor and athlete. He was with the Lafayette Division at the termination of hostilities, named such by General Pershing and trained under the supervision of the blue devils of France. He is now a First Lieutenant, Infantry Section, Officer Reserve Corps, United States Army.

Hal Ferner is at present playing a part in support of Billy West.

Paul Weigel is playing a character part in "Bullets of Justice" for Special Pictures Corporation.

Walter Morosco, son of Oliver Morosco, will be seen in Wm. Christy Cabanne's next picture.

Frank Messenger, who was with Universal for three years, has been made production manager for Pinnacle productions.

William D. Taylor is preparing to film the original screen story which Cosmo Hamilton wrote for him. Production will commence in two weeks.

Irving M. Lesser, producer of "Peck's Bad Boy," announces he has engaged Henry Bergman to assist Nate Watt, director of the story.

George Irving is directing Mollie King and company in American Cinema Corporation's production, "Her Majesty," now in the course of making in the East.

Harry Burns has just commenced his third comedy for C. L. Chester studios under the supervision of W. S. Campbell, featuring "Snookie."

Danny (One Round) Hogan, of pugilistic fame, is assisting Christy Cabanne in the production of the latter's Robertson-Cole Special, "What's a Wife Worth?"

Lionel Belmore is playing his first comedy role with Lyons and Moran at Universal City. It is the part of a fire-eating westerner in "One Awful Night," a farce by Edgar Franklin.

Rollin Sturgeon will direct Carmel Myers in her next Universal feature, "The White Peacock Feather." Mr. Sturgeon has just recovered from an illness which confined him to his home for three weeks.

GOLDWYN'S ARRIVAL EXPECTED

Samuel Goldwyn, who has just been re-elected to the Presidency of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, is expected to visit the studios at Culver City next month. Mr. Goldwyn's coming is awaited with expectations of increased production activity.

GETTING ACQUAINTED WITH INTERESTING PEOPLE

WILLIAM G. BADGER

William Badger is one of the old-timers of the stage and screen, as he began his career at the old Bush Street Theatre, San Francisco in 1904. He played heavies there in stock until the big earthquake. Then for five years he did musical comedy, appearing in "The Prince of Pilsen," "The Burgomaster," "The Isle of Spice," and "The Slim Princess."

He was next seen in "The Crowded Hour," a Selwyn drama, following which he played in "The Garden of Allah," "Ben Hur," and "Tiger Rose."

Mr. Badger's screen debut came with the old Biograph, under Griffith's direction, and he has since associated himself exclusively with this branch of the profession. He recently came to the Coast, after completing a two-year contract with Selznick in New York. His latest releases include "Held in Trust," a May Allison feature, and "The Yellow Typhoon," with Anita Stewart.

Mr. Badger, who is the brother of Director Clarence Badger of the Goldwyn Studios, was recently himself director of production for the Mastercraft Corporation in New York.

He is the author of "The Ambassador," "The Sultan of Chow Chow," "The One-Man Girl," and "Burning Embers."

STUART PATON

Ten years ago, Stuart Paton landed in California and procured an engagement with Universal. He had come from New York, where he had been playing with a dramatic company which had previously brought him across from England. It is interesting to note that two of the roles which won recognition for him on the stage were Scrooge in Dickens' "Christmas Carol" and Matthias in "The Bells." Naturally, his first work in pictures here was as an actor.

Through a suggestion upon a technical point to Frank Crane, who was then his director, Mr. Paton was soon given the position of assistant director to his chief. Later, Crane's stories were written and his films cut by the ambitious young man who finally won his big chance.

Stuart Paton is now directing for Universal. Possibly his production, "Twenty-five Leagues Under the Sea," was one of his most unusual, since it was far in advance of the general run of pictures at the time of its release. Director Paton, who has recently completed work on "Out of the Sunset," will produce Priscilla Dean's next special feature.

Harry Lamont is playing the French chef in Alice Lake's latest production.

Roy Stewart is playing opposite Pauline Frederick in her latest Robertson-Cole production.

Mona Lisa plays the part of the "one woman" in Lois Weber's "To Please One Woman."

George Elwood Jenks, continuity writer, has joined the Metro staff under Bayard Veiller.

Josephine Crowell has been engaged for a prominent part in a coming Goldwyn production under the direction of Wallace Worsley.

Arthur J. Messier is doing the continuity on John P. McCarthy's forthcoming production, the title of which is as yet unannounced.

Analysis of Handwriting

By Fritzi Remont

In submitting handwriting for tests, please write in ink, on unruled paper, and send me more than the signature, although the latter alone will be reproduced. There's not enough in a NAME to give a good analysis.

⑤ Anita Smith
⑥ Edith Yorke
⑦ Freda Byard

5. ANITA SMITH:

You're quite genial and easy to live with Anita. The writing shows insufficient will power, a nature too readily led and too apt to take advice, but you have a good deal of magnetism and personality and always leave a pleasant impression behind you. You are talkative, resourceful, a bit shrewd, quite sensitive and have a trifle of resistance in the obstinacy which arises from impressionability. That's one good thing—it will help you achieve. You save time, too, and you've high ideals. You would make a good house-keeper, wife, mother and nurse. You may be depended upon to help people. You are a combination of practicality and more aesthetic development. I should advise you to hear music often, to play if you LIKE, and to take up dancing.

6. EDITH YORKE, INCE STUDIO:

This is a very strong hand, showing self-sufficiency, independence, resourcefulness, a very inquiring turn of mind. Mrs. Yorke is deductive, analytical, farsighted, very punctual in her dealings with people, energetic, aggressive, sure to fight her way through the world and to achieve her ambitions. Her letters of varying sizes and thickness show her versatility and personal magnetism. She has talent for mimicry, music, characterization, make-up. She can make something out of nothing, is able to substitute one thing for the other very skilfully. The hand shows me great courage, a strong love of having her own way, belief in her convictions, quick decisions—for the underscored signature is positive, original, and a bit obstinate. There has been a touch of coquetry in this writing, it's full of little grape tendrils which fairly twine about one's heartstrings and make it possible to love Mrs. Yorke very ardently. She gives a tremendous amount of love and sympathy to others, is generous, fond of luxury, a time saver, a critic and creator.

7. FREDA BYARD: Daughter of Edith Yorke.

This hand shows great versatility and a very youthful mentality combined. Miss Byard is musical, expressive, highly intuitive. She is more mental than material in tendency. She shows pride, self-respect, unselfishness, talkativeness coupled with sudden reticence and reserve—when an impression which is unfavorable is made upon her.

Miss Byard shows love of elegance in her plain capitals. The looped d and t betray her sensitiveness and self-consciousness. She flies at conclusions, is not concentrative, relies on her quick inspirations rather than deep study. She is easy-going and pleasant to live with. She will make money and it will increase for her. Her hand is careful and a little cautious; for all that she is sometimes heedless, careless and jumps at new ideas. This trait contradiction really gives her balance and insures financial success later on. She will practice small economies to offset her natural love of not worrying where the money goes. The hand is girlish, unaffected, sympathetic and will win much affection.

SPECIAL PICTURES

Big-Time Stuff----

IF you are "in between"—

IF you can promote a few thousand dollars-quickly—

IF you have been handling big stuff and can put over something bigger still

IF you can get straight at the inside of major league activities in the amusement field—if you know pictures and the men who make and show them—

There's an inventor in Los Angeles who has perfected an amazing invention for the presentation of prologues and specialties—a basic idea at once startling, invaluable and absolutely new. It is so good that every big picture house in the United States will want it. Here is an unrivalled opportunity for establishing an industry of nation-wide proportions and huge profits. Money is needed, and at once; but most of all is needed brains, executive ability and organization.

If you are a promoter (in the best sense) and an organizer, then the chance of a lifetime is yours. The thing is built and a sample prologue ready to show. But prompt action on your part is imperative. The prologue idea is the big thing these days, and somebody's going to clean up on this invention.

Would like to hear—at once—from those on the inside—no others.

WHY PEOPLE BUY BY MAIL

There must be sound reason why people buy goods they have never seen from a company they do not know personally. Yet, the mail order or catalog business of the United States has attained tremendous proportions.

People in rural and small town communities deal with mail order houses because they have a wider selection and can get goods not obtainable locally. The mail order catalog has been responsible for the creation of many new wants.

Very often a more complete description of contemplated purchases is obtainable from catalogs than can possibly be had from local salesmen.

But a price concession is no doubt the strongest inducement for mail order buying. People buy where their money gives them more and better goods even though the saving be small.

It is said that each year 6,000,000 people send orders to Sears, Roebuck & Co. and the percentage of repeat orders in the year is very large.

Stability is inherent in a business of this nature, for with such a vast number of customers in all parts of the country only general conditions can materially affect the mail-order house.

Rooted in a quarter of the homes of the nation, Sears, Roebuck & Co. is assured continuous and consistent prosperity, in good years and bad.

The Company's 7% Serial Gold Notes due 1921, 1922, 1923, are sound in the same proportion as the Company is sound and assures you a safe investment for your funds. Ask for full information today—call, write or phone.

Picture Technique

The technique of motion picture acting and directing is yet to be found! It requires but a glance down the comparatively short line of cinema history to recognize this as an obvious, if more or less unexpressed, truth.

The pioneer members of our profession remember well the days when they depended upon extravagant gesticulation for the interpretation of any role. Those were the days when three sweeping passes in midair rendered a subtitle to the effect that "You and I will go down town" unnecessary. Tragedian and slapstick alike acted above shoulder height.

Some time later the practice which was afterward known as "mugging" came into vogue. Exaggerated expressions replaced bodily action, but because this method was overdone and consequently not human, the procession passed right on.

Then for a time the actor posed, and posed—and posed. Given a characterization he carried it through on this basis and oftentimes he struck home. Do you remember Hobart Bosworth's adaptation of "The Seawolf?" But, for the success of one part, the actor laboring with this idea paid the penalty by mutilating a half dozen others.

Undoubtedly, it was this condition that introduced the somewhat passive era of "acting natural," all of which amounted to "doing nothing." "Types" had not as yet become a vital part of the industry, so it followed that any screen artist "acting natural" in any role sounded better than his performance was liable to look.

The arrival of the "type" idea simplified "acting natural" but unfortunately a type is not bound to be an artist and the public was once more clamoring for the screen thrill that only a trouper has ever been able to provide.

Today the profession is characterizing with varying results. This is due to the fact that a basis has not yet been reached for either the director or his cast. Of course we are far in advance of what has heretofore been accomplished, but into their characterizations (and this last idea will form the foundation of all screen drama to come) the stars still insert their own personalities with a tenacity that has wrecked many a story.

Just how this thing is to be sifted is the business of evolution, but film technique is yet to come.

The Inevitability of the Film

We quote the following from an article by Sir Gilbert Parker, which appeared in a recent issue of Vanity Fair. The entire piece, entitled "The Irresistible Thing," is more than interesting and very significant. The big men of literature and the drama are coming, one by one, to recognize our industry for what it means with its unprecedented influence on the world:

"The film has come to stay. It is indispensable now. When the public accepts a thing there is good reason for it. The public has given its approval. It should, therefore, be the object of every good citizen to help improve the movies. The films will be no better than public opinion demands. The public is an intelligent public, on the whole, and their criticism makes for better presentation. The spoken plays that are produced are in accordance with public taste; when that taste improves there will come better plays. When the public demand a higher class of film they will get it, and wise makers of films are ready to respond.

"No one would deny that 'The Birth of a Nation' and 'The Miracle Man' are worthy of approval, however sentimental the latter may be. They are in the right direction and from that type of film will come the bigger and the better thing. The film, then, as I said at the beginning of this paper, is irresistible. It is also illimitable and international. It depends on the public and on authors whether it be made a great agent for good in the world. It might become an agent for evil.

"It has its dangers, but so has the melodramatic play, though, because of the fact that the film seems more real, it is perhaps more dangerous. It is more universal than language. It is more widespread and effective than music, sculpture and painting, for its masterpieces can be seen in every corner of the world, and it should be the business of the state and of the individual to give it its proper place as an entertaining and educative art."

New Filing System Suggested

That they may be better prepared to assist the producers in selecting efficient casts without the usual waste of time, several of our agents have decided upon the use of a novel filing system. Besides requiring still photographs of their people, they will also ask that the actors provide them with screen tests.

It is figured that this will eliminate the inevitable studio test, which not only squanders the time of the director and his staff, but is made amid confusion that is not conducive to good work upon the part of the subject. Anything that simplifies casting will be more than acceptable at the studios.

Mr. Charles Kaufman, former Brunton cinematographer, is credited with developing the idea.

NEW COMPANY STARTS

George H. Kern, formerly a member of the booking offices of Hamilton & Kern, and later production manager for the Christie Film Co., is the latest to enter the independent production field. Backed by the Producers Picture Corporation, an aggregation of St. Louis capital, Kern is in Los Angeles to organize the company's first production unit and obtain studio facilities.

Florence Lawrence is returning to the screen as a result of his efforts, and will be the featured player of the concern's initial production.

James Colwell and Reed Heustis, local scenarists, are already at work upon the continuity for her first vehicle, "The Unfoldment," from an original story by Mr. Kern.

RAY TO START "SCRAP IRON"

From the Charles Ray studio comes the announcement that the star's fourth independent production for First National release, "The Old Swimmin' Hole," has been completed.

The star will begin work immediately on his next production which will be an adaptation by Bernard McConville of the Charles Van Loan magazine story, "Scrap Iron." The technical staff is now at work on the 'sets' for this production.

Joseph de Grasse will not direct. The cast and director for the new picture will be announced shortly.

AT THE MAYER STUDIO

Louis B. Mayer has returned from New York with the film rights to Sarah T. Greene's "Cape Cod Folks" and "The Bishop of Cottontown," by John Trotwood Moore, which he will film in the near future. Casting for these pictures will begin immediately.

Anthony Paul Kelly has arrived in Los Angeles and will devote his efforts to the preparation of Anita Stewart's next vehicle, "The Tornado," which Edwin Carewe will direct. The story is an original by Jane Murfin, author of "Lilac Time."

On the completion of "The Tornado," with Anita Stewart, director Carewe will start on a new contract with Mayer which provides for the making of a series of big dramatic features to be known as Edwin Carewe Productions.

AT UNIVERSAL

Reeves Eason is shooting the final scenes on "Gold and the Woman," by Douglas Doty and John Colton.

Erich Von Stroheim will leave this week for Monterey where he will make further scenes for his forthcoming photodrama, "Foolish Wives."

"Way Down North," a burlesque of "Way Down East," has been completed. Dorothea Wolbert is featured.

Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran are nearing the end of "One Awful Night," by Edgar Franklin.

Edward Kull is now at work on the fourteenth chapter of "The Diamond Queen."

Eddie Polo's latest serial, "The King of the Circus," is now in the editorial stage and will soon be ready for release.

Production will begin next week on "Hidden Fires," in which Edith Roberts is starring under the direction of Norman Dawn.

Isadore Bernstein, production manager at Universal City, has returned from Monterey, where he spent a few days supervising the finishing touches to the set being erected for Von Stroheim's production, "Foolish Wives."

INCE PRODUCTION RE-TITLED

"Lying Lips" will be the permanent title of Thomas H. Ince's second special for Associated Producers, starring House Peters and Florence Vidor. The picture was made under the guidance of John Griffith Wray. The original story was May Eddington's novel, "The Novel Life."

AT THE METRO STUDIO

Filming of "Sorrentina," Viola Dana's new starring picture, has been commenced.

"The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" will be completed within two weeks, according to the present plans of Rex Ingram, who is directing. Practically all of the interior scenes have been taken and only a few exteriors remain. The screen version of the story was prepared by June Mathis.

An exact reproduction of Tait's San Francisco cafe will furnish the setting for a party to be staged for "Mother Love," Alice Lake's new starring picture.

"Lure of Youth" is the title selected for the all-star production, from the original story by Luther Reed, which was produced under the title "White Ashes."

AT THE LASKY STUDIO

Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle has gone to New York for a brief vacation, having completed "The Dollar a Year Man," by Walter Woods, under the direction of James Cruze. He will return in December and will begin on "Three Miles Out," by Frank Condon, with Jos. Henabery as director.

Wallace Reid is in the midst of his adaptation by Eugene Lewis of Frank H. Spearman's story, "The Daughter of a Magistrate." Frank Urson is directing.

William de Mille is completing this week Barrie's "What Every Woman Knows." His next production has not yet been announced.

George Melford is now cutting and assembling his latest production, "The Faith Healer." He is to start in the near future on an original story by Hector Turnbull.

Cecil B. de Mille is making preparations for his all-star production based on "The Affairs of Anatol" by Arthur Schnitzler. Several scenarists and playwrights will collaborate on the scenario. Work will start around the latter part of this month.

AT VITAGRAPH

"Black Beauty," the seven-reel production of Anna Sewell's famous book, will be finished by December 1st, according to Director David Smith. This will make a total of five months on production.

Earle Williams has completed "Diamonds Adrift," his next feature, under the direction of Chester Bennett. The company has just returned from Catalina Island.

William Duncan, Edith Johnson, Larry Richardson, and Ford West, of the chapter play united, are rehearsing a one-act play to be given at the Overseas Club benefit in Los Angeles toward the end of the month. The company is starting the ninth episode of "Fighting Fate."

Severe burns suffered by Elinor Field, leading woman, have held up "The Purple Riders" serial for a few days. Director William Bertram is taking what scenes he can with Joe Ryan, the star. The girl was burned in an oil well scene, and Assistant Director Bert Ensminger, who attempted to rescue her, was also burned.

Larry Semon has just finished "The Sportsman," his latest special comedy. This was made under the title of "The Hunter."

Antonio Moreno's cast for "Three Sevens," by Perley Poore Sheehan, his first feature, is being selected, and production will be started shortly.

Jimmy Aubrey has just finished a two-reel special comedy temporarily called "The Stranger," and will start another this week under the direction of Jesse Robbins.

Stuart Paton is cutting "Out of the Sunset."

"BURGLAR PROOF"

Bryant Washburn's farce, "Burglar Proof," which shows this week at Grauman's Million Dollar Theatre, is one of his best Paramount offerings. The story is entertaining throughout, and the subtitles are exceptionally clever. Major Maurice Campbell promises much for the future, with his capable direction. This, by the way, is his first picture. The cast is good.

The star's characterization of John Harlow is both consistent and amusing.

Lois Wilson is happily cast as Laura, the lady who all unconsciously makes a tightwad spend. Miss Wilson is particularly interesting in farce.

Grace Morse is really delightful as Jennie Larkin, the breezy dance hall vamp. Her parts are improving steadily and her different personality is rendering them worthy of anticipation.

Emily Chichester does the small part of Clara, and Hayward Mack plays George.

Blanche Gray, C. H. Geldart, Clarence Burton, and Tom Bates satisfactorily complete the cast.

"THE NORTH WIND'S MALICE"

The Eminent Authors' screenization of Rex Beach's "The North Wind's Malice" is now at the California Theatre. The scenic effects are very good and assist greatly in establishing the Alaskan background with its bitterness as well as its scope.

Tom Santschi has one of his well remembered he-man roles as Roger, an ordinary husband.

Jane Thomas plays Lois, his every day wife.

The cleverest work of the film is done by Vera Gordon and William Strauss, who characterize Rachel and Abe Guth, the simple Jewish storekeepers who find wealth after near starvation. With their tears and merriment they are alone worth the price of admission.

Henry West plays Harkness, the heavy, and Joe King is Carter.

Walter Abell and Edna Myrphy are satisfactory as Tom and Dorothy, who are chiefly occupied with romance.

Carl Harbaugh and Paul Bean co-directed the production.

"THE LEOPARD WOMAN"

The Louise Glaum feature, "The Leopard Woman," is running at Tally's Broadway. Although we have not read the story, which is by Stewart Edward White, we cannot imagine that it is as wholly nil as the scenarist would have us think. It is certainly a crime that an elaborate production should be wasted upon such tommyrot. The play has all of the sordidness that has marked recent Glaum releases, but it is worse in that it does not even pretend to a point or a moral. That a woman of intrigue who is an admitted murderess and apparently lacks all other senses of decency should fall in love with a man and therefore refrain from killing him, is scarcely as much as the public demands of its photoplays this year, even though expensive sets string the whole together. The subtitles mean nothing.

The star is unfortunately cast and does her most unsatisfactory work.

House Peters is given little opportunity as John Culbertson, the male lead, but at that, he accomplishes the acting of the picture in some of his scenes.

Wesley Ruggles directed the production under the supervision of J. Parker Read, Jr. Associated Producers have had an unfortunate introduction, but we're looking for that organization to "come back" strong with its future releases.

LUBIN MAKES COAST TO COAST TRIP

Bert Lubin, who is state righting the western feature, "Honeymoon Ranch," in which Allene Ray and Harry McLaughlin are featured, has commenced a swing around the country to close pending contracts for territorial rights of this picture play, and to renew acquaintances in the Independent market.

ANN MAY

Playing Virginia Rand in "Peaceful Valley"

Current Reviews

"SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT"

C. B. de Mille presents "Something to Think About," his latest production by Jeanie Macpherson, at Grauman's Rialto for an indefinite run. The story is a combination of his usual marriage problem line, and the spiritual theme which is so much in demand at the present time. The result is highly interesting. Miss Macpherson has created some subtle situations that are well handled.

Gloria Swanson plays Ruth Anderson, the featured lead. For the most part her role is a departure from those which first won her popularity and her interpretation of the child is a bit disappointing. However, her followers will undoubtedly be pleased with "Ruth" as a whole.

Elliott Dexter is very good as David Markley, the cynical cripple. He employs all of his technique in the creation of a real personality for the part.

Monte Blue is delightful as Jim Dirk, the big, human, young man who claims his own. He has some of the real moments of the play.

Theodore Roberts offers one of his always unusual parts in Luke Anderson, the blacksmith. His scenes with Mickey Moore, who plays Danny, are the most touching of the piece. Little Mickey is altogether adorable in his part and with it proves himself one of the foremost kiddie artists on the screen.

Theodore Kosloff has a few scenes as the clown. These he accomplishes cleverly.

Julia Faye, James Mason and Togo Yamamoto all do small parts.

"LAVENDER AND OLD LACE"

(Preview)

The Renco people have accomplished in their first production, an adaptation of Myrtle Reed's "Lavender and Old Lace," a thing of delicate beauty and subtle situations. It will be a great success with its audiences, because the title will scare away those who do not relish its tenor. The scenario is well proportioned and contains all that is vital in the book. Many of the subtitles are taken directly from its pages, and they prove very effective, particularly those employed by the comedy characters. Lloyd Ingraham has handled the direction beautifully.

Marguerite Snow undoubtedly takes the picture in the role of Miss Ainslee, although the cast is satisfactory in its entirety. She offers the best performance of her career and makes her fifty-year-old character wonderfully consistent. She holds the sympathy throughout.

Seena Owen is good as Ruth and has some excellent scenes with Miss Snow. Louis Bannison appears opposite her as Carl Winfield.

Some screamingly funny comedy teamwork is accomplished by Victor Potel and the girl who plays Hepsy, his eccentric rural sweetheart. They aid materially in the play's interest.

We arrived a bit too late to catch the introduction of the character woman who plays Aunt Jane, but she is very entertaining, and, together with James Corrigan, who plays Jimmie Ball, offers much of amusement.

"SWEET LAVENDER"

Mary Miles Minter plays at Clune's Broadway in the most appropriate vehicle with which she has recently been provided. It is "Sweet Lavender," a Realart picture, which is quite entertaining despite its unpromising title. The story is a comedy drama of very young love in a college town. The support is good.

Miss Minter is considerably more entertaining than usual as Lavender.

Harold Goodwin is well cast and gives a good performance as Clem Hale, the president of the Freshman class.

Theodore Roberts has the small but delightful role of Professor Phenyl.

Milton Sills plays Henry Wedderburn and Sylvia Ashton is Mrs. Drisco.

Jane Watson is well cast as Ruth Holt.

"CURTAIN"

The film version of Rita Weiman's "Curtain," a Saturday Evening Post story, is also the best production that Katherine MacDonald has turned out in many months. It is a human drama of the theater and is altogether consistent. We understand that the authoress collaborated with James Young in the filmization of the play. The result is commendable.

The star plays Nancy Bradshaw, the actress who sacrifices her career in vain. The role is interesting throughout.

Charles Richman is better cast than usual as Dick Cunningham, the man who specializes in "the theater, horses and—women."

Edwin Tilton is excellent as Jerry Coghan, the theatrical manager. He is typical in the part.

Florence Deshon plays Lilla Grant and Helen Sullivan has a good bit as Mrs. Bishop.

Earl Whitlock completes the cast as Ted Dorn, the author.

CAMERAMAN PRESENTS NEW DEVICE

Arthur Todd, who was recently awarded a gold medal by the National Cinematographic Society for his work in Robert Brunton's all-star feature drama, "The Devil to Pay," has added another device to his list of camera inventions. He calls his invention "the velvet-focus." It is a perfection of the "soft-focus" effect, and is produced by placing a square of fine glass over the camera lens. This glass is sprayed with a solution of glycerine and water.

Frank Lloyd, Goldwyn director, has sold his 40-acre ranch.

Al Jolly, the head janitor of the Robert Brunton Studios, received word through a firm of lawyers in St. Louis this week that he had fallen heir to an estate valued at $90,000, left him by a brother who died recently.

Harold Lloyd, with his entire company, have a specially posed comedy scene in "Screen Snapshots No. 13," the news reel of filmland produced by Jack Cohn and Louis Lewyn.

Herta Reinach has just finished the part of Mrs. Butts with the Ben Wilson productions starring Jack Hoxie under the direction of Francis Ford.

Oliver Wallace, composer-organist of Grauman's Rialto Theatre, Los Angeles, has injured his hands at the rate of five thousand dollars a finger. Mr. Wallace composed "Hindustan" and other popular songs.

Ralph Lewis is leaving Los Angeles Sunday for New York.

He will return to Los Angeles after the holidays.

Louis K. Webb has been obliged to decline a part offered him by the Realart Company, since it conflicts with his part in "Foolish Wives," in which the Von Stroheim company has been carrying him for the past thirteen weeks.

Edith Roberts, Universal star, and her mother, are preparing to move into their new home, in the Hollywood foothills near Laurel Canyon.

Although Charles Stallings was assistant to Reginald Barker at Goldwyn's more than three years, has just recently been initiated into the society. Every time he was to be made a member officially, he was away on location.

LITSON VACATIONING

Mason N. Litson, who directs the Booth Tarkington "Edgar" stories for Goldwyn, is spending a between-pictures vacation at Victorville, California. He is preparing the next episode of these comedies, which will be known as "A Day's Diet."

Larry Semon and his chief aids have gone into camp in the mountains to prepare their next Vitagraph special comedy, on which work will begin in a few days.

Jack Mackenzie will photograph the new Antonio Moreno features at Vitagraph.

Herbert Heyes, who just finished playing the lead opposite Eileen Percy in "The Land of Jazz," a Fox production, is building a new home in the Wilshire district.

Connie DeRue, Harry Cooper, Ray Adams and George Crocker are the crank turners for Hamilton White.

Production on two new comedies has been started by Hamilton and White.

TO TEACH DANCING BY SCREEN

Dancing will be taught by means of the screen if negotiations that are now under way between Hyman Hirsch, Manhattan dancer, and the Special Pictures Corporation are consummated.

Hirsch, with his partner, Flo Duval, arrived in Los Angeles recently for a limited engagement at an Angeleno dance studio, and during his stay here, Special Pictures plans to make several hundred feet of film, using a slow motion camera, to show on the screen the cat step, the Hirsch trot, and the terrace glide, all new dances created by Hyman Hirsch.

SANTCHI ILL

All work on the Pathe Western series being produced by Cyrus J. Williams Company for the Arthur S. Kane Pictures Corporation has been suspended on account of the sudden illness of Tom Santchi, who was stricken Saturday with an attack of appendicitis while doing a stunt at the Williams studio (formerly Brentwood) on the Western set of the "Sagebrush Musketeers," the seventh picture of his present series. Santchi's condition is not dangerous according to reports.

HAYAKAWA TO MAKE LECTURE TOUR

Upon the completion of his next picture, which will be started within the next two weeks, Sessue Hayakawa will leave for a tour of the East, where he has been invited to lecture on the silent drama before a number of Eastern colleges. It is probable that Chicago will be his first stop. The star is a graduate of the University of Chicago.

Rosa Gore is playing a character role for Henry King with the Pauline Frederick company.

Walter McGrail has been engaged by Louis B. Mayer to play a role in support of Anita Stewart in her latest First National attraction, "The Tornado."

Wm. Eckhart, president of the Blanchard Film Company, announces that there is only one Cinal process camera in existence, and that his company has that one in its possession at the present time. He denies the recent statement of Irving Lesser's publicity staff to the effect that Mr. Lesser controls either the rights to all slow motion pictures made by the Cinal company, or a Cinal camera.

W. N. Selig has commissioned Frank F. Greene to design the art titles for his forthcoming production, "Kazan," by James Oliver Curwood.

Mark Fenton has just completed his eleventh week at Metro in "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse."

Frank Teny is the author of "Of Sterling Value" and "A Soft Boiled Yegg," Special Pictures Corporation releases.

ANALYSIS OF HANDWRITING

By Fritzi Remont

In sending handwriting for analysis, readers will kindly remember that such should have proper placement on a decent sheet of paper, not just a scrap holding a signature. Don't ask for private readings or carbon copies, but send your friends additional copies of Camera! There is a charge for private readings, but those who enjoy the free analyses in Camera should be willing to interest their friends in the magazine, you know.

Write in ink and give me sufficient handwriting to analyse. The signature alone will be reproduced. Don't ask for a reading in the next issue because you must consider traveling time, the necessity for making a cut of the signature, and date on which the feature is required to be in the printer's hands.

1. HANNAH ALBERTA FLOYD:

Too short a sample, Hannah! However, you show a lot of ambition, great love of admiration and of being in the limelight, fondness for display, a touch of coquetry, and enjoyment of the society of the opposite sex. You are intensely sensitive to criticism, can't stand ridicule, but will laugh at the expense of others. You are proud, impressionistic, impulsive, very imaginative, quite observant and critical. You instantly notice anything that's wrong about the dress or houses of friends. You show artistic capabilities, should study music, designing, languages. In business, you are fitted for cash-iering and accounting, the millinery or ready-to-wear department of a store.

2. C. RANDOLPH ALLEN:

Here's one of the most mediumistic and impressionistic handwritings so far submitted to Camera! The writer is a natural mimic, could imitate the habits of friends readily, sees a joke instantly, is farsighted, critical, very impulsive, ardent in affections, unrestrained, apt to be passionate, quick-tempered, jealous, but to rise above his emotions quickly, and return to normal without any particular hurt to himself. He's sorry when he has offended anyone through his heedlessness, and will generously make amends. He is unselfish to the limit, very sympathetic, just a bit obstinate because he gets such accurate impressions of strangers that he hates to be contradicted as to their traits. What the gentleman needs is restraint, secretiveness, ability to hold on to his coin, control of the senses, and to make use of his creativeness, originality and ability to read human nature. He would make a good actor—grasps an idea instantly, is expressive, imaginative, yet practical; characterizations, grotesque make-ups and imitations would be easy for him.

④ Sam Warner

3. LORENA ROSE, CHICAGO, ILL.:

This writer has quite a bit of dash and sparkle, is highly ambitious, very ardent in love, might be aroused to strong jealousy. You know jealousy is a composite trait, composed of strong affection, wilfulness, desire to keep the object of one's love solely to one's self. Miss Rose couldn't share a man with another girl and be happy. She gives all she has to give—and demands a good deal in return, naturally.

She is intuitive, positive, sympathetic, magnetic. She will always attract superior friendships and good financial conditions. She may safely rely on her first impressions of strangers. She has a spontaneous, inspirational disposition, is a natural leader, would make good on concert platform or as private home entertainer. She has artistic perceptions, personality, is a good dresser, a bright conversationalist, would make a fine dancer. Her imagination is flamboyant, she's inclined to extravagance, and hates any restraint of her liberties.

4. WINONA LOUISE GIBSON:

Now here is a very thoughtful lady, one who is too afraid of criticism for her own good. She judges others very critically, is fussy, hates bad odors, dirt and sloppy methods. She is a stickler for good deportment and conformity to conventions. She is super-sensitive, always conscious of how her hair looks, would feel terribly ill at ease if one stared a few moments at her. She is too impressionistic for her own good, takes on the conditions of others, feels their thoughts instantly. She is highly observant, careful, neat, clean, concentrative, handles money well, yet is generous and kind. Her hand shows love of following a hobby. She is apt to become nervous, for she has more mental than physical resistance, and plans more than she should really undertake in the material realm. The writing shows great flights of fancy, a sentimental and romantic spirit. She would do well as accountant or cashier, but is really in her wrong atmosphere. She should have been trained for a literary career.

Sam Warner, formerly producer of Al St. John comedies, is constructing his own studios adjoining the new Marshall Neilan plant on Sunset boulevard.

AT REALART

Although William D. Taylor expected to start November 15th on a new special, circumstances have arisen which will cause delay in these plans.

Elmer Harris has now written scenarios for each one of the three Realart stars producing on the West Coast. They are "Miss Hobbs," "All Souls' Eve," and "Ducks and Drakes," for Wanda Hawley, Mary Miles Minter and Bebe Daniels respectively.

After a two weeks' rest Wanda Hawley is starting on a new picture, adapted by Douglas Bronston from a stage comedy by Philip Bartholomae.

Bebe Daniels and company are now at Big Bear Lake where Maurice Campbell is directing location scenes in the star's latest picture.

ASTRA TO PRODUCE HAMILTON-WHITE COMEDIES

L. J. Gasnier, producing-director for Robertson-Cole, and associated with Lloyd Hamilton and Jack White in the production of Mermaid Comedies, announces a change in the management and working forces of the Astra studios.

In the future Hamilton-White Mermaid Comedies will be produced under the auspices of the Astra Film Corporation, of which L. J. Gasnier is the head. Henry J. Arenz has been retained as general manager for Hamilton and White, and Al Dobson will look after the Astra interests, assisted by F. J. Clark, secretary.

The Helen Gibson Productions have rented permanent space at the studio to produce 5-reel Westerns, directed by Leo Maloney.

BILLY WEST AT NATIONAL

Billy West this week started work on the fourth of his series of twelve two-reel fun films at the National studios, Hollywood.

Henry Kernan is directing and Roland Price is behind the camera.

SHIPMAN COMPANY BACK FROM LOCATION

Bert Van Tuyle is directing the animal scenes of the current production.

The picture has been titled "The Girl from God's Country."

ATLAS TO MAKE VOCATIONAL FILM

"Say Buddy" is the name of a motion picture for the production of which arrangements have been completed with the Atlas Film Company. It will be exhibited throughout the United States for the purpose of advancing and furthering the interests of vocational training for the disabled veterans of the late World's War.

TO TAKE COMEDY AT TIA JUANA

Max Richman, vice president of the A. L. Hart Productions, making Chester Conklin comedies for Special Pictures Corporation, is planning to take the entire company to the opening next month of the races at Tia Juana, to make a comedy around the track.

Current Reviews

"THE LOVE FLOWER"

D. W. Griffith presents "The Love Flower" at Miller's for a several weeks' run. The scenario is adapted from the magazine story by Ralph Stock and makes an entertaining little romance. It contains nothing much that is new, but tales of the South Sea will always prove absorbing to the youth of the country.

Carol Dempster heads the cast as Stella Bevan, the dreamy girl child who loves her father with a loyalty that cannot countenance the destruction of his happiness. Miss Dempster's work is improving and the photography of her is beautiful.

George MacQuarrie is excellent as the lovable, sweet spirited father who flies to a desert isle with his child.

Richard Barthelmess is the typical American youth in the role of Bruce Saunders. Even his very young characters are sincere.

Florence Short is good as Mrs. Bevan and Anders Randolph plays Matthew Crane, the heavy.

Crawford Kent, Adophe Lestina, William James and Jack Manning are included in the cast.

Some unusual water scenes add even more interest to the picture.

"SUNDOWN SLIM"

Harry Carey stars in "Sundown Slim," which runs this week at the Superba. The story is another of his tales of a hobo's adventure, and it contains all of the romance that was intended for it.

Carey plays Sundown, the peace-loving, almost cowardly tramp. His performance is the best of its kind that we have ever seen. He gains the audience's sympathy at once and keeps it to the end.

Charles Le Moigne does Fadeaway, the deep-dyed villain.

Ted Brooks and Mignonne play principal parts. However, the vehicle is absolutely a star picture, and Harry's work holds the attention during the entire performance.

Val Paul directed the picture for Universal.

A SERIOUS ACCIDENT

Of course. It is not up to us. To criticize. A superior officer. For it is not so long ago. That "we" were doing. A little "Hay-Foot Straw-Foot." Ourselves. But. While Irvin V. Willat. Was taking scenes. For his second independent production. "Partners of the Tide." On the dock at San Pedro. We saw. With our own eyes. Lieut. Com. Cooke. Of the U. S. Sub. L-6. Carelessly lay his cigar. On a log. And then. With a streak of forgetfulness. Asked the lady. To sit down. And the lady. In question. Was Miss Betty Francisco. Mr. Willat's leading lady. AND SHE DID. AND SHE GOT UP. And they both laughed. And nobody knew. Just what had happened. And Miss Francisco. Is still wondering. How the logs. On the dock. Get so hot. At that time of night. And Lieut. Cooke. Is still looking. For his cigar. And Miss Francisco's. Next scene. Was to get wet. In the ocean. So that helped. A little. I THANK YOU.

X. Y. Z.

(Apologies to K. C. B. and Don Hix.)

MAYORS' VOTE AGAINST CENSORSHIP

(From Billboard, November 6.)

The following resolutions were unanimously adopted at the conference of mayors and other city officials of New England states with the National Board of Review, held on call of Mayor Andrew J. Peters of Boston, in New York City.

Among the cities represented at the conference by either its chief executive or his official representative were Boston, Salem, Pittsfield, Cambridge, Lowell, Lynn, Chelsea, Woburn, Quincy, Brockton, Malden, Beverly, Attleboro, Everett, Leominster, Worcester, Massachusetts, and Providence, Rhode Island. The conference of mayors of New York state and the league of New Jersey municipalities were represented through their officials:

Resolutions Opposed to State Censorship

1. WHEREAS, the conference of New England mayors and other city officials has fully in mind the problem of proper motion picture regulation compatible with the principles of a free government and a free people; and

2. WHEREAS, the motion picture is recognized as an amusement belonging to the people, thereby entailing a moral effect on the life of the people in their several communities, and as this moral effect is recognized as debatable in its nature and not to be decided except by an expression by the people themselves as voiced through the properly constituted local authorities; and

3. WHEREAS, state censorship would produce so great a number and variety of standards that it would be impossible to co-ordinate them at all with public sentiment in these several communities, each often differing widely from the others in matters of opinion and taste, and would remove authority from the said local officials who are directly responsible to the people; and

4. WHEREAS, emphasizing the importance of the problem involved in the regulation of commercial amusements and cautioning against allowing this responsibility to be shifted to other shoulders than those of properly constituted municipal officials, it is not considered that state censorship would be effective either in attempting to interpret by standardization public opinion on motion pictures or in supplanting that properly vested in municipal officials with the establishment of a central arbitrary power; and

5. WHEREAS, while an official censorship is not favored, it is believed that a voluntary review as is now furnished by the National Board of Review, through its information service to municipal officers, is both wise and useful; and

6. WHEREAS, public opinion is a final regulator of good taste in art, and a spirit of co-operation with producers and exhibitors will accomplish all and more than any plan of censorship; be it therefore

RESOLVED, that this conference declare itself opposed to governmental official censorship of motion pictures.

Resolutions Regarding Misleading Advertising

1. WHEREAS, the matter of motion picture advertising has been the subject of consideration by the conference of New England mayors and other city officials; and WHEREAS, it has been found that misleading and sometimes questionable advertising matter has been displayed in connection with motion picture exhibitions; and

WHEREAS, it appears that the display of misleading or questionable advertising matter sometimes gives rise to criticism and complaint not warranted by the character of the motion pictures so advertised; be it therefore

RESOLVED, that this conference recommend to its several members and to municipal

LEAGUE TO PUBLISH MAGAZINE

The Photoplaywrights' League of America will shortly issue an official scenario magazine which is designed to fill a place among screen writers similar to that enjoyed by the Editor magazine among writers of short stories. Wycliffe A. Hill, president of the league, will supervise the editorial staff of the new publication. Several noted screen writers will contribute to its columns.

Although only a little over a month old, the Photoplaywrights' League has met with instant favor among free lance writers, and a large membership has already been polled.

JACKIE COOGAN INJURED

While en route to location Thursday morning, near Glendale, one of the Peck's Bad Boy company machines was wrecked and several members of the organization were seriously injured.

Little Jackie Coogan, the child star of the series, is now at the Glendale Sanitarium. He was badly hurt.

J. Anderson and F. Griffin handled the hydroplane scenes for Stuart Paton in his new production, "Out of the Sunset."

It is rumored that Bennie Zeidman has been appointed general manager for the Mary Pickford company.

Lou Howland has resigned as production manager for the Mary Pickford company.

Edna Schley Productions have left Universal and are now occupying studio quarters at National.

Roy Marshall, who directed Hobart Bosworth in "His Own Law," is co-directing Art Accord at the Special Pictures Studio.

The Morris Schrank studio on Beachwood Drive will be ready for occupancy in about six weeks. Four units will work there.

Sol Lesser will handle the Billy West comedies in this city.

Bessie Barriscale has finished her contract with James Frothingham, producer, and has gone to New York to make arrangements for a new series of pictures, probably to be made at a studio in Los Angeles, beginning the first of the year.

Dave Howard, who acted as assistant to Director Edward Sloman during the production of all of the latter's pictures at Metro, has been engaged by James Frothingham to act as assistant to Director Sloman, who has just been signed by Producer Frothingham.

Cloude Camp will assist T. Hayes Hunter in the direction of stories for the Dial Film Company at the Brunton studios.

Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks, having completed work on their respective productions, may leave for Europe again for a vacation before starting work on new pictures, it is said?

An Untimely Protest

Thomas Burke, author of Limehouse Nights, a volume of short stories from which D. W. Griffith chose one as the foundation of his production, "Broken Blossoms," is responsible for the following article. He appropriately entitled it, "Why I Loathe the Kinema," for he expresses it in a bitterness that is to be wondered at even in this day of keenest competition.

In stating that the photoplay has known no advance in the twenty years of its inartistic life, Mr. Burke makes himself a bit absurd right at the start. Besides accomplishing for itself a universal popularity that has never even been claimed by any other form of entertainment, art or literature, if you please, it has attracted the best of the dramatic world and the most brilliant and capable writers of the era. It is incredible that Mr. Burke overlooks the endorsement of the film by such celebrities as Sir Gilbert Parker, Sir James Barrie, and a half dozen more British authors, several of whom are at present busily engaged in perfecting their knowledge of picture construction in our Hollywood studios. They have happily recognized the fact that they must write scenarios if they desire to reach the entire world. For the people, highbrows and illiterates alike, have made known their preference by the support that has shoved picture production into third place among American industries.

The motion picture does not claim to be a new art, but it has successfully combined all other arts with results that it challenges the world to rival. It tells the story in a comprehensive manner impossible to the novel. It possesses a scope that is denied the stage. And, notwithstanding Mr. Burke's slam at its artificiality, its landscapes and portraits are the real thing.

He also denounces the detail of it, as killing to childish imagination. Good! If, in illustrating fact instead of intensifying the grotesque shadows that have for so many generations surrounded and in many cases engulfed youth, the photoplay and educational film prove destructive to young imagination, then we say kill it! We must eliminate all the mystifying unrealities of life if we are to get down to the business of progress, mentally and spiritually. Mr. Burke, you and the few old fogies who still cling to your small-town train of thought, must either wake up or get out of the way. It is your prerogative to stunt your own scope, but the world, even an English world, is not liable to halt with you. F. R.

WHY I LOATHE THE KINEMA

I loathe the kinema for many reasons; one of them being that I loathe anything that pretends to be what it is not. Most inventions and enterprises show in 20 years a forward movement. But after 20 years of life the kinema is still in the street of the penny gaff. Yet its promoters have the impudence to speak of it as a new art. One cannot reasonably object to the penny gaff. It is quite right that the office boy and his grown-up equals, who like their entertainment hot and strong, should be supplied with what they like. But when the penny gaff claims for itself dignity and consideration as a new art one is justified in asking it to get off its perch. There is no art in this business of cameras and clap-trap. It is made by artifice and run by skilled mechanics. The "acting" of its much boosted "stars" is a parcel of inane tricks, portentous grimacing, and club-footed movements.

When one remembers the Russian Ballet and the exquisite "L'enfant Prodigue," where every gesture says something, one is appalled at the work of the simpering acrobats who are boosted as artists. If the picture-play were truly a new art it would achieve its effects solely through its own medium; and not one word of explanatory "sub-title" would be necessary. But it is not a new art, and never will be. You cannot tell a story through so blunt and unaccommodating a medium as photography.

When an author, in the course of a story, throws in a suggestion that a child is ill-treated by her father, an atmosphere is created, and, if the author has suitably conveyed that atmosphere, the reader's imagination is clothed with it, and he is filled with pity at the half-known thing.

But when moving pictures are presented to an audience, showing a brutal father flogging his child with a dog-whip, art is left out, and the audience suffers nothing of that pity; only nausea.

But my main objection to the kinema is its effect on the child; for it is robbing the child of today of the exercise of that most precious faculty—imagination. In the kinema the children are shown every detail of a given situation. There is no opportunity for wonder; no suggestion round which their minds can play. Not for a moment are they allowed to think. Every small idea is explained and illustrated until the mind slumbers.

Words awake imagination. Pictures kill it.

When I was a child I could find the map of Asia as enthralling as "Robinson Crusoe." I could pore over it, and, from the slender knowledge gleaned from my school "Geography," could construct its cities for myself. Certainly I built them all wrong but how delightful was the process of building, and how valuable was that early training of the imagination!

Today, the child's brain-play is stultified at every turn. The screen shows him everything in crude, unsatisfying reality. He is given the bare substance, and robbed of the delicious enduring shadow.

As for the kinema in the schoolroom, I sincerely hope it will never establish itself there. If it does, then in twenty years' time there will be an end of Imagination and Fancy. There will be no more Lantern-Bearers. For imagination is the precious birthright of youth; it freshens and strengthens the young heart. Fact and Reality only wither it.

The Pacific Film Company has opened executive offices at Los Angeles.

T. E. Hancock, formerly manager of the World Film Corporation, will depart shortly, making a complete tour of the United States and Canada, visiting exchange points and making arrangements for distribution from Los Angeles.

The Pacific Film Company is producing its own pictures and will shortly open a studio in Hollywood. Its latest picture is "The Fatal 30," a five-reel feature with an all-star cast.

DISTRIBUTING COMPANY OPENS OFFICE HERE

J. J. Sameth, president of Forward Film Distributors, Inc., of New York City, after a week spent in Los Angeles, visiting the studios and making survey of the situation for the coming production season, left for New York yesterday.

Before he left, Mr. Sameth stated that in order to facilitate matters for the independent producers distributing through his organization, and to save the time and expense to the producer, he has arranged with P. H. White of W. H. Alkire Enterprises in the Security Building, for the establishment here of Pacific Coast headquarters for his distributing company. Mr. White will act as Western representative and handle all business for independent producers making pictures on this coast. His duties will include the reviewing of productions and negotiating contracts for their distribution.

The negative of "Hired and Fired," the first release of the new series of the Hall-room Boys comedies, has just been received by Jack Cohn in New York, who is cutting and titling it for November release.

"Broken Promises" is the new title of the Western feature previously called "A Good Bad Man" and offered state rights' buyers by the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation.

"Honeymoon Ranch," Bert Lubin's five reel Western feature, in which Allene Ray and Harry McLaughlin are starred and which is adapted from a Tex O'Reilly story, will have a pre-release showing in Houston and San Antonio during the latter part of November.

"KISMET" PLAYS THE STRAND

"Kismet," starring Otis Skinner, which was given its introduction to the American public at a trade premier last Monday night in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Astor, has been booked by Moe Mark, owner of the Strand Theatre, Broadway's most popular picture house.

Current Reviews

"THE LIFE OF THE PARTY"

Roscoe Arbuckle appears at Grauman's this week in his five-reel comedy, "The Life of the Party," an adaptation from the Irvin S. Cobb story. The scenario is a well balanced combination of farce and slapstick. It holds the attention every moment and produces much genuine mirth in the audience.

The star plays Lawyer Leary in a manner possible only to his own rotund personality. His attempt at dignity in the role is in itself an afternoon's entertainment.

Viora Daniels, a very beautiful and promising little lady, plays the feminine lead with grace and ease. Why is it that so many of Paramount's leading ladies put it all over their feminine stars?

Winifred Greenwood has the small but interesting part of Miss Carrington, president of the Better Babies League.

Frank Campeau is convincing as Judge Voris, the wicked politician.

Julia Faye fails to create much impression as French Kate, but minor parts can't injure this type of photoplay particularly.

Joseph Henabery handled the direction.

"THE SONG OF A SOUL"

Goldwyn presents "The Song of a Soul," at the California Theatre. The picture is a screen version of "An Old World Romance," by Wm. J. Locke. Its setting is a swamp section of the South, unusually grotesque but highly artistic. It is a particularly fitting background for the ideal story of the happiness and sacrifices of two afflicted individuals.

Vivian Martin plays Barbara, the wife whose instinct and love teach her truth without the aid of physical vision. Her performance is more than appealing.

Fritz Lieber handles her husband beautifully. Each role attempted by him but further proves his unusual versatility.

Ricca Allen and C. E. Graham complete the cast.

John W. Noble directed.

"39 EAST"

The Realart production, "39 East," featuring Constance Binney, runs at Clune's Broadway. The picture is a farce of considerable entertainment value, despite its overdrawn theme.

Miss Binney plays Penelope Penn, the preacher's chorus girl daughter. Her outlook upon life in the big city is unusually mixed, but a couple of interesting situations result from it.

Reginald Denny, of whom we know little as yet, does Napoleon Gibbs, Jr., a young man of the jazz variety, who characteristically falls in love with Miss Penn upon sight.

Alfred Hickman is excellent as Tillotson, the theatrical magnate.

Alison Skipworth is very good in the role of Mrs. de Mailly, a conventional hypocrite who rents rooms to exclusive guests.

Lucia Moore expends an unnecessary amount of energy upon the interpretation of the giddy Mrs. Smith. Her work lacks the little touches that might have made it screamingly funny.

Edith Gresham and Mildred Arden really are amusing as the Clarence sisters.

The cast is completed with Blanche Friderici, Luis Alberni, Albert Carroll and Frank Allworth.

"PEACEFUL VALLEY"

"Peaceful Valley," the first production made by Charles Ray at his own studio for First National release, shows at the Kinema. The picture is a typical Ray vehicle, and although a little inconsistent in spots, will prove very good entertainment.

The star has one of his well remembered rube characters in Hosiash Howe. Some of his comedy is managed to very good advantage. He is developing more and more marked mannerisms.

Ann May is Mr. Ray's little leading lady. She makes a happy opposite for him at any time and is particularly well cast as Virginia Rand, the city flapper.

Harry Myers plays the stereotyped villain with satisfactory results.

Charlotte Pierce and Lincoln Stedman contribute to the romance as Martha Howe and Luke, her simple yet heavy admirer.

Lydia Knott plays one of her sure to be lovable mothers as Mrs. Howe.

Walter Perkins does Dr. Rand and Wm. Courtright has a good bit.

Whiskers, an exceptional canine, sues for approval in the role which carries his name.

Mr. T. H. Lindon, vice president and general manager of Associated Photoplays, Inc., has left for a visit to the franchise holders. On his trip he will cover every large city in the United States and Canada. He will be in New York executive offices Dec. 1st.

Mr. Victor B. Fisher will be in charge of Los Angeles office until Mr. S. H. Lindor returns.

1. FRANK MAYO:

A very distinctive signature is this. You'll note the peculiar blending of the "k" in Frank with the following "M." It is the rounded handwriting of a person who hates quarrels and who avoids controversies whenever possible, yet the strong t-bars written in the body of Mr. Mayo's message, together with the connected letters in the linking of both names, show that he will always defend his views, is quite logical and argumentative in debate, and is not persuaded by hearsay. He wants facts, even though he's good-natured.

Mr. Mayo can be very secretive, for the writing slants backward. That means "HOLD BACK, Old Boy!" He doesn't rush into intimacies. His strong, virile strokes betray a good constitution, resistance, mental and physical vitality of high order. He is not conceited, but has lots of self-respect. Creativeness is shown in the peculiar "y," which is more distinctly drawn in a general epistle than the mere signature. There is a good deal of pride, determination, tenacity of purpose and practicality in Mr. Mayo. He has the assets for success, originality, individuality, tenacity of purpose, powers of observation, and quiet industry. He doesn't like to be RUSHED into anything.

2. GERALDINE TOWNSEND of New York:

While the signature is not strong, the body of Gerry's letter shows her to have decided opinions, strong aversions, a very sensitive, proud, easily offended spirit.

She is resistant through the obstinacy obtained from impressionability and individuality, from pride and sensitiveness. Will power might well be developed more strongly, for there is a tendency toward depression and discouragement which will grow with the years, if not curbed through the will. She is very shrewd and versatile, could make a success in almost any line of work, because she blends practicality with a strongly artistic instinct, is critical, observant, and has the aforesaid HUNCHES which are so seldom wrong that it makes her obstinate to be contradicted. She has histrionic ability, which might find expression in music or art, of course, as it's emotionality that counts in these vocations. She is highly inspirational, hence might readily develop into a writer. I should recommend reporting, interview-writing, and so on, to her. She has a gift for character analysis through the intuitions, but probably does not employ this consciously. She just KNOWS that she is going to like or dislike a person on first acquaintance, and she's "CHOICY" about forming real intimacies. This is really a talented hand and shows fine possibilities for success after she fails to register in herself the sayings and doings of others, to which her sensitiveness leads.

3. FLORENCE M. REBER, Universal Studio:

This is a strong, virile hand, shows the inquiring mind indicated by the hooked-nose small letters—a nose for news, see? The writer is very critical and observant, quite intuitive, hence far-sighted, discerning, discriminating, decided.

She is tenacious of her purposes as well as a swift thinker and worker. Note the way her letters PULL, just like kiddies playing ring-around-a-rosy, with a leader to show the way. That means initiative and magnetism, and you'll find Miss Reber in the courier class, always blazing a way—hating to follow or take the rear seat.

This writing shows unselfishness, generosity, love of good living, sensitiveness to surroundings and people, ability to concentrate well and to have time, labor and unnecessary thought. She is an intelligent, trained thinker, with high ambitions and good imagination. She must be careful not to yield to fault-finding and sarcastic utterances, for she sees the weaknesses of her associates instantly, and is tempted to "have no time for fools and slowpokes." Being conscientious and honest, it's hard for her to put up with insincerity and stupidity.

4. MARGARET L. BUSH, Universal Studio:

Quite a different hand, being very feminine, a bit coquettish, dependent on the society of others, because sentimental and romantic, eager to be admired and praised, very feminine, fond of fripperies, inclined to daintiness. She's fond of good make-up and extracts, and the boys won't make a mistake by sending Margie a box of bonbons or a collection of soaps, face powders, sachets and talcums. She loves to window-wish and has many secret longings as to lingerie.

She is immensely imaginative, has a talent for music, would make a fine dancer, writes the rhythmical hand, with the graceful swing, which indicates ease of motion. Any muscular action is possible to her without effort. She's handy with her hands.

AT VITAGRAPH

The departure of the Antonio Moreno unit for Florence, Ariz., the location of the state penitentiary, is the biggest event of the week at Vitagraph. Director Chester Bennett has a company and staff totaling fifty persons with him. Two or three weeks will be spent at the prison for scenes in "Three Beauty" company, headed by Jean Paige, Jean Calhoun plays opposite the star.

Director David Smith and the "Black Beauty" company, headed by Jean Paige, have left for location north of Santa Barbara, where a week will be spent taking final scenes for this special production.

William Duncan and Edith Johnson are at Riverside, Calif., with their chapter drama unit for airplane scenes in "Fighting Fate."

Elnor Field, playing leads for Joe Ryan, western serial star, was so badly burned in a forest fire scene that she will be confined to her home for three or four weeks. The company will continue shooting interiors and then await Miss Field's recovery before returning to the usual ranch location on the Mexican border.

Larry Semon is writing the continuity for his next comedy, having just finished "The Sportsman."

AT UNIVERSAL

"Hidden Fires," in which Edith Roberts will star under Norman Dawn, was started this week.

Frank Mayo will soon begin work on "Colorado," the stage play by Augustus Thomas, which has been scenarized by Wallace Clifton.

Harry Carey's next picture will be "If Only Jim," from the novel, "Bruvver Jim's Baby," by Philip V. Mighels. Jacques Jacard will direct the star. He is now assembling the cast and preparing to start production toward the end of the week.

Stuart Paton will direct Priscilla Dean. He is now preparing "False Colors."

Edward Laemmle is at work on "The Cowboy's Conquest" on the Universal ranch. Hoot Gibson is starring in this production, which is a two reel Western.

"Cinderella Jane," in which Carmel Myers will star, will be under production within a few days. Marion Fairfax prepared the scenario from the story by Marjorie Benton Cooke. Rollin Sturgeon is assembling the cast.

Eva Novak will next appear in "Plain Folks," a big town story by Helen Christine, adapted for the screen by Douglas Doty. Leo McCarey will supervise the production.

Eddie Polo's trip to Cuba was cut short by a cable from Universal City summoning him to meet President Carl Laemmle when he arrives here on Sunday. Mr. Laemmle is bringing a new contract and a new serial for Polo, who will probably be at work again before the end of the month.

Hoot Gibson is to be starred in five reel dramas.

New titles have been given to three recent productions. Carmel Myers' story directed by Marcel de Sano, under the working title of "The Orchid," has been changed to "Beautifully Trimmed"; "The Flip Flapper" will be released as "Risky Business"; the story by George Rix, produced by Stuart Paton as "Out of the Sunset," starring Eva Novak, is to be known as "The Torrent."

The Universal scenario department has purchased "Three at the Table," an original story by Bennett Cohen, for the use of Edith Roberts.

Norman Dawn will take his company to the dismal caves that once shielded Valdez, the California bandit, for a sequence of scenes in "Hidden Fires."

AT LASKY'S

Cecil B. de Mille will start work on his latest all-star production, based on "The Affairs of Anatol," the 29th of November.

George Melford has been busy this past week making added scenes for "The Faith Healer."

Wallace Reid, under the direction of Frank Urson, has a week or more to go as yet on "The Daughter of a Magnate."

William de Mille makes his last shot on "What Every Woman Knows" this week, and what he will next do has not yet been announced.

Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle is now in New York, but is expected back shortly and will probably start work December 13 on "Three Miles Out," under the direction of Joseph Henabery, the story being by Frank Condon.

After completing her work in Cecil B. de Mille's production based on "The Affairs of Anatol," Gloria Swanson will begin, it is understood, "A Sheltered Daughter," the story of which is being especially written for her by Elinor Glyn.

AT METRO

Bayard Veiller, chief of production at Metro's West Coast studios, has returned from a hurried trip to New York with several contracts with prominent writers. Montague Glass, Donn Byrne, Arthur Somers Roche, John Russell and Eugene Buck will in the future prepare stories for Metro productions. All will come to Hollywood in the near future and work at the studio.

A total of 450,000 feet of negative film has been used so far in the filming of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse." This film, if strung out, would reach nearly 85 miles.

Henri Bendel, New York fashion artist, will in future decide all sartorial questions for players appearing in Metro pictures.

Georgia Woodthorpe, one of the many great actresses California has produced, has been selected for an important role in "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse."

After several postponements due to heavy snowfall, Alice Lake and fifteen members of her company have gone to Big Bear for a five-day location trip.

NEW COMPANY NAMED

The company that has been formed to feature Florence Lawrence will be called the Producers Pictures Corporation.

The personnel of the organization includes H. C. Schaper, financier, of St. Louis, who is president; George H. Kern, formerly production manager for the Christie Film Company, who has been made general manager and director general.

The first vehicle for Miss Lawrence will be an original story by General Manager Kern. It is being adapted for the screen by Reed Huestis and James Colwell.

Negotiations are now pending for the services of a director. The company will probably produce at Brunton.

STEWART COMPANY WILL GO TO TRUCKEE

The Anita Stewart company plans to leave the Mayer studio for Truckee within a few days to film a number of snow scenes for "The Tornado," which Edwin Carewe is directing as a future First National attraction. Louis B. Mayer had intended sending the company on location early this week, but the snow fall at Truckee has been very light so far and the script calls for a blizzard.

She has talent for clerking, banking, accounting. She's very good-natured, highly unselfish, generous, always doing favors. She makes allowances for others in the kindest way, is tactful, gracious. People like to talk to her, for she never antagonizes. Her weakness is too many virtues, too easily led is Margie. Work doesn't worry her—she enjoys life.

5. AUSTIN D. GRAY:

This is a very firm, self-sufficient, self-assertive hand. Mr. Gray is critical and obstinate, very positive and argumentative, will arouse a lot of antagonism and have to fight his way through life. He has much courage and has the physical endowment necessary for a battle royal. He is deficient in tact, hence makes others suffer by his outspoken manner. He has a great love of justice, is honest and industrious. His thoughts recur too often to self—so that he becomes self-righteous, sees the faults of other people but can't stand having his own pointed out. He loves to contradict! You can only lead him through praise and love. Driving makes him mulish.

This writer is super-sensitive and self-conscious. You'll note that I quote SELF a good deal, but there is a marked tendency toward selfishness in the handwriting, because of lack of consideration and forethoughtfulness for the feeling of his associates. It makes it difficult for him to live in harmony with any one. People have to yield. If they don't—he leaves. Some one has said truly, "You know it never matters much what a woman has to stand, for she's supposed to HAVE to stand things; but when things begin to happen to a man, he's so liable to go off, and that is SO disagreeable for the woman he goes off from!" Mr. Gray would have to marry a yielding, unselfish creature—or give up his insistence and aggression—if he would preserve peace in the home. He is very practical, has talent for mechanics, should take up engineering. He would make a fine contractor and estimator. He should be successful in politics and all reform movements. He can't be bought off, relies on his convictions always—which is a fine trait. He is inventive and original, works equally well with brain and brawn, needs much exercise and change. Restlessness must be overcome by this writer.

FUTURE TALMADGE SCENARIOS BEING PREPARED

John Emerson and Anita Loos have contracted to prepare the scenario for "A Contented Woman," one of the Charles Hoyt plays, for Constance Talmadge. Owing to the fact that Connie's present production, "Mama's Affair," will require at least four months to film, the new play will not start until about February 1st.

The latest author to fall into step in the army of literary contributors to the screen is Andrew Soutar. Anthony Paul Kelly and Albert Parker have scenarized his "On Principle" for a screen production for Norma Talmadge. It will be titled "Satan's Paradise" when released by First National.

CONNIE'S NEXT PRODUCTION

"The Man from Toronto," by Douglas Murray, has been chosen as the first picture which Chet Withey will direct for Constance Talmadge. This production will follow "Mama's Affair," which Victor Fleming is now directing.

"You'll Be S'prised" has been selected as the title for a Chester two reel comedy to be released through Educational in December.

Making California's Fields Productive

Skirting the east side of the Sierra Nevada Mountains, drawing its power from the streams which tumble down their precipitous sides, the chief transmission line of the Nevada-California Electric Corporation carries electric energy to the citrus groves and cities of San Bernardino and Riverside counties for the farms, orchards and thriving towns of Coachella and Imperial Valleys and finds its terminus in Yuma, Arizona.

The Nevada-California Electric Corporation serves a vast inland empire. It is young country, but a growing and prosperous territory.

One-fifth of the power produced by this Corporation is used for agricultural purposes—largely in pumping water to make these lands productive. About 75 per cent of the business of the Corporation originates in the section between San Bernardino and the Mexican border.

The Corporation has grown up with the territory it serves—naturally and without forcing.

If you believe that the development of this territory is a good thing for you, that the demand for electric power for such essential purposes as irrigation is consistent and continuous and that the prosperity of the Corporation supplying this power is assured—then you have discovered a sound and sufficient reason for investing your funds in Nevada-California Electric Corporation Ten Year 8 per cent Secured Gold Notes.

The Cameraman

For various reasons the costume play has not been particularly popular since the days of "Intolerance." Such necessarily expensive attempts as have been made in this line during the past three or four years have, judging on the whole, had very little effect upon either the public or upon the development of the photoplay.

Now, however, due to a growing scarcity of modern fiction adaptable to the cinema, it is again coming into its own. Some time ago the Fox company produced "If I Were King." Evidently the results were more than satisfactory, since they are continuing to do this kind of thing. Success is already assured for Mark Twain's "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," one of their unreleased costume plays, and work upon "The Queen of Sheba" is progressing. Meanwhile other companies are making extensive plans pointing in the same direction.

There are several obvious advantages to this type of production. First, it will naturally provide the scenarist with a wonderful scope of material from which to make his selections. Thousands of the always interesting tales of Merry England in Robin Hood's time, many biblical subjects, and in fact all of history, will be thrown open to the film. Honors will be shared equally by the tragedy, romance and burlesque. The soul which adores slapstick will have as great an opportunity to entertain itself at the historical film as its more dramatic neighbor.

Moreover, the real artists of our profession will find themselves face to face with a greater number of interesting characterizations than can be produced by all modern literature. One could not possibly "walk through" Sir Walter Scott's heroes, and Alfred Noyes' medieval "Queen Elinor" has much of technique that she might impart to the advantage of her more modern sister, known by the strictly American title, "the vamp."

It will also take dramatists to direct these productions and the men who have found fame through the simple human interest story or even the daring in play construction and material had best leave these undertakings to them.

Well directed and interpreted costume plays are with us again, and this time they are not suing in vain for favor. It means nothing that we do not hear the companies engaged in their production going into raptures. In this case silence is significant. Those of us who are fortunate enough to be inspired should recognize the value of discretion. F. R.

The Costume Play

What follows is a selection from a rather beautiful and honestly deserved tribute to the American cameraman, which appeared in a recent issue of the Literary Digest. We are sorry that the article is too long to be published in its entirety, but we will let this bit speak for itself—and the man who turns the crank:

"When durable Doug Fairbanks or some other desperate movie star dashes daringly from the roof of a rapidly moving railroad car into a flivver, likewise in rapid motion, all the fans hold their breath and not one of them thinks of Mike, the snub-nosed cameraman who filmed the thriller. Yet Mike and his camera were there, moving right alongside the daredevil hero when the picture was taken, either in another flivver or in an engine on a parallel track. Of course, the cameraman's stunt isn't as dangerous as that of the star, but it's no snap at that. A good cameraman, we are told, is a person with a heart of stone, no nerves, no mouth, all ears, and with a right hand trained to keep up a circular motion with unflinching regularity for hours and hours at a time. He goes through innumerable experiences calculated to make him lose his self-possession. But this he can't afford to do, if he values his job, and all cameramen do. The least little vibration of his camera would spoil the picture, and so it's up to him to see that it doesn't vibrate, no matter what happens. It may be that he is filming a ferocious lion creeping stealthily in his direction. Does Mike begin to look around nervously for a way to escape if the lion gets too close? He does not. He keeps his eye glued on the little finder to see that the focus is right, and earnestly turns and turns and turns and turns and turns the crank of his machine, not too fast nor too slow nor jerkily, but just right, both as to speed and steadiness. If the lion gets him, he is out of luck, of course, but, anyway, a perfectly good picture won't be spoiled up to the moment disaster overtakes the operator.

"In the recent war the camera man took all sorts of risks. There wasn't a moment of his work but what had great danger in it. But the men brought back wonderful photographs of the boys going over the top and of buildings falling and shells exploding scarcely a hundred feet away. While the soldiers fought from ambush, he had to stick his head and his camera above everything that gave protection and grind away steadily while bullets sang all around him. It's a great life, a great life."

FIRST MOROSCO PRODUCTION TO START

Oliver Morosco is completing the details for the erection of two new theatres in Los Angeles, and is putting three new stage plays into production and launching the film corporation bearing his name.

The Oliver Morosco Productions, Inc., is now ready to begin actual production after several months of organization. "The Half Breed" will be the first of the Morosco film features. William Desmond will create the title role as he did when this play was a stage production.

FRANKLIN PICTURE FINISHED

Albert Kaufman, who is sponsor for the independent productions being directed by Sidney A. Franklin for Associated First National release, announces that the cutting of "Parrot and Company" has been completed by Film Editor Billy Shea.

Mr. Kaufman will leave for New York next Monday to deliver the negatives to First National officials in New York and to discuss plans for the exploitation of the feature.

AT GOLDWYN

Abraham Lehr has returned to the studios at Culver City after three weeks in New York in conference with Samuel Goldwyn, F. J. Godsol and other home office officials. He announces several important productions which will get under way shortly. Six companies are now working.

One of the interesting news items brought by Mr. Lehr was that Rupert Hughes will arrive in Culver City next week to spend several months writing original screen stories. "Mr. and Miserable Jones," written directly for the screen by Mr. Hughes, is now in production under the direction of E. Mason Hopper.

The new photoplays will include two stories by Leroy Scott, who recently arrived in Culver City and is writing an original script in addition to assisting in the adaptation of "13 Washington Square," and "The Alibi," an original story by Charles Kenyon. A feature production from the pen of Booth Tarkington is also expected shortly. "Mr. Barnes of New York," from the novel and play of the same name, will go into production next week.

AT VITAGRAPH

"Black Beauty" will be completed by Director David Smith in another week. Final scenes are being completed near Santa Barbara and Los Olivos.

Antonio Moreni and Director Chester Bennett have returned from Florence, Ariz., where with a large troupe they spent more than a week filming scenes about the state penitentiary for "Three Sevens," the star's first feature.

Larry Semon this week started his next special comedy, temporarily known as "The Hick."

William Duncan and Edith Johnson have returned with their serial unit from Riverside where a week was spent on airplane scenes.

Joe Ryan, now directing himself in his serial, "The Purple Riders," is taking exteriors until the recovery of Elinor Field, his leading woman, who was severely burned in a fire scene. Upon her return to the studio the company will go to San Francisco for scenes.

Jimmy Aubrey will get under way this month on another two-reel special comedy. Jess Robbins will direct.

"TARZAN" SERIAL FINISHED

Harry J. Revier has completed the filming of the Edgar Rice Burroughs story, "The Son of Tarzan," as a serial for the National Corporation. Roy Somerville, famous novelist and screen writer, prepared the photodrama. The world's rights to the serial are controlled by David P. Howells.

AT FOX

A new company is making comedies on the William Fox Sunshine Comedy lot under the direction of Delmar Lord, assisted by U. H. Forrester. The cameraman is P. H. Whitman. The cast includes Bobby Dunn, Larry Bowes, Olive Dale and Jimmy Parrott.

Buck Jones, the William Fox western star, has been taking exteriors on Verdugo road for his present picture, "Fighting Back," directed by Jack Ford.

Louise Lovely and her company, directed by Bernard Durning, is on location at Laguna Beach taking some desert scenes for her present vehicle, "Partners of Fate."

Eileen Percy has just finished making "Nobody Home" (working title), under the direction of George Marshall.

Shirley Mason, Fox star, is filming scenes of "Chin Toy" in Chinatown, under the direction of Howard M. Mitchell.

SPECIAL PICTURES

December 12th has been set as the release date for the first Ford Sterling comedy to be made by the former Sennett comedian, under his new contract.

Everett Maxwell, Saturday Evening Post writer, has been engaged as comedy continuity writer for the Chester Conklin productions. Frank Terry prepares the stories.

Art Acord, now being featured in two-reel westerns by Western Photoplays, Inc., is nearing completion of "Bullets or Justice," under Walter de Courcey's direction.

Gale Henry is planning to start work at an early date under her new contract.

Louise Fazenda will start making the first of her series of two-reelers on November 27th.

Milburn Moranti, who has been making one-reel comedies for the Special Pictures Corporation release at the Balboa Studios, Long Beach, will move his productions to the Special Pictures Studios in Hollywood.

Gareth Hughes will return to Hollywood in a few weeks to start work on his initial starring picture.

AT METRO

Alice Lake has been selected to star in the special production of "Uncharted Seas," by John Fleming Wilson.

The production will be directed by Wesley Ruggles, who joined Metro's directorial staff to handle the megaphone for Miss Lake's current production, "Mother Love." Filming of the Wilson story will start at the company's West Coast studios within a few days, according to an announcement just made by Bayard Veiller, chief of production.

Remote corners of the world will find their way to the screen in future Metro pictures through the acquisition of that company of all future film efforts of John Russell, author, globe trotter and former representative of the United States abroad.

Addition of numerous writers to the story producing department, selection of new pictures about to be filmed, and the completion of plans for the forthcoming round of pictures, has resulted in renewed activities at the company's West Coast studios. The new writers, headed by Montague Glass, will begin work at the studios within a few days.

Madame Nazimova is about to begin filming of her production of "Aphrodite."

Only the allegorical episode of Vincente Belasco Ibanez's famous novel, "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," remains to be filmed. Under the direction of Rex Ingram and June Mathis, who adapted the story for

EXHIBITORS' SERVICE PAGE

EXHIBITORS' CONVENTION TO BE HELD HERE IN DECEMBER

A convention for Southern California and Arizona exhibitors will be held in this city Dec. 7th and 8th, at the Walker Auditorium, under the auspices of the Theatre Owners' Association of Los Angeles, affiliated with the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

The purpose of this convention is to form a unit in Southern California to function with a national body of exhibitors recently organized in Cleveland, Ohio, to promote harmonious relationships between the three branches of the industry, producers, distributors and exhibitors, and to adjust problems which exist among the exhibitors.

A large delegation of San Francisco and Arizona exhibitors will arrive December 6th. Many entertaining pictures are being arranged, and the convention will close with a big dinner at the Ship Cafe, Venice, on the evening of the 8th.

The committee on arrangements consists of F. A. Miller, T. L. Tally, Michael Gore, J. S. Lustig, J. M. Young and Glenn Harper.

BARRYMORE PICTURE TO SHOW HERE

Lionel Barrymore will make his debut on the West Coast as an Associated First National star on December 4th, when "The Master Mind" has its western premiere at the Kinema Theatre.

Simultaneous with this announcement comes word from the office of Whitman Bennett, producer of the Barrymore series, that his next two productions, "The Truth About Husbands," with Lionel and an all-star cast, has been completed.

Owing to the fact that the star expects to go into rehearsal for a new play which will open on Broadway very soon, Bennett has been holding the screen productions back until such time as he might have enough on hand to regularly release them at intervals of seven weeks.

"THE SOUL OF YOUTH"

William D. Taylor's Realart Special, "The Soul of Youth," plays at Clune's Broadway. The story is an interesting appeal for the American boy, and the cast is for the most part good.

Lewis Sargent gives an excellent performance as The Boy. He is beautifully cast and takes advantage of the opportunities provided.

Ernest Butterworth assists him very cleverly in the role of Mike, a resourceful youngster of the streets.

Clyde Fillmore and Grace Morse play Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton, and Elizabeth Janes is their little daughter.

The rather weak romance of the piece belongs to Lila Lee and Wm. Collier, Jr., who do Vera Hamilton and Dick Armstrong. The small parts are necessary to the plot as it stands.

Pete Moran, the heavy, is characterized by Claude Peyton.

An important member of the cast is Judge Ben Lindsey, who plays himself. His work is absolutely unconscious, which makes his part a huge asset to the production which is based upon his successful philosophy. Mrs. Lindsey also appears in a scene or two.

Others in the cast are Betty Schade, Fred Huntley, Sylvia Ashton, Russ Powell and Jane Keckley.

Two-year-old Beulah Miggins, daughter of Mike Miggins, assistant to J. Gordon Edwards at the Fox studios, is playing a William Fox Sunshine comedy, directed by Harry Williams.

TRUE FILM COMPANY BOOKS "THAT SOMETHING"

True L. Thompson, president and general manager of the True Film Company of Dallas, Texas, has personally closed a deal with Ed Manley, sales manager of the Western Pictures Exploitation Company for "That Something," the Herman Film Corporation's film featuring Marjorie Wilson and Charles Meredith.

Current Reviews

"CONRAD IN QUEST OF HIS YOUTH"

Wm. de Mille's production of "Conrad in Quest of His Youth" shows at Grauman's Million Dollar Theatre. It is an exceedingly entertaining story, well played by an excellent cast. Even the bits are enacted by artists.

Thomas Meighan makes of the title role an unusually romantic character, which consistently keeps the sympathy of the audience.

Mabel Van Buren plays her few scenes as Nina subtly and never for a moment loses the character of the grown-up cousin who would like to be a little girl again.

Bertram Johns is well cast as Ted, but his swift movements are not well timed for this type of screen work. His characterization is good, however.

Mayme Kelso plays Gina, the other cousin, who desires to renew her youth.

Sylvia Ashton has an amusing bit as the mature Mary Page.

Kathleen Williams does some clever work in the role of Mrs. Adaile. It matters little how she is cast, Miss Williams may be depended upon to get the most out of any part or situation.

Charles Ogle has another pleasing character in Dobson, the faithful valet.

Margaret Loomis entirely makes up for her late introduction by a happy interpretation of Rosalind, who finally discovers for poor Conrad his much sought after youth.

Ruth Renick does Tattie and Eddie Sutherland completes the act as Conrad at seventeen. He makes a rather good double for Meighan.

"A CONNECTICUT YANKEE IN KING ARTHUR'S COURT"

(Preview)

William Fox presents a modern adaptation of Mark Twain's well loved comedy, "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court" for an early release. The picture, which is an unusually clever burlesque, has obviously been produced at a tremendous expense and it is the consistent lavishness of the sets and costumes that lend realism to the fairy tale. The play will delight the kiddies and grown-up youngsters of the entire country. The sub-titles are unusually funny and the laughs never miss. The cast is more than satisfactory.

Harry Meyers as the Connecticut Yankee will delight the most particular. He is typical as a representative of Young America.

Charles Clary is interesting as King Arthur of the Round Table.

William V. Mong takes a great chunk of the picture as the king's magician. He undoubtedly accomplishes in his role the most entirely worried attitude yet filmed.

Rosemary Theby is well cast as the heavy, Queen Morgan le Faye, and she handles the part beautifully.

Pauline Stark does the little ingenue in a manner that will please all imaginations.

George Seigman is good as the "terrible" heavy and Charles Gordon has the rather small but interesting part of "Clarence."

Emmett Flynn has made a success of what is possibly one of the most dangerous photoplays ever attempted.

"FIXED BY GEORGE"

Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran are seen this week at the Superba in "Fixed by George," a five-reel Universal production. The story is a farce which, although somewhat draggy at the start, works up to an exceedingly funny climax. Several of the situations are very good.

Lee Moran heads the cast (which, by the way, is a great improvement over that of "Once a Plumber") in the title role. It is the "fixing" tendency of George that controls the action of the play. Hazel Howell plays Geraldine, the wife of George. Miss Howell gives promise of becoming a good farce lead.

Eddie Lyons does Dr. Poole, who is "fixed by George."

Beatrice La Plante is Margery, his jealous wife. Despite an unfortunate introduction Miss La Plante later finds herself well cast and also displays farce possibilities.

Fred Gamble is good as Father Starr, whose amusingly delicate daughter, Angelica, is well played by Daisy Robinson.

Earl Martin, Jack Byron and Maude Wayne in a better part than usual, complete the cast.

While "Fixed by George" fails to equal "La La Lucille" for amusing situations, it is decidedly better than "Once a Plumber."

"GOOD REFERENCES"

Connie Talmadge appears again at the Kinema in her latest First National farce, "Good References." The story's plot is as old as the hills, notwithstanding which, it is entertaining. The cast is for the most part interesting.

Miss Talmadge has one of her characteristic American girls to interpret, which she does in her always amiable and possibly a bit precocious manner.

Vincent Coleman enacts William Marshall, the male lead. One of the most remarkable things about this juvenile is his pleasing youth.

KELLY RETURNS TO NEW YORK

Having completed his contract with Louis B. Mayer, Anthony Paul Kelly, playwright and scenarist, has left Los Angeles for New York, where he will confer with Sam Harris on the plans for the early production of his new play, "The White Cipher."

Mr. Kelly, who is the author of the stage play, "Three Faces East," recently journeyed to California to prepare the screen version of "The Tornado," an Anita Stewart starring vehicle, which Edwin Carewe is filming as a future Louis B. Mayer-First National attraction.

Newton Hall is playing the child lead in "Mr. and Mrs. Miserable Jones."

Al Martin is now directing Alexander Alt and Helen Howell in two-reel comedies.

Clark Comstock is doing a character with Lester Cuneo of the Doubleday Company.

Helen Muir is playing the part of one of the sisters with Pauline Frederick in "The Mistress of Shenstone."

Missao Seki plays an important Japanese comedy role in the new Wanda Hawley Realart production now under way.

Pell Trenton has the title role in a rural melodrama soon to be completed by the Federation Film Company at Universal.

Neely Edwards will replace Harry Grat-tan in the cast of the Avery Hopwood circus story, which Mary Miles Minter is doing for Realart.

John W. McDermott, who wrote the continuity for "The Sky Pilot," which is being directed by King Vidor, also plays a "bit" in the picture.

La Verne Swisher returned Saturday evening from San Francisco with the William Selig company. While on the way the company hit a bad storm and heavy sea, but all returned safely.

Harold G. Oliver, technical and art director for Ivan V. Willat, who has been "vacationing" up and down the Coast on the lookout for locations for "Partners of the Tide," has returned to Los Angeles.

Jack Gavin, who was featured by the Australian Feature Films, has arrived in Los Angeles to make a series of Western pictures under the Atlas Film banner. The Australian rights have already been disposed of.

H. J. Reynolds, president of the Renco Film Company, is in New York with a print of "Lavender and Old Lace," the first picture produced by the organization under the direction of Lloyd Ingraham.

Seena Owen may spend Christmas at the Bahama Islands. She has the leading feminine role in "Resurrection Cove," now being filmed in New York by Robert Vignola for Cosmopolitan, and a large number of the scenes will be shot in the Bahamas, where the cast will spend some time.

Irvin V. Willat has signed Jack Perrin, by a special loan arrangement with Universal, for the leading male role in his second independent production, "Partners of the Tide." He will play opposite Daisy Robinson.

The latest addition to the Universal scenario staff is E. W. Guyol, who recently arrived from New York. Mr. Guyol was formerly foreign correspondent for the New York Herald.

James B. Leong, who did the technical work for "Broken Blossoms," is also technical director for the Hobart Bosworth company, which is now doing "Pearl and Pain."

GETTING ACQUAINTED WITH INTERESTING PEOPLE

ROSE DIONE

Rose Dione commenced her dramatic career in a convent at Lyons, where she played first roles in many school plays. As a result of her success in these amateur attempts, she found herself at a very early age studying at the Conservatoire de Paris. Immediately after her graduation from the school she appeared as Marie Jeanne in "Les Mauvais Berger," in Paris.

Later Miss Dione played at the Theatre Renaissance for one year, part of which time she spent under the direction of Madame Sarah Bernhardt.

A tour of Europe followed where success was met for the young actress before many of the crowned heads.

At twenty-one Miss Dione made her debut in "Madame Sans Gene" at Brussels. Later she took the direction of her own theatre in that city, where she played for five consecutive years.

After doing "Madame X" and "Camille" in Brussels she was recalled to Paris to appear in "Les Bataillons d'Alfrigue de Bernede" and "Bruand." Then under Antoine she did classic comedies for some time. Her introduction to the films came during the summer months, when she appeared in Gaumont and Pathe productions.

In 1914 when the war closed all leading Parisian theatres, Miss Dione joined the Red Cross and worked for two years at a hospital base.

Finally she accepted an engagement with a French troupe that was being organized in Paris to give French interpretations in America. With this company she played leading cities in the United States and Canada.

From Canada she came to Los Angeles and the American cinema. "The Secret Garden," "The World and Its Woman," "The Great Lover," "The Luck of the Irish," "Suds" and "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" are among the pictures in which she may be seen.

The French actress has now signed with Max Linder to play in his forthcoming production.

Sol Polito has been selected to photograph "Uncharted Seas," Alice Lake's newest starring picture.

Margaret Cullington has an important role in Rollin Sturgeon's current picture featuring Carmel Myers.

Charles Garman has been engaged by Producer Jack White for Mermaid Comedies, succeeding Syd Smith.

Hank Mann has received an offer to make six two-reel comedies a year for a motion picture producer in France. He is a present under contract with Morris R. Schlank.

"In the Wrong Bedroom" is announced as the title of Billy West's latest two-reel comedy, which was completed this week at the National studios. Ethelyn Gibson, who in private life is Mrs. Billy West, has the leading feminine role.

Joey McCreery, who was one of the winning contestants in the Ince screen contest last summer, has been engaged by Producer Jack White to play the leads in future Mermaid comedies, succeeding Thelma Percy. Miss McCreery has adopted the name of Eloner Lynn for the screen.

PICKUPS BY THE STAFF

RUPERT HUGHES HERE FOR THE WINTER

Rupert Hughes has returned to Los Angeles after several months in New York. He is accompanied by his wife and daughter, and will spend the winter here, where the major portion of his time will be given over to the observance of motion picture technique. His first original screen story, "Mr. and Miserable Jones," is now in production at Goldwyn's, and Mr. Hughes spent the first day of his return at the Goldwyn studios, where, with Director E. Mason Hopper, he viewed the "rushes" of the picture.

FORMER SHOP GIRL IN WALSH PRODUCTION

Edith May, of Monroe, Wis., who won the National Sales Girl's Beauty Contest recently conducted by Mayflower, has already started to work on the contract which went with the honor.

By its terms Miss May will appear in Zeigfeld's Follies, atop the New Amsterdam Roof, New York, for six weeks in a specialty act. During this period Miss May will be tutored by Miriam Cooper in the intricacies of picture acting.

Upon the expiration of her roof garden contract the former salesgirl will make her picture debut in R. A. Walsh's next film production, which will be released through Associated First National.

BURNS ON FOURTH COMEDY

Harry Burns is working on his fourth picture for Chester Comedies. Upon its completion, W. S. Campbell will go to New York to renew contract.

W. S. Campbell and Harry Burns have been working together for two years and in the last nine months they have made twelve comedies, using children and animals for their stars.

Madame Doraldina accompanied Mayor Snyder in a tour of Los Angeles by airplane yesterday afternoon.

Kathleen Kirkham has finished her engagement with the King Vidor company which is completing "The Sky Pilot."

Dick Sherer has been made assistant to Director Duke Warne at the Berwill studios.

Charlie Condon is again at work exploiting the Anita Stewart productions.

George Bunny of the late John Bunny family is being starred in comedies by the National studios.

Willard Lee Hall has been engaged by Egan's Little Theatre for the part of Wallace Paddington, eccentric father, to support Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne, starting Monday.

Max Asher is arranging a vaudeville act, entitled "Girls of the Movies," in which girls from the various studios will be engaged for a road tour. Each studio will contribute 200 feet of film, showing a scene of the fair representative leaving the studio with Max.

Betty Blythe, who is playing in a William Fox special as yet unnamed, was guest of honor at a dinner and entertainment on board the battleship New York in San Pedro harbor recently.

SANTSCHI RECOVERING

The condition of Tom Santschi, who was operated upon for appendicitis at a Los Angeles hospital, continues to be satisfactory. It will be several weeks, however, before he will be able to meet the strenuous demands of his westerns.

LILLIAN RICH

Playing Annett Bornay in "Felix O'Day"

POST-SEASON BASEBALL

A post-season baseball game between the Ben Hampton motion picture company, headed by Howard Hickman, with Claire Adams and Robert McKim as star mascots, and the Buster Keaton company with Lew Cody and Viola Dana as mascots, at the regular Pacific Coast League diamond, Washington Park, has been postponed until Sunday, December 5th. Important scenes to be taken on the Hampton film, "There Was a King in Egypt," caused this postponement. In its place, however the Buster Keaton aggregation will play a Brunton team, headed by Bryant Washburn and sponsored by Betty Compson.

ENTERTAINED NEWSIES

Edward Connelly was host at a big Thanksgiving feast for fifty little Los Angeles newsboys. Mr. Connelly is interested in several child welfare leagues in the city, and the chief object of his attention pertains to the little news vendors, for whom he prepares a feast every Thanksgiving.

NELL SHIPMAN PRODUCTIONS

Bert Van Tuyle, manager of Nell Shipman Productions, and co-director with Miss Shipman, is finishing the animal scenes, which will be a feature of Miss Shipman's first independently produced starring vehicle.

Mary Thurman is playing opposite William Russell in "Brute McGuire," at the Fox studios.

MARION WARDE GIVES BENEFIT

On Tuesday evening, Nov. 30th, a benefit performance will be given for the Children's Hospital at the Gamut Theatre. Marion Warde has charge of the program and she will present her players in Pinero's comedy, "Sweet Lavender," and a one-act farce written especially for this affair by Miss Marguerite Houghton, a Hollywood writer, entitled "Too Much Jones." Besides the plays, Miss Georgia French, now playing in "Black Beauty," at the Vitagraph studio, will do one of her interesting dance numbers. A lady's six-piece orchestra will furnish music between acts and Miss Billie Mumford will have charge of a bevy of actresses who will sell flowers to the patrons of the play.

Finis Fox is responsible for the recently completed script of Charles Ray's fifth independent production, "Scrap Iron."

Mr. and Mrs. R. Cecil Smith, formerly writing under the names of R. Cecil Smith and Ella Stuart Carson, have decided to hereafter label their works "By The R. Cecil Smiths." They have also contrived a trademark which has been registered at the United States Patent Office.

Visiting Mary Miles Minter at the Realart Studio this week was Judge John G. Pew of Shreveport, La. the birthplace of the star. The judge is a representative of the Standard Oil interests in Shreveport.

Mrs. Harry Corson Clarke, accompanied by her husband and nurse, Mrs. T. J. Thomas, have arrived at the Hotel Virginia, Long Beach, where Mrs. Clarke hopes to recuperate from a serious operation performed at the Angelus Hospital, Los Angeles, over a month ago.

The jewels worn by Mabel Julienne Scott in Gertrude Atherton's picture, "Noblesse Oblige," are really antiques. They belong to another member of the cast, Arthur Hoyt, to whom they were handed down from his great grandmother.

Harold Lloyd is now making his first comedy under his new contract with Associated Theaters, Inc., after a long alliance with Pathe.

"The White Slave," Bartley Campbell's melodrama of a generation ago, has been purchased by D. W. Griffith for screen translation.

The Ziegfeld corporation and the Tribune productions have gone to law over the services of Florence Reed. The Tribune is alleging breach of contract.

Under a contract just signed, Avery Hopwood, the playwright, will deliver a series of original stories for screen production by Cecil De Mille.

"Bull" Montana is to be programmed hereafter as Jack Montana.

Judge Ben Lindsey, the juvenile jurist of Denver who played a prominent part in William D. Taylor's production of "The Soul of Youth," wrote his erstwhile director that he was the only Democrat elected in the Colorado elections in a ten-to-one Republican landslide.

Immediately after her arrival from New York, Sylvia Breamer departed for San Francisco with her step-father and mother, Judge and Mrs. Plunkett, bidding them bon voyage when they sailed for Australia from that city on Nov. 21st.

ANALYSIS OF HANDWRITING

By Fritzi Remont

In sending handwriting for analysis, readers will kindly remember that such should have proper placement on a decent sheet of paper, not just a scrap holding a signature. Don't ask for private readings or carbon copies, but send your friends additional copies of Camera! There is a charge for private readings, but those who enjoy the free analyses in Camera should be willing to interest their friends in the magazine, you know.

Write in ink and give me sufficient handwriting to analyse. The signature alone will be reproduced. Don't ask for a reading in the next issue because you must consider traveling time, the necessity for making a cut of the signature, and date on which the feature is required to be in the printer's hands.

1. TED DICKSON (Leading Man, Van Curen Co.):

While this handwriting is lacking in strength and resistance, Mr. Dickson is splendidly equipped with imagination, emotionality and impulsiveness. He shows creativeness and love of music and dancing in the many curves found in his capitals. They are distinctly original and creative.

His writing betrays unselfishness, quick intuitions, high ideals, generosity to the point of extravagance. He has an inquiring mind, is very sensitive and conscientious, and writes the little back-curling terminal stroke which betrays shrewdness born of the hunches to which he is subject. This gives resourcefulness also, hence Ted will easily adapt himself to new environments and roles which require ingenuity and creativeness.

2. CARMEL MYERS (Universal Company):

The young lady with the almost-candy name shows a sweet disposition, very unselfish, generous, kindhearted, feminine. She is practical, however, for her "y" is blunt and heavy in its form, showing that she has her feet on earth even while she is a STAR! The peculiar little capital M is optimistic in its upstrokes, and since her t's are barred with a long sweeping stroke much heavier at the right end, Miss Myers will finish the things she has begun or die in the attempt. You know those who write t-bars heavy at left end, start things they can't finish—or don't want to see through to the bitter end. Miss Myers is not of that type, she is too ambitious, and her capital C betrays courage, too.

3. FRANCES WADDELL:

This is a very strong hand, too masculine and willful for a woman, shows too much desire to order other people about and to get its own way. The writer is obstinate, for the letters often descend bluntly to the line below when they should cease at the writing line. She is not tactful, but endeavors always to be honest and to call a spade a spade.

The sensitive, looped d's betray pride, self-consciousness and psychic insight. Perhaps that is why Miss Waddell is so positive and insistent. She does not start quarrels, for the rounded letters betray a rather lazy, easy-going nature, averse to hustling, but she will work carefully, painstakingly, and try to live peaceably with her associates. It's mighty hard to convince Frances of anything, she is a stickler for her own views, has strong dislikes, is seldom very intimate with people, isn't demonstrative in betraying affection. Those horrid little round tear-drops over the i's are not original—they betray affectation and lack of originality. I receive them by the hundreds and can't admire the fad. Telegraphers sometimes make them—but that's all right, it is a code of theirs, you see.

4. WM. VALENTINE:

Here's a lad from the Station Hospital at Arcadia, so we're glad to accommodate him with a reading, for all the world loves a patriot. This signature rises most optimistically, slants up the page ardently, shows that the writer has much faith, hope and desire to succeed besides. He is ambitious, very creative and original. Isn't it an odd way to make a capital V? You note that he combines last strokes of m with that of V. It shows foresight, logic, love of good-natured argument. Mr. Valentine is a bit coquettish, for that V has a grape-tendrill effect, showing love for the opposite sex, and ability to say gracious things to the deadly of the species. He is very fond of approbation and appreciation, that's why he underscores his signature with that fancy curve. Bold, straight underscoring means courage of convictions, embellishments point toward a little vanity. He's unselfish, has a love of humor, is a swift worker and thinker, very fond of travel and action, has the inquiring mind, is a mimic, and really would make a good actor.

5. PAUL MATCHEN:

Not enough writing and ruled paper, hence short analysis. Paul is talkative, impulsive, very ambitious. He shows an unselfish, sympathetic, good-natured disposition. He has not studied intensively, hence betrays no unusual talents or mental development.

6. PEGGY PENDLETON:

The body of Peggy's writing shows lack of self-esteem, hence she is timid about applying for positions and is easily discouraged. She is too sensitive for her own good. She shows good nature, unselfish, affectionate disposition, a little bump of humor. She has quick inspirations, is emotional, quite introspective and reminiscent. I wouldn't advise your sticking to pictures, Peggy; you are not forceful or individualistic enough. You'd make lots more in some other vocation. You've not the material to see you through to stardom. You are too scarey, for one thing. Peggy's signature shows love of approbation also, frail but fancy little underscoring. She'll do almost anything for a kind word, is very obliging and appreciative of favors shown.

7. EDITH RUSH:

Ruled paper again—short analysis follows: The writer is blessed with a good head for business, closes her s's carefully, hence has a knowledge of values, especially of the value of the dollar. She is shrewd, for the terminals curl back like a cat's tail. Watchful waiting, eh? Edith is practical, pleasant to meet, has fine social traits, is energetic, industrious and enthusiastic. She takes keen interest in her duties, is versatile, intelligent, shows individuality and independence.

8. SARAH JACOTTE:

This writing slants back in very proud fashion, betraying the writer's exclusiveness, reticence and dislike for any busybodding around her domain. She is self-protective, careful in money matters, secretive, trustworthy. She would excel in carrying out delicate commissions, those requiring discretion and diplomacy. Her ideals are high, hence she is not easily satisfied in friendships, is CHOICY about intimacies. Sarah will make and gather the DO RE MI as she traverses this valley of sobstuff. She is forceful, ambitious, self-sufficient. This writing is refined, intelligent, studious, concentrative.

9. WALTER EMMET:

There have been lots of good Emmets on the stage—so that the emotionality shown in this specimen may be handed down from histrionic ancestors. The writer is very concentrative for so impulsive, impressionistic a being, but Mr. Emmet says he spent some years dally with the ink-pots and doubtless that gave him stick-to-it-iveness. He is critical, fastidious, beauty-loving, generous to a fault, very sympathetic, has magnetism and great social possibilities. He betrays mimicry, wit, ardent affections, pride and sensitiveness.

LOVE COMPANY TO DO NEXT PRODUCTION IN ENGLAND

A. J. Callaghan, producer of the new Bessie Love features, announces that Bessie's projected trip to England for scenes for the filming of the Dickens novel, "The Old Curiosity Shop," will be made early in the new year. Miss Love's latest feature, "Penny," based on the novel, "Penny of Tophill Trail," will soon be released.

NEILAN GOES ON LOCATION AGAIN

Marshall Neilan is taking his company of players appearing in "Not a Drum Was Heard" on a location jaunt to Arizona next week. Four weeks will be necessary to get the desired Arizona atmosphere.

TOURNEUR GOES EAST

Maurice Tourneur, having recovered from his recent illness, has gone to New York for the premiere of "The Last of the Mohicans." While there he will also select a new story for his second A. P. subject. His return is expected in about three weeks.

Edward Kennedy, former Mack Sennett comedian, has been engaged by Metro to play a part in "Sorrentina."

Albert Shelby LeVino, for four years a member of Metro's West Coast story producing department, has resigned to write original stories and continuities as a "free lance."

Viola Dana is in the midst of work on "Sorrentina," her newest vehicle, which Dallas Fitzgerald is directing.

PULSE OF THE STUDIOS

Owing to the fact that hundreds of names are included in the Pulse, it is probable that a mistake or two may occasionally appear in the columns. Should you have a suggestion or a correction to make, kindly notify Al Risley, Pulse editor.

Current Reviews

Ned Sparks does some very amusing work as Peter Sterns, erstwhile valet to Marshall. Dorothy Walters has several good scenes as the star's landlady.

Nellie Parker Spaulding is cast as Aunt Caroline and Matthew T. Betts plays the slightly unaesthetic role of Kid Whaley.

Mona Lisa completes the cast.

"JUST OUT OF COLLEGE"

Jack Pickford plays at the California Theatre in "Just Out of College," a George Ade story scenarized by Arthur Statter. It is an entertaining farce with the star better cast than usual as Edwin Worthington Swinger, who introduces Bingo Pickles.

Molly Malone plays the ingenue, Caroline Pickering, at least prettily.

George Hernandez, however, as Septimus Pickering, has the part in the picture and succeeds in taking the scenes in which he appears.

Edythe Chapman and Otto Hoffman do some amusing team work as Mrs. Pickering and Professor Bliss.

Irene Rich does Miss Jones, and M. B. Flynn is Paul Greer.

Maxfield Stanley completes the cast.

Al Green directed.

SON OF JOHN BUNNY AT NATIONAL

George Bunny has completed his initial two-reel comedy out at the National Studio for Goldwyn release. It is called "At It Again."

Dempsey Tabler has just finished the part of Tarzan of the Apes in the serial "Son of Tarzan," at the National studio.

EDWARD HEARN INJURED

Edward Hearn, leading man in Irvin V. Willat's first independent production, "Down Home," was seriously injured in a fall from his horse, while filming scenes for Ruth Roland's latest serial, "The Avenging Arrow."

Edward Connelly has been cast for an important role in support of Madame Nazimova in her production of "Aphrodite."

Sidney Franklin's initial independent production, an adaptation of Harold MacGrath's "Parrot and Company," had its preview last Tuesday night at the Florence Theatre in Pasadena. The purpose of the showing was to select a title for the production.

Professional Notes

Alice Lake has just returned from a ten-day trip to Big Bear Valley where, with ten members of her company, some scenes for "Mother Love," her latest starring vehicle, were filmed. The story is from the pens of Izola Forrester and Mann Page, and is being directed by Wesley Ruggles.

May Allison has practically completed her work in "Are Wives to Blame?" a screen adaptation by Edward Lowe, Jr., of Ben Ames Williams' story, "More Stately Mansions."

A notable all-star cast headed by Milton Sills, Ora Carewe and Nigel Barrie has been selected by Mr. Veiller for the all-star production of "What Is the Matter with Marriage?" which was adapted by Edward Lowe, Jr., from Jack London's widely read novel, "The Little Lady of the Big House." Mr. Rosen has been selected to direct this picture.

AT REALART

The appointment of Elmer Harris as new supervising director for Realart's West Coast studio was one of the interesting developments of last week. Mr. Harris will replace Will M. Ritchey, who retires from the position on account of ill health. After a short vacation Mr. Ritchey will become a writer on the staff of Frank Woods.

Work is proceeding at top speed with Mary Miles Minter, Wanda Hawley and Bebe Daniels, all busy on new productions.

L-KO STUDIO

Harry Sweet will play the principal part in a two-reel comedy under the direction of Tom Buckingham.

"Stuffed Lions," under the direction of Chuck Reisner, has been completed, with Cliff Bowes and Dixie Lamont co-starring.

Director James Davis is on the third week of his comedy called "What's the Programme?"

AT UNIVERSAL

Production started this week on "Colorado," starring Frank Mayo under the direction of Reeves Eason. Gloria Hope will appear opposite the star.

Work has commenced on "Plain Folks," under the direction of Leo McCarey. Eva Novak is being starred.

In the wilds of California mountains, Norman Dawn is working on "Hidden Fires," the next drama in which Edith Roberts will be starred. The story was written by Dawn.

Rollin Sturgeon is directing Carmel Myers in "Cinderella Jane."

Eddie Polo will make his next serial in Cuba and other islands in the West Indies. J. P. McGowan will continue to direct him. The new picture, written by Anthony W. Condaway, is tentatively titled "The Seal of Satan." The company will leave for Havana, probably the first week in December.

"If Only Jim" has been selected as Harry Carey's next starring vehicle.

Gladys Walton's next feature will be "The Millionaire Kid," a modern version of "The Prince and the Pauper," in which the star will play a dual role. The story is by J. G. Hawks and will be directed by Harry B. Harris.

Dotty Wolbert is at work on "The Country Cousin," directed by Vin Moore.

Preparation is being made to begin work on another starring vehicle for Priscilla Dean. It will be directed by Stuart Paton, who will probably start production within a fortnight.

Hoot Gibson is about to begin work on another cowboy comedy drama, "Part o' the Act," under the supervision of Albert Russell.

AT LASKY'S

Among the stellar luminaries whom Jesse L. Lasky has announced will arrive at the West Coast studios soon are Elsie Ferguson, Dorothy Dalton, Ethel Clayton, Thomas Meighan and Billie Burke.

Elsie Ferguson will arrive in Los Angeles about December 4 and is scheduled to begin work on "Sacred and Profane Love" December 9. This will be a production by William D. Taylor. The play was by Arnold Bennett and Miss Ferguson appeared in it on the speaking stage recently. No announcement has yet been given as to the cast and other details. Julia Crawford Ivers, who scenarized "Huckleberry Finn," will write the scenario for this photoplay.

Arrangements are now perfected for Cecil B. de Mille's all-star production, based on "The Affairs of Anatol," which he will begin November 29.

Thomas Meighan, accompanied by Tom Forman, his director, and several members of the eastern cast, will return to Hollywood in order to begin work about December 6 on finishing scenes of his new picture, "The Quarry," which was made in New York.

It is announced that Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle, who is now in New York, will extend his vacation so as to make a tour of Europe before returning to the studio to make another of his five-reel comedies. Mr. Arbuckle will probably return some time in January.

AT THE INCE STUDIO

John B. Ritchie was this week appointed head of the Ince scenario department, to succeed John H. Blackwood, recently resigned.

"Finding Home," an original story by Gertrude Andrews, has been purchased by Thomas H. Ince and will be placed in production as an Ince special at an early date.

Several hundred convalescent soldiers, patients at the Arrowhead Hot Springs Army Hospital, this week witnessed a special showing of Douglas MacLean's comedy, "Twenty-three and a Half Hours' Leave."

FIRST ALICE HOWELL COMEDIES READY

George B. West, general manager of the Sunkist Comedy Company, is on his way back to the coast, after having stopped off at all the important exchange centers in the country to give trade showings on the first two Alice Howell single reel comedies.

Two directors will alternate in the handling of this series of 52 single reelers, to be released through states-right market in order to give each director a week of spare time to prepare the script for the next picture, while the other is shooting his picture. Dick Smith will supervise all the comedies of both directors.

Tsuru Aoki, wife of Sessue Hayakawa, who is playing opposite him in his latest production, had her first air ride yesterday in the all-steel plane at the Mercury field.

ACTOR DIES ON LOCATION

Howard Millcrest died this week as a result of an accident which occurred while doing stunt scenes for Marshall Neilan's latest picture, "Not a Drum Was Heard." Millcrest was on location with the Neilan company in Arizona.

"The Man Hater," featuring Grace Cunard, which was also written and directed by her, will be her first release in the new series of twenty-six Star Ranch Westerns offered state rights' buyers by the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation of New York.

ZUKOR PLANS LONG RUN PICTURES

Adolph Zukor of the Famous Players-Lasky Company is in town perfecting plans for the production of only all-star productions by his organization, that will merit runs of as long as one year. Mr. Zukor will return to New York in about ten days.

MERMAID COMEDIES

"Ham" Hamilton and his director, Charley Parrott, are working out some original gags for Ham's new comedy, "Moonshine," now on the first week of production.

Ted Laurel, the little English comedian, who played a character part in "Ham" Hamilton's comedy, "April Fool," has accepted a comedy role with his brother, Stanley Laurel, English music hall comedian, who will shortly be featured in two-reel comedies.

"The Simp," a Mermaid comedy, featuring Lloyd "Ham" Hamilton, is booked for a showing at the Kinema, starting November 20th.

The premier showing of "April Fool" will be given at the Strand Theatre, New York, on November 29th.

Bee Munson has returned to the Astra fold after a week's vacation. She will be featured with "Ham" Hamilton in his newest comedy now in the making.

The Misson Opens

Probably the most important event of the past week was the formal opening of the New Mission Theatre on Wednesday evening. In any event, it was attended by one of the largest representation of the profession that has ever turned out to this sort of thing, and was generally pronounced a decided success.

Mayor Snyder and John Steven McGroarty, of Mission Play fame, opened the program with addresses, after which several attractive musical numbers preceded the showing of the feature, which was Douglas Fairbanks' "The Mark of Zorro." It is undoubtedly the most appropriate current production that could have been chosen for the occasion. Moreover, from every angle it is Fairbanks' best to date.

The story is a highly entertaining romance of the California of a century ago. The cast is unusual and Fred Niblo's able direction makes of the whole a great success.

Doug is certainly "there" as Senor Zorro, whose somewhat less active Don Diego personality provides an opportunity for contrast, which the star accomplishes with ease. It will take the school boys of the land to competently report upon the dauntless Zorro, however. Their little war tax pennies will tell the tale.

Marguerite De La Motte does by far her best work as Lolita, the romantic little senorita. Her gestures have come to mean something, and there is a noticeable improvement in her technique, generally. Nor have we seen her better cast.

Noah Beery is immense as Sergeant Pedro. His exaggerated interpretation of the blustering soldier is altogether delightful.

Robert McKim handles the serious heavy, Captain Ramon, excellently.

Charles Hill Mailes and Claire McDowell are well cast as Don Pulido and his wife, as is Sidney McGrey in the role of Don Alejandro.

George Periolat as Governor Alvarado, and Walt Whitman as Fray Felipe, complete the cast in an equally satisfactory manner.

The entire atmosphere of the play is realistic, and its consistency will render it even more attractive to the public.

The Mission management is to be congratulated upon the fortunate introduction of its highly artistic little theatre.

Exceptional Pictures

The National Board of Review of Motion Pictures has assumed the sizable responsibility of selecting "exceptional photoplays" from time to time and announcing its selections in a bulletin. The Review Committee of the board, which sees all pictures originally, recommends those deemed "exceptional" and passes them on for the consideration of the General Committee of the board and the New York members of its Advisory Committee, who call a new Commission on Critique into consultation. The last named committee is the court of last resort for each picture proposed as "exceptional." It consists of Alfred H. Kuttner, chairman; Miss Sara C. Clapp, E. L. Hoffman, Henry E. Jenkins, Dr. Charles S. Macfarland, E. A. Morse, Mrs. M. Mullally, Mrs. Frances T. Patterson, J. K. Paulding, Lawson Purdy and George W. Zehrung.

Of the photoplays recommended as "exceptional," "Godless Men," a Reginald Barker production for Goldwyn, from Ames Williams' story "Black Pawl," leads the list. The next three in order are: "Passion," with Pola Negri, directed by Ernest Lubitch, made in Northern Germany and imported by First National; "The Sin That Was His," with William Faversham, directed by Hobart Henley, from a story by Frank L. Packard, a Selznick picture, and "The Devil's Garden," with Lionel Barrymore, directed by Kenneth Webb, from a novel by W. B. Maxwell, a Whitman Bennett-First National picture.

State Right Pictures

While we consider the writer of the following extract, which appeared recently in a trade magazine, a bit of an alarmist, it occurs to us that the exhibitors' denunciation of the program picture is an occasion for great rejoicing. Moreover, every good sport has his day, and heaven knows that the independent producer of late months has had to be such.

"The State right picture is the safety valve of the film market. Every time the exhibitor rents a State right picture he helps along the independent movement in production and helps to keep the program picture in its place. If the independent producer had received the encouragement due him, the independent exhibitor today need not fear absorption of his theater by any producer-exhibitor or producer-distributor organization. The exhibitor who rushes into the program picture exchanges and gives them all his business for six months and longer furnishes these concerns with the ammunition which will eventually be used against him.

"Think it over. It is not too late today to encourage the independent producer and distributor by giving him some of your bookings. A year from now it may be too late."

Film Capital Production Notes

CHARLIE TO MAKE TWO-REELERS

Charlie Chaplin is to resume production almost immediately, according to a statement issued by the comedian in New York last week. He has been in that city for many weeks negotiating for the sale of his last production, "The Kid."

Nathan Burke, attorney for Chaplin, is responsible for the statement that the comedian will complete his First National contract, which calls for the release of four more two-reel productions immediately upon his return to the west coast.

It is expected that Charlie will arrive in Los Angeles this week.

STUDIO IN BAKERSFIELD

Edward Goodman, playing the title role in "The Perfect Man," has returned from location with the report of a new company organized in Bakersfield under the name of Kernco Films, Inc.

This company has taken over production of "The Perfect Man" and is building a large studio in the northern city. As soon as plans are completed, production of a series of comedy dramas will be started under the direction of Frank Terry, who is negotiating with the company and directing "The Perfect Man."

It is understood that the enterprise has been backed by local interests.

LAWRENCE STORY NAMED

The first vehicle for Florence Lawrence to be filmed by Producers Pictures Corporation will be "The Unfoldment," an original story by George H. Kern, General Manager of the company.

The Florence Lawrence pictures will be produced at the Brunton studios. E. W. Dustin, formerly manager of the O. T. Crawford theatrical enterprises of St. Louis, has been named business manager, and W. E. Keefe, former production manager for D. W. Griffith, has been selected as production manager.

SUPERBA MAKING FOURTEENTH COMEDY

The Superba Comedies Corporation, which started the Jay Hunt productions four months ago, are now making their fourteenth one-reel comedy after contracting with the Celebrated release for fifty-two one-reelers. The vice-president of the company is a local business man, M. Nathan, and the president is I. B. Reuben, also a Los Angeles commercial man. The work is being done at the Francis Ford studio under the direction of Jay Hunt, and the stories are by Frederick Bennett. Eddie Geller is at the camera and Ralph Perronnet is assisting.

AT GOLDWYN

Clarence Badger has finished "Boys Will Be Boys," Irvin S. Cobb's story, starring Will Rogers.

"Mr. Barnes of New York," from the novel and play of the same name by Archibald Clavering Gunter, went into production at the Goldwyn studio this week under the direction of Victor Schertzinger. Tom Moore will be starred.

Reginald Barker, who is directing "Snow Blindness," Katherine Newlin Burt's story of the Canadian north woods, will leave soon for Canada with his company, where he will film exteriors.

Mason N. Litson is piloting Johnny Jones and his other child actors through "A Day's Diet," the eleventh episode of the Booth Tarkington Edgar stories.

HAYAKAWA PICTURE STARTS

Filming of the original story by Jack Cunningham, which is serving as a feature for Sessue Hayakawa, has commenced. Colin Campbell is directing.

AT VITAGRAPH

Albert E. Smith left this week for a business trip to New York City. He will spend several weeks at the Eastern general offices of the company and supervise the premiere of "Black Beauty." Mr. Smith has seven companies operating at the Los Angeles studios and four at the Brooklyn studios. Another special company is about to be started and he will decide on his eastern trip whether or not this will be assigned to the western studios.

"Black Beauty" was finished this week by Director David Smith. The picture will be shipped east shortly for final editing by George Randolph Chester, who adapted it to the screen.

Maryon Aye is Larry Semon's leading woman for his special comedy, "The Hick," which he is starting on a ranch outside the city.

William Duncan and Edith Johnson are back in the studio with their "Fighting Fate" chapter play unit after two weeks at Riverside, where scenes were made. They are now working in the ninth and tenth episodes.

Antonio Moreno and Director Chester Bennett have returned with their company from Florence, Ariz., where scenes for "Three Sevens" were taken at the state penitentiary. The company will do studio work for the next two weeks.

Elinor Field, leading woman for Joe Ryan in his western serial, "The Purple Riders," has returned to work after several weeks' absence recovering from burns received in a fire scene. Joe Ryan is now directing himself in this serial, which has advanced to the eighth episode.

Jess Robbins started another comedy with Jimmy Aubrey this week.

AT VIDOR VILLAGE

The King Vidor Company has just left for Wainwright, Banff and other points in north-western Canada, where they will secure some scenes of wild buffalo for "The Sky Pilot." John W. McDermott, Frank E. Hughes, David Butler, Colleen Moore, John Bowers and Harry Todd were taken on this Canadian trip, which will mark the completion of the filming of the present production.

Several additions have recently been made to the production staff at Vidor Village. Myrtle Reaveau has been signed as casting director; Ruth Darrow has been added to the scenario staff; Carroll Owen, a graduate of Leland Stanford University, is announced as film editor, and will write the titles for "The Sky Pilot"; H. M. New, formerly assistant auditor at Metro, is now auditor and assistant production manager; and Max Dupont has been signed as a cameraman, succeeding L. William O'Connell, who has resigned.

AT UNIVERSAL

Harry Carey this week began work on his forthcoming feature, "If Only Jim," a screen adaptation of "Bruvver Jim's Baby," from the story by Philip V. Higheis. Jacques Jaccard is directing.

"Cinderella Jane," in which Carmel Myers is starring under the direction of Rollin Sturgeon, has been started.

Norman Dawn is filming "Hidden Fires" in the wilderness near Soledad, California. The star is Edith Roberts.

The screen version of "Colorado," with Frank Mayo as star and Reeves Eason directing, is being filmed from the stage play by Augustus Thomas.

"Plain Folks" is the name of the produc-

AMBASSADOR TO OPEN

The opening performance of the New Ambassador Theatre will take place during the latter part of January.

It is expected that definite announcement of the selection of the production with which it will open will be made by the Gore Bros. & Sol Lesser office within a few days.

This show house is to be the world premiere theatre for all Associated First National productions.

MERMAID COMEDIES BOOKED BY SAENGER COMPANY

A contract involving the Mermaid Comedies, produced by Astra Film Corporation, featuring Lloyd Hamilton and directed by Jack White, has been negotiated by Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., and Saenger Amusement Company, which control theatres in Louisiana and Mississippi.

The contract includes all the two-reel comedies from the start of their publication through Educational.

"THE NEW YORK IDEA"

Alice Brady plays at Clune's Broadway in the Realart production, "The New York Idea." The picture is evidently intended to be a farce, but it would be hard to prove its classification. The action moves slowly and in a confusing manner, which only accentuates the inconsistency of the plot. The photography is unusually poor. Undoubtedly the subtitles are the most interesting part of the film. Some of them are quite clever.

The star does Cynthia Karslake. As played, it is a matter of speculation whether her role is supposed to be sympathetic or not.

Lowell Sherman is certainly disappointing even in the weak part of John Karslake, after his superior interpretation in "Way Down East." He appears to "stall" through all of his footage.

Hedda Hopper is probably the most interesting member of the cast, in spite of her meaningless role rather than on account of it.

George Howell and Lionel Pape complete the cast.

Herbert Blache directed.

"THE TESTING BLOCK"

William S. Hart shows in a characteristic Western drama entitled "The Testing Block" at Grauman's Million Dollar Theatre. The story is typically overdrawn, typically intense, and as usual will prove soul delighting to the youth of the country. Moreover, it will in spots absorb the most sophisticated.

The star plays Sierra Bill, another "good bad man," as only William Hart can. He has created for himself a universally recognized screen personality by these very roles. We hope that he never attempts a different line.

Eva Novak is well cast as Nellie Gray, the violinist. Her part is more interesting by far than those in which we have recently seen her.

Gordon Russell does Ringe, the well remembered villain of all dance hall pictures. He is very good in this type of thing.

Little Richard Headrick plays Sonny adorably, although he isn't provided with the complicated action in this part that he has proven himself so capable of handling.

Florence Carpenter is an excellent type for Rosita, which she plays to general satisfaction.

Lambert Hillyer directed the production.

NEW YORK PREVIEWS RENCO FILM

A pre-view was held recently at the Plaza Theatre in New York by H. J. Reynolds, president of the Renco Film Company, of its picture, "Lavender and Old Lace," a screen version of the novel of the same name by Myrtle Reed.

LILLIAN HALL

Who will be seen shortly in "The Last of the Mohicans"

Current Reviews

"THE GREAT LOVER"

Director Frank Lloyd has made a truly delightful production of "The Great Lover," Goldwyn's current release at the California Theatre. It is a very interesting adaptation of the play with an exceptional cast and good sub-titles.

John Sainpolis heads the cast in the title role. As Jean Paurel, the grand opera star and "great lover," he displays superb artistry. In making a thoroughly lovable character with whom the audience is always in sympathy out of the man who is at the same time convincingly selfish, trivial and absolutely inadmirable, Mr. Sainpolis creates a screen figure that will stand with the foremost. He controls the rare philosophy of the play. His comedy and pathos are consistent and equally subtle.

John Davidson plays Sonino, the juvenile, cleverly. As the young understudy to "the great lover," he succeeds in beautifully interpreting the eagerness and depth of his nationality and profession.

Alice Hollister is well cast as Bianca, which she plays convincingly. She takes full advantage of her several opportunities to create heart interest.

Claire Adams does Ethel Warren, the ingenue. This is possibly her most interesting and best executed piece of work.

Mme. Rose Dione is immense as Sabatini, the temperamental prima donna and the heavy. Her scenes are excellently done, and she impresses one vividly with her thorough knowledge and mastery of the character. Moreover, when she wants a laugh, she gets one.

Lionel Belmore does some good work as the peace-making impressario whose responsibilities are many.

Tom Ricketts also plays cleverly the small role of Potter, servant, companion, and sort of guardian for Jean Paurel. His devotion to his master is touchingly portrayed.

Richard Tucker, Frederick Vroom, and Jean Corey complete the cast.

"SO LONG LETTY"

Al Christie presents his film version of "So Long Letty" at the Kinema. It makes an entertaining screen farce, but suffers a bit from comparison with the original. A musical comedy minus the music is bound to be somewhat lame. Some of the sub-titles are clever, and others are too obviously "funny." The performances, however, are amusing.

T. Roy Barnes employs his well remembered stage personality to good advantage as Harry Miller. His comedy is clever, but quite naturally a little off-timed for the camera.

Colleen Moore gives a good performance as Grace Miller with a housekeeping disposition. Some of her scenes with Walter Hiers, who does Tommy Robbins, are particularly amusing. Walter's physical possibilities for comedy are utilized for the public's entertainment.

Grace Darmond appears as "Letty," the stage character made famous by Charlotte Greenwood. She is certainly not constructed upon Miss Greenwood's lines, but that doesn't keep her from rendering the frivolous Mrs. Robbins to everyone's satisfaction.

A troupe of bathing girls lend atmosphere if not any particular interest to the production.

"THE U. P. TRAIL"

Benjamin B. Hampton presents Zane Grey's "The U. P. Trail" at Tally's. A satisfactory cast plays the adaptation and the film play is sure to please the followers of its author and his type of plot.

Kathlyn Williams is very good as Beauty Stanton. It is another of her now becoming famous "Sacrifice" roles.

Roy Stewart does Warren Neale, the stalwart hero, in a characteristically satisfactory manner.

Robert McKim plays another of his bold, bad villains in his unrivalled bold, bad way.

Marguerite de la Motte is better cast than usual as Allie Lee, the little old-fashioned ingenue. She gets by with something of appeal.

Joseph Dowling does Place Hough, and Fresno is played by Frederick Starr.

Chas. B. Murphy, Virginia Caldwell, Walter Perry, and George Berrell are included in the cast.

BEBAN TO COMMENCE TOUR

Word has been received from Sol Lesser, who is at present in New York City with George Beban, star of "One Man in a Million," that their recent booking tour throughout the various cities en route east had resulted in their obtaining a full 100 per cent business with the prospective tour of Mr. Beban in connection with his film.

Mr. Beban will personally appear with his picture and will offer something new in "personal appearance" lines.

While in New York, Mr. Lesser will confer with his First National associates and assist in mapping out their new year's business program.

William D. Taylor has received word that Elsie Ferguson left New York for the West November 30th. The director is completing his plans for the filming of "Sacred and Profane Love," Miss Ferguson's stage vehicle for the past season, as a Paramount production. If everything occurs on schedule, Mr. Taylor will launch the picture December 9th. The play, written by Arnold Bennett from his own novel, "The Book of Carrolla," is being prepared for the screen by Julia Crawford Ivers.

Katherine MacDonald has returned to Los Angeles after a hasty trip to New York for a visit with her sister and mother. She will enjoy a few days' rest before starting work on her ninth production for Associated First National release.

HARRY NORTHRUP WITH SHIRLEY MASON COMPANY

Harry S. Northrup has been engaged by William Fox to play "Yen Low," the Chinese gambler, in "Chin Toy," which will be Shirley Mason's next starring vehicle.

The production will be under the direction of Howard Mitchell.

SPECIAL SIGNS EDDIE BAKER

A contract was signed this week between Eddie Baker and the Special Pictures Corporation. Before joining Special, Baker was with the Christie Company for several months during which time he appeared in many one and two-reel comedies, as well as "So Long Letty," the six-reel production which showed at the Kinema last week.

Leatrice Joy is cast in a Chinese role in "The Water Lily," being made by Goldwyn.

Gertrude Olmstead is playing opposite Hoot Gibson in "The Driftin' Kid," the western star's forthcoming Universal two-reeler.

Myrtle Stedman will support Sessue Hayakawa in his latest feature now being directed by Colin Campbell.

"Zip" Monberg is being featured in a two-reel comedy at the L-KO under the direction of Thomas Buckingham.

Kenneth McGaffey, formerly personal representative for Mary Pickford, is now production manager for the Harry Carey Company at Universal City.

Claude Camp is named as assistant to Director T. Hayes Hunter, who has been signed to direct pictures for the Dial Film Company at Brunton.

Neely Edwards, the comedy star, has deserted his own company to play "Toto," the clown, in the Avery Hopwood story now being done as a Mary Miles Minter production.

Hal Ferner has just completed a part for Edna Schley in the Scattergood series, and is now on location at Laguna Beach with the Fox Company, doing a part in "Partners of Fate," under the direction of Bernard Durning.

David Brandman, who was assistant to Production Manager Isadore Bernstein at Universal City for the past eight months, has been assigned the position of business manager for the Eddie Polo expedition to Cuba.

HARRY D. WILSON WITH LESSER IN THE EAST

Harry D. Wilson has just arrived in New York, and at the request of Sol Lesser has taken over the managership of the George Beban road show. Mr. Wilson has been associated with Mr. Lesser for some time as his representative.

MISSION

United Artists Presents

Douglas Fairbanks in

"THE MARK OF ZORRO"

By Johnston McCulley

Directed by Fred Niblo

FRED NIBLO

Fred Niblo was born in Nebraska, of French parentage. His theatrical career commenced during his twentieth year when he went upon the stage. He did everything from vaudeville to the classic drama, and starred in every English-speaking country, including Scotland, Ireland, South Africa, Australia and New Zealand.

When George M. Cohan launched his first venture as a producer, Mr. Niblo was his partner and manager. Two years on the lecture platform followed.

Later the young man took the first moving picture camera into the heart of Central Africa in 1907, where he spent a year securing pictures of intimate native and animal life.

Another expedition took Mr. Niblo into Zululand with the first camera, and still later he also took the first, and as far as is known the only, moving pictures within the palaces of the Sacred Kremlin in Moscow.

He has directed twenty of Enid Bennett's most successful productions, among which are "Hairpins" and "Stepping Out." He is also responsible for the direction of "The Mark of Zorro," Douglas Fairbanks' current release, which opens the new Mission Theatre this week.

Fred Niblo is now producing "The Octopus," a Thomas Ince special, for Associated Producers.

DAISY ROBINSON

Daisy Robinson, who is playing Gussie, the feminine lead in Irvin V. Willat's second independent production, "Partners of the Tide," has been on the stage from the time she was a child actress with road companies. She played with Maude Adams in "Peter Pan" and "Quality Street"; played the sister Tirzah in "Ben Hur," and the blind girl in "The Cricket on the Hearth." Miss Robinson will also be remembered for her part in "Sapho" with Olga Nethersole. She later tried her hand in vaudeville with the two dramatic sketches, "The Duchess" and "At the Sound of the Gong." She also played leads on the stage with Bill Russell before he went into the pictures.

Her picture experience includes leads opposite George Walsh with "Fine Arts"; Julian Elting in "The Clever Mrs. Carfax," and House Peters in the "Happiness of Three Women," both Lasky productions. Some of her latest work has been done with Lyons and Moran in "Fixed by George," and with Douglas Fairbanks in "When the Clouds Roll By."

Jack Carlyle is playing the part of Sergeant Andover in "The Star Rover."

Ted Brooks is playing the part of Kirby in "West Is West."

Frank Braidwood has a part in "West Is West."

Carrie Ward is playing Mrs. Dunbarton in "The Land of Jazz."

Rose Dione is playing Mrs. Lord in "The Land of Jazz."

"Doc" Cannon is playing Inspector Burns in "The Star Rover."

Helen Rockwell, formerly New York newspaper woman, is writing for Allan Dwan.

Bobbie Mack, who has just finished the "Darby" Ghost in Black Beauty," is now playing Eddie, the Yegg, with Antonio Moreno at Vitagraph.

TO DEFINE DRAMATIC PLOT

What is the difference between a dramatic plot and a narrative? "Seventy-five per cent of beginners in scenario writing (and that includes professional short story writers) make the same mistake—that of submitting narrative for plot," says Wycliffe A. Hill, President of the Playwrights' League of America, a national association of free lance writers.

Such screen authorities as C. Garner Sullivan, Jeanie MacPherson, Jack Hawks, June Mathis, Frank E. Wood, Jack Cunningham, William H. Clifford, John Blackwood, Bayard Veiller and William C. de Mille have been requested by the Playwrights' League to prepare a definition of the difference between plot and narrative which will be an aphorism.

These notables are asked to prepare their replies for the first edition of the League's official magazine, which will shortly be issued.

DIRECTORS PLAN CLUBHOUSE

Reginald Barker announces that the building committee of the Motion Picture Directors' Association consists of Ray Clements, David Hartford, Frank Lloyd and Joseph de Grasse. The M. P. D. A. president also announces the purchase of 100 feet on Highland Avenue, Hollywood, which will be the location of the association's building.

According to reports from the East, where she is visiting, Mabel Normand is in poor health and has been under treatment.

Mildred Marsh, sister of Mae Marsh, was married the other day to Ygnacio John For-ester.

JACKIE COOGAN RECOVERING

Jackie Coogan, who sustained a fracture of the skull in an automobile accident, November 12, has recovered sufficiently to be removed from the Glendale Sanatorium to his home on La Brea Ave., Hollywood.

"The Peck's Bad Boy" series of productions, in which Jackie was the featured player, will not be held up to any great extent, as it is expected that the youngster will be able to resume his work before the camera within a month's time.

PINNACLE PRODUCTIONS MOVE

The Pinnacle Productions, Inc., of which Leo White and Neal Hart are the stars, have deserted the Francis Ford studios and are now occupying studio quarters at the Balshofer studios on Gordon St., Hollywood.

Tod Browning has completed the cutting and titling of "Outside the Law," of which he is author and director.

Grover Jones, director of Billy Franey comedies, returned from Big Bear Valley this week, where he took snow scenes for the latest picture starring the comedian.

Cyrus J. Williams, producer of the Tom Santschi Western series, has returned to Los Angeles with his two sons, after a hunting expedition in the mountainous region around Idyllwild.

Frances Parks, formerly with D. W. Griffith, will appear in one of the Star Ranch Westerns now being made for the series of two reelers offered state rights' buyers by C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation of New York.

Will M. Ritchey, retiring as supervising director of the Realart studio on account of ill health, will take a vacation during December, preliminary to assuming new duties as a writer of Paramount Pictures on the staff of Frank Woods.

Wallace Worsley, Goldwyn director, became the father of a twelve-pound son last week. The infant is already the possessor of a savings bank account, to be held in trust until he is of age. This is the gift of Worsley's crew at the Goldwyn studio.

A report from the Clara Barton Hospital states that Tom Santschi is steadily regaining strength after his siege of appendicitis and should be able to resume production in a month or six weeks on his series of Westerns for the Cyrus J. Williams Company.

Esther Lindner, press representative for the Harry Levey Service Corporation, located in New York City, writes us that the statement of one of our Eastern correspondents to the effect that George Beranger is suing Harry Levey over a propaganda feature directed by the former for the latter, is untrue.

tion in which Eva Novak is starring under the direction of Leo McCarey.

Erich Von Stroheim is concluding the scenes for "Foolish Wives," which have kept him in Monterey for a month.

"The Millionaire Kid," featuring Gladys Walton, is about to be started. It is an original story by J. G. Hawks.

Stuart Paton is expected to begin production within a fortnight on "False Colors," Priscilla Dean's forthcoming attraction.

Applications for passports were made by Universal for Magda Lane and Inez MacDonnell, the two girls who will accompany J. P. McGowan to Cuba. Miss Lane and Miss MacDonnell will play opposite Eddie Polo in "The Seal of Satan," a serial in which Polo will employ the historic backgrounds of Moro Castle and San Juan Hill. The company will leave next week and will be away from Universal City for at least fourteen weeks, returning through the Panama canal.

Lucien Hubbard and Doris Schroeder have just completed the scenario of "False Colors," from the story by Edwina Levin, which will afford Priscilla Dean her next starring vehicle.

CENTURY COMEDIES

In order that the rainy season may not interfere with production at the Century Comedies studio an additional covered stage is being constructed. It will measure 60 by 125 feet and will be connected with the animal arena by a series of runways.

Tom Buckingham is starting a new Century Comedy with Harry Swett featured, supported by Zip Monberg and Loyal Underwood.

Director James Davis is beginning the fourth week's work on his current comedy, "What's the Programme?"

"Fire Bugs," a two-reel comedy featuring the Century Wonder Dog, has been completed by Fred Fishback.

AT THE REALART STUDIO

Elmer Harris, author of "Ducks and Drakes," which is now being done as a Bebe Daniels feature, will personally cut and title the production.

Rev. Neal Dodd, "Pastor of the Motion Picture People's Church," again gave his professional services to the screen when Mary Miles Minter and Jack Mulhall were "married" in the Avery Hopwood play now being filmed. Rev. Dodd "tied the knot" and acted as technical director at the same time.

Douglas Bronston is writing the script of "The Next Besters," by Lulua Ragsdale. It will be a Wanda Hawley production.

After completing "Ducks and Drakes," Bebe Daniels will take two days' vacation before starting a new picture, scenarized by Alice Eyton from a Saturday Evening Post story by Nina Wilcox Putnam.

Marine De Mos, the beautiful Greek Comedienne, who is being featured by Snappy Company, the new comedy organization that has been organized by a number of local capitalists under supervision and personal direction of Captain Leslie T. Peacocke, claims to be the only girl in the world who has such perfect control of her eyes that she can "do the shimmy" with them and "jazz" them in any direction and at any speed she so wishes.

Miss De Mos is lately from Athens, the Greek capital, and is a perfect Grecian type, possessing a superb figure, and is a wonderful dancer and swimmer. She has just completed her first two-reel comedy with the Snappy Comedies Company, entitled "The Tale of a Dog—Wagged by Himself," a whimsical, breezy, snappy original story written and directed by Captain Leslie T. Peacocke. Harry Adams played the male lead opposite Miss De Mos. Supporting her were Elsa Erlicher, Carolyne Wood, Rosa Ringier, Maud Howe, little Dolly Dolls, Robert Chandler, Ralph Crussiant, and the dog, "Patch." "The Tale of a Dog" will have its preview at the De Luxe Theatre, South Alvarado Street, on Monday night, December 6th.

Captain Peacocke is arranging to start production on his second comedy for the Snappy Company in about ten days. Frank C. Ketner is behind the camera, and Carolyne Wood is the Art Director and has charge of the costuming department. The office of the company is situated temporarily at 624 South Alvarado Street.

"GODLESS MEN"

WYCLIFFE A. HILL, President of the Photoplaywrights' League of America, says:

Gentlemen:

I saw "Godless Men," and after having analyzed the production I am going to call your attention to a very remarkable thing—which, by the way, accounts for it having been pronounced the wonder picture of the year.

There are only thirty-seven basic dramatic situations in existence. In other words, every plot written in the past and to be written in the future comprises a combination of two or more of these basic dramatic situations. Here is the remarkable thing: The average picture play plot does not contain more than a dozen of these basic dramatic situations. According to my analysis, "Godless Men" rings thirty out of the thirty-seven bells. It COMES NEARER HITTING THEM ALL THAN ANYTHING I have ever seen.

THE SEVERAL THOUSAND STUDENTS OF PHOTOPLAY plot construction and of continuity writing in Los Angeles WILL DO WELL TO GO AND SEE "GODLESS MEN."

Respectfully yours,

WYCLIFFE A. HILL.

Something New in Little Theatres

For several months, a group of Hollywood artists has been engaged in the development of a club known as the Mummers' Workshop, organized for the serious study of all forms of the drama.

Little has been heard of the project through its members or the press, proving its backers to be a modest company, more interested in art than in publicity. Now, however, the Mummers' work is speaking for itself, and we may expect to hear much of their activities in the future. They have established themselves romantically in the well-remembered Dug Out on Morgan Place, and are already in full swing. Classes in experimental theatre production, playwriting, directing, acting, scenic designing, costuming and scenic lighting are being conducted upon schedule.

The club members, who include many well-known picture people, musicians, artists and society women, are divided into two classes—namely, active and associate. The former have the privilege of actual work in any of the study sections, and the latter are entitled to attend the general monthly meetings, etc.

Miss Miriam Meredith, president of the organization, has announced that the productions which will be staged by the Workshop at irregular intervals, will be introduced December 15, 16, 17 and 18, when four one-act plays will be presented under the direction of Clarence Thomas, formerly of the Players' Workshop in Chicago. The presentations will be: "The Prodigal Son," by Harry Kemp; "An Idyl of the Shop," by Ben Heck; "Cocaine," by Hamilton King, and "Columbine," by Reginald Arkell.

It is partly on account of the fact that the purest in art must oftentimes be forgotten by commercialized professions, that the Little Theatres of the world have come into existence. Their work has been excellent, and we are anticipating even greater results from the effort of these Hollywood players. The entire picture industry will rejoice to see them succeed.

The Christmas Number

Purely upon the suggestion and request of the industry, the Camera! staff has prepared a special number for the Christmas issue. It will contain the holiday greetings of the profession located both here and upon the East Coast, as well as special editorial features. Space will be obtainable only this week.

A School for Directors

In the old Biograph days, the shoe clerk, railroader or barber had as favorable an opportunity as any to become a motion picture director. Interest and ambition were the chief qualifications for such a position, when it cost little to experiment. The novelty of the film at that time carried it with the public, and the man at the megaphone drew his fifty a week in comparative peace. In a limited field he rose, like the star, over night; and, if he hung on through good fortune and bad, he is probably with us today, a director of merit, who has grown with the industry. He is the product of years of experience. Undoubtedly, if he is yet active, he has accomplished much.

In the history of the cinema we find many such cases; but what of the future? The old-timers still lead the profession in large numbers. They have won directorial positions with modern concerns, that are spending fabulous sums in production, by their past achievements. Their salaries are twenty times what they once were. For even the much bunkoed public has at last become critical in its choice of favorites, and a director's name may either prove an asset or a detriment to box-office receipts.

With so much at stake, it is only natural that the business head of a responsible company no longer dares to take a chance upon the promotion of just any promising studio attache to so important a station. For the same reason, he cannot sensibly engage a man of unknown ability in that capacity.

This being true, how will our future directors be provided? The author has been suggested and tried out without much satisfaction. It will take him years to learn picture construction, and there is little time to waste. The promotion of the assistant director has also proven successful in very few cases. Mere knowledge of detail can never make of him a dramatist.

The situation as it stands is simply this: There is at present in existence no school for the director. He may no longer learn by experimentation, and yet no other method of graduating him has been established. Production will increase, and time will take its toll.

Has the industry considered the inevitable?

F. R.

SPECIAL PICTURES

Louise Fazenda left this week for a nationwide tour of the principal cities of America. Miss Fazenda is making a new sort of "personal appearance" tour. She is not booked to appear in a single theater, but instead will be the guest of honor at various luncheons, banquets, receptions and dances given by chambers of commerce, exhibitors' associations, press clubs, advertising clubs, and other civic bodies. She will be gone six weeks, returning to start on her first independently produced comedy for the A. L. Hart Productions in January.

Stanley Laurel, English music hall comedian, who has just finished a tour of the Keith and Orpheum circuits in his own vaudeville headline act, has been placed under contract by the Special Pictures Corporation. After playing in an all-star Reggie Morris Comiclassic with Neely Edwards, Charlotte Merriam, and Dave Morris, he is to be given his own company and featured in his own releases.

Marcella Pershing, niece of the general, who recently signed a contract to be featured in comedies with Neely Edwards, Ford Sterling, Chester Conklin and others, has been loaned by Special, for one picture, to Art Acord.

Joseph A. Quinn, special sales supervisor of Special Pictures, has returned to the studios after an extended tour of the Pacific coast.

"Too Many Husbands" is the title of a Comiclassic two-reel release started this week with an all-star cast under the personal supervision of Reggie Morris.

AT THE BRUNTON STUDIO

Robert Kidd, head of the Brunton Studios scenario department and assistant to Robert Brunton, is conducting a still hunt through the book and stage play market for material from which to adapt a series of all-star features. In addition to his editorial duties, Mr. Kidd recently completed two screen dramas of his own, which will probably be produced in the spring.

Director W. S. Van Dyke has taken Ruth Roland and her troupe of cowpunchers to the town of Daggett, on the Mojave desert, to film several thousand feet of exteriors for the final episodes of the star's latest adventure serial, "The Avenging Arrow." Eddie Hearn and Al Jennings have important parts in this production.

Final camera work has been completed on Benjamin B. Hampton's latest feature, "There Was a King in Egypt." Howard Hickman is the director of this production, and Claire Adams heads the cast.

Director Reginald Barker and company have arrived safely at Banff, Canada, where they will make snow scenes for Katherine Newlin Burt's story, "Snow Blindness."

Paul Bern, directing the twelfth episode of the Booth Tarkington "Edgar" stories, completed his cast this week.

Rupert Hughes is spending every day on the set where "Mr. and Miserable Jones," his first original photoplay, is being filmed under the direction of E. Mason Hopper.

Clarence Badger is preparing to direct Will Rogers' next picture, which has not been named as yet.

Charles Kenyon has nearly finished the continuity for his original story, "The Alibi." Elmer L. Rice has finished the screen version of "The Christian" by Hall Caine. Gerald C. Duffy is working on the continuity of an original story by Leroy Scott.

AT THE REALART STUDIO

Frank V. Biggy has resigned as superintendent of the laboratory. He is succeeded by Harry Ensign, who has been assistant superintendent for some time. On the day of his departure Mr. Biggy was presented with a gold watch by the studio employees in appreciation of his long service.

AT VITAGRAPH

The finished print of "Black Beauty" was shipped this week from Western Vitagraph to the company's laboratory and studios in Brooklyn, where it will be finally edited by Lillian and George Randolph Chester. It will be released early in the new year.

The interior of the Florence, Ariz., prison has been duplicated at the Vitagraph studio for scenes in "Three Sevens." Antonio Moreno's first feature, now being made under the direction of Chester Bennett.

Since his return from New York two weeks ago Mr. Dwan has been busy preparing the script for the picture which he himself will direct. The story is the work of Carl Clausen, and originally appeared in the Saturday Evening Post.

Jacqueline Logan, a Ziegfeld girl imported from the Follies by Mr. Dwan, will play the leading feminine role opposite Mr. Blue. The major part of the cast has not yet been chosen.

"GODLESS MEN"

Goldwyn presents "Godless Men," the screen adaptation of Ben Ames Williams' "The Black Pawl," at the California. The story is a gripping drama staged upon the high seas. It embodies a powerful theme that is far more effective in its human, natural presentation than have been so many of our recent productions which have depended upon trick photography, double exposure, etc., to establish their spiritual trends.

The picture is beautifully handled and the cast is excellent.

Russell Simpson plays the featured role, Black Pawl. His characterization combines all of the artistry which he has displayed upon various occasions in less interesting parts. We know of no one else who could interpret the role as he has. That the audience is kept in tears during the last sequence in which Mr. Russell appears is far more due to his beautiful work than to the situation.

James Mason is well cast as Red Pawl, the evil part of his father. His work is absolutely convincing.

Helene Chadwick gives a very intelligent and consistent performance as Ruth Lytton. Hers seems to be the ability to get over exactly what she attempts.

Alec B. Francis plays Samuel Poor, the philosophical missionary, beautifully. In these roles his subtlety is unexcelled.

John Bowers makes a delightful juvenile and introduces the story's romance.

Robert Kortman plays Spiess, and little Frankie Lee does Red Pawl as a child.

Irene Rich and Lionel Belmore each do "bits" effectively.

Reginald Barker has made a real screen drama of his production.

"THE MASTER MIND"

The First National production, "The Master Mind," starring Lionel Barrymore, is running at the Kinema. The story deals with a great mind seeking revenge and its details are somewhat unusual. The play is well staged.

Mr. Barrymore's interpretation of Henry Allen, the "master mind," is highly artistic and more than impressive. It marks his very interesting debut in First National releases.

Gypsy O'Brien plays Maggie Flynt, a victim of circumstances, satisfactorily. Miss O'Brien is as yet a stranger to us.

Ralph Kellard is good as Courtland Wainwright, the too aspiring young politician.

Bradley Barker and Bernard Randell are well cast as Creegan, safe cracker, and Diamond Willie, whose title speaks for itself.

Charles Brandt and Marion Shotwell complete the cast.

Kenneth Webb directed.

Helen Hamilton, formerly associated with the publicity department of the Educational Films Corporation in New York under the direction of R. E. Pritchard, has arrived in Los Angeles to take a similar position in the Western publicity department of Associated First National Pictures.

Alex Francis is playing another of his familiar roles in "A Voice in the Dark," at the California this week.

Irene Hunt is playing Badoura in "Moon Madness" at the Hippodrome this week.

Clair De Lorez is playing Senorita Juanita Bonellos in "The Scuttlers."

Tom Ricketts is playing in "Bonnie May."

R. D. FILMS, INC.

The Denver Dixon Comedy Company has been incorporated and rechristened the R. D. Films, Inc. The company will continue to produce one-reel comedies at Long Beach, which will be distributed by Plymouth Pictures, Inc., of New York, and expects to start making features within the year.

Denver Dixon extends thanks through the Camera! to his friends for past kindnesses.

"THE FURNACE"

"The Furnace," a William D. Taylor production, is a current Paramount release. In this screen version of the story by Pan there is too much repetition of situations to render it absolutely convincing as a photoplay. It is the story alone that is weak, however, for the cast is very good and the direction is well handled.

Agnes Ayres appears in the leading feminine role, or that of the actress who marries in pride. Miss Ayres is very beautiful and impresses one with her obvious intelligence. She promises much for the future.

Jerome Patrick satisfactorily plays her rather passive husband, a British millionaire.

Most of the male honors are appropriated by Milton Sills, who in reality plays a second lead. His work is as clever as we have seen him do.

Betty Francisco plays opposite Mr. Sills. She gets her action over very well indeed.

Mayme Kelso is excellent as the girl's mother. Lucien Littlefield plays her brother.

On the whole, the picture is a satisfactory drama.

"OUT OF THE SNOWS"

Selznick presents Ralph Ince in "Out of the Snows" at Clune's Broadway. It is a story of the Northwest and contains some exceptional scenic effects. The plot of the production is unrelieved by new angles, but will probably please those who care for this type of thing.

Ralph Ince plays Robert Holliday, of the Northwest Mounted Police, satisfactorily.

Zena Keefe does Anitah, the little Indian, rather well, and in this role proves more interesting than usual.

Patrick Hartigan is John Blakeman, the heavy, and Huntley Gordon is cast as Sergeant Graham. We would like to see the latter in a real part.

Gladys Coburn does Ruth, the American girl.

Red Eagle and Jacque Suzanne complete the cast.

Ralph Ince directed.

"THE STAR ROVER"

Metro presents Jack London's "The Star Rover," at Miller's. Our more morbid brothers will undoubtedly receive several thrills from it, since it is far from airy. However, gruesomeness is a characteristic of Mr. London's original.

Courtenay Foote plays Dr. Hugh Standing, the subject of more brutality than is quite digestible. He does more with the part than possibly could have been expected, since it is rather disjointed and therefore difficult.

Thelma Percy does Faith Levering, the doctor's fiancée.

"Doc" Cannon plays Inspector Burns pugnaciously at least, and Dwight Crittenden is the district attorney.

Jack Carlyle, Chance Ward and Marcella Daley complete the cast.

Edward Sloman handled the direction.

NEW COMPANY TO PRODUCE AT MAYER PLANT

One of the latest companies to enter the western moving picture field is Brewster-Kemble Productions, of Boston, Mass., of which George H. Brewster, New England newspaper owner, is president; Donald W. Parsons, Boston financier, secretary and treasurer, and John Kemble, vice-president and director-general. Mr. Kemble, who for the last few years has directed the publicity for nearly all the large war drives in the New England states, and prior to that time was a producer of motion picture and vaudeville novelties, has arrived in Los Angeles, and with his family, has taken up residence here to personally supervise all productions.

Space has been engaged at the Louis B. Mayer studio, and all productions will be made there. The company's first release will be a series of short reel features. Theodore Wharton, producer and director of "The Eagle's Eye" and "Patria," will direct the first series, continuity for which is being prepared by Robert A. Sanborn, who wrote the O. Henry scripts for Vitagraph and has just severed his connection with the Famous Players-Lasky Company.

Negotiations are under way for further staff members and Mr. Kemble announces that active production will begin around New Years.

MARTIN NOW WITH UNION

Director Al Martin has severed all connections with Pinnacle Productions and is now directing Alexander Alt and Helen Howell in the new series of Alt-Howell comedies.

K. Hoddy Milligan has left the Union Film Company and has been succeeded by J. T. Whitlaw, Minneapolis banker.

May Allison is spending her vacation between pictures supervising the improvements at her new home in Beverly Hills. A garden is being laid out and a tennis court built.

Tom Wilson has just signed with John Emerson and Anita Loos to appear in "American Love." Locations for the picture will take them to San Diego, New York and Washington, D. C.

Mr. and Mrs. Emil Flugrath, the parents of Viola Dana and Shirley Mason, have returned to California after several months spent in New York. They are now living with their two daughters in their newly purchased home in Hollywood.

Jimmy Morrison has been dividing his time between the Vitagraph studio, where he plays a prominent part in "Black Beauty," and the Berwillia lot, where he is playing leads in Neva Gerber's current picture, to be released through Associated Photoplays, Inc.

DEL RUTH WITH MAYER

It is what the public wants, and if other directors and producers would create the same kind of pictures the people would be getting worthwhile pictures and the business would develop in an even more profitable way.

THINGS YOU WON'T READ ANYWHERE ELSE

By Frank P. Donovan

There is unprecedented idleness in New York now. No one can predict the future.

Famous Players have laid off everybody and closed their Eastern studio until further notice.

Robert Ellis is becoming a member of the Motion Picture Directors' Association, New York lodge.

Dorothy Dalton is finishing her latest production, entitled "The Teaser," a story of the Canadian Northwest.

Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle is another of our American stars who is being winned and dined by the crowned heads of Europe.

Edgar Lewis is in New York and at the retreat for all good players and directors, the Green Room Club.

Paul Allen, Bell & Howell and Pathe outfits an' all, has deserted the Griffith lot after a year. Paul is now doing a special picture for a new firm.

Wall Street intends putting into effect a new system of production including a flat rate to stars per picture and a certain amount to be expended on each picture along radical lines heretofore untried.

Richard Stanton, who has been taking a vacation in London and Paris studying foreign motion picture production possibilities, has returned to New York and will soon start directing under the Fox banner.

The Green Roomers are not green. The acting schools are not schools. Bill Turner is not going to be king of Ireland. Burton King is only King by name, so is Henry King, Leslie King and King Vidor. Kings are becoming common.

Contracts have been signed between Marguerite Clark and the Associated First National whereby the latter will distribute a series of Marguerite Clark's productions. The first will be "Scrambled Wives," made under the direction of Edward H. Griffith.

John L. McCutcheon, with his assistants, Murphy and King, and his camera man, Crowley, his studio manager, Frank Conway, Captain F. F. Stoll and several members of the cast of "Determination," are completing arrangements to leave for New Orleans, where they will photograph scenes in "Determination."

A. in New York will gladly forward any contribution from coast directors. Send remittances to C. Jay Williams, Motion Picture Directors' Association, 247 W. 54th St., N. Y.

Edward Montague is still under contract with Selznick. Ed, if you remember, was one of the mainstays of Vitagraph along with Ralph Ince, Ray Gallegher and a few dozen others. Now Ed, with Ralph and some others, have started the Vitagraphers' Club, which will be composed of old Vitagraphers of other days.

en. Lyman Broening will photograph the production, assisted by Gordon Pollock as second cameraman, while James Ewens will again assist Mr. Dwan. Alfred Cheney Johnston has been engaged to make a series of special stills of the production to be used for lobby displays.

ON LOCATION

Bob Horner, formerly connected with Universal, is now directing a series of western dramas for the Beau Arts Film Company, an Eastern concern. Horner, who is shooting his sixth subject, has taken his company to Santa Susana Pass, where he will stage battle scenes. Atlas is casting.

EMERSON AND LOOS LAUNCH PICTURE

John Emerson and Anita Loos arrived in Los Angeles last Friday night from New York to begin work on "Wife Insurance," their first special production. They were accompanied by Basil Sidney and May Collins, who will play leading roles in the picture; M. S. Epstein, business manager, and James A. Creelman, of the Emerson-Loos organization.

The picture will be directed by Victor Fleming, who recently directed the Emerson-Loos screen version of "Mama's Affair" for Constance Talmadge.

Emerson and Miss Loos have not left the Jos. M. Schenck organization and are still in charge of the Constance Talmadge productions for First National release. However, their contract with Schenck allows them to make other pictures outside. Schenck has agreed to accept "Wife Insurance" upon completion.

After a fortnight's visit, Emerson and Miss Loos will leave the production in the hands of Fleming and return to New York to adapt the Charles Hoyt play, "A Contented Woman," for Connie's use.

METRO COMPANIES

Alice Lake, with members of her company, now filming "Uncharted Seas," will journey northward to the frigid regions of Alaska, where the necessary ice scenes called for in the script will be shot.

"The Woman Who Went Away" is the title selected for Metro's special production of John Fleming Wilson's story, "The Uncharted Seas," now being filmed.

KAUFMAN PRODUCTION RETITLED

From the office of Albert Kaufman comes the announcement that the title for Sidney Franklin's initial independent production will be "Not Guilty." It is an adaptation from the Harold MacGrath story, "Parrot and Company."

Franklin and Sada Cowan, scenarists, are now preparing the script for the second production to be made under Kaufman's contract with First National. It will be a picture of Andrew Soutar's story, "Courage." The cast will be announced next week.

HART ON LAST PRODUCTION

William S. Hart is at work on his last picture for Paramount and still declares that it will mark his retirement from the screen. He intends to write a series of Indian stories for boys.

AT LASKY'S

It is announced that Thomas Heffron has been assigned to direct Ethel Clayton in her first picture since her return to the Pacific coast. It will be adapted from the play, "Sham," by Elmer Harris and Geraldine Bonner. Miss Clayton is scheduled to begin work January 3 and preparations are now being made for the settings and the cast is being selected.

Ethel Chaffin, costume designer at the Lasky studio, has returned from a trip to Europe, where she was engaged in acquiring ideas in the leading fashion marts.

Elsie Ferguson arrived in Los Angeles December 7 from New York and will start almost immediately in her new starring vehicle, William D. Taylor's production, "Sacred and Profane Love," scenarized by Julia Crawford Ivers from the play by Arnold Bennett.

Thomas Meighan arrived December 8 from New York and started at once on scenes for his picture adapted from "The Quarry," by John Moroso. The picture was started in New York and is more than half completed. Tom Forman, who is directing, arrived a day or so in advance of the star, accompanied by Harold Schwartz, his assistant, and Harry Perry, the cameraman. Lois Wilson will be leading woman. Two members of the cast also came from New York, namely, George McQuarrie and Paul Everton.

Lila Lee is in New York on a brief vacation, but is expected back shortly when she will be assigned to a new picture.

George Melford is scheduled to start January 3 on his production, "The Money Master," by Sir Gilbert Parker. Mr. Melford and Sir Gilbert are collaborating in the scenario.

Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle returns the first part of January and is expected to start work the middle of that month on a new five-reel comedy, "Three Miles Out," by Frank Condon, directed by James Cruze.

CENTURY COMEDIES

Announcement is made that the name of the L-Ko Motion Picture Company has been changed to the Century Film Corporation. The studio address remains unchanged.

Tom Buckingham is filming the final scenes of his comedy, "His Magnetic Personality," featuring Harry Swett.

Work is proceeding at great speed on "What's the Programme?" under the direction of Jim Davis.

MERMAID COMEDIES

"April Fool," featuring Lloyd "Ham" Hamilton, was given a premier showing at the Strand Theatre in New York last week. It is booked for a future showing at the Kinema.

Managed by Successful Los Angeles Business Men

The erection at San Pedro of the splendid ship-building and ship repair business of the Los Angeles Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company is due in large measure to the far-sightedness of a group of successful business men of Los Angeles. These men foresaw that with the resumption of sea trading between America and the great markets of the Orient the need for such a business would be imperative.

The location at Los Angeles Harbor is strategic. It is in direct rail connection with the interior workshops of the nation. The great Circle Route from the Panama to the Orient lies but a few miles off the coast, making Los Angeles Harbor an easy port of call.

The Los Angeles Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company own and operate the only large dry dock facilities south of San Francisco. This company, therefore, is in excellent position to get more than its share of repair business.

These facts give the investor assurance that his funds invested in this company's 8% Serial Gold Bonds are soundly invested. Total assets subject to this bond issue exceed $8,000,000. The property on which these bonds are a first lien is valued at nearly $5,000,000.

Average annual net earnings have exceeded in each year the par value of this entire bond issue. Serial annual retirement of bonds steadily increases equity behind outstanding bonds.

The price of these bonds is 100 and accrued interest on all maturities. The yield is 8%.

Call at our office in person, write or phone for circular completely descriptive of this high-grade investment security—Booklet C-1218.

What Sort of Propaganda?

Editor of Camera!

Why is it that film producers refuse to film plays written from the 20th Century point of view? There is a tremendous struggle going on today between the old order of things and the new order in religion, politics, medicine, art, science, industry, economics, society, etc., but this world-wide struggle is being totally ignored by producers. For example, there are chiropractors and Christian Scientists in real life, but no chiropractors or Christian Scientists appear in photoplays. A film producer films quantities of plays containing propaganda in favor of the old school of medicine, and says it is not propaganda, but he refuses to film any play containing any allusion to chiropractic or Christian Science, on the ground that it is propaganda. The new order is propaganda but the old order isn't! Is this fair? The same is true of the sex struggle between man and woman, the struggle between labor and capital, etc. Every play exhibited in 1920 could have been written twenty years ago.

There is something dangerously wrong with a nation whose art lags behind life, whose art producers, creators and exhibitors, either through moral or spiritual cowardice, or through inertia, allow themselves to be controlled by the dead hand of the past.

People today can find more mental excitement, stimulation, interest and entertainment by staying home at night and reading the newspapers and magazines than by attending the theaters. When people read in the daily papers and such magazines as "Asia," "The Nation," etc., of the exciting events happening in Ireland, Russia, Italy, etc., the vacuous 19th Century plays exhibited on the screen today fall flat and make people utterly disgusted with the theater.

If the Russian Soviet government sent over a photoplay portraying its ideas of government, the entire population of the United States would try to see such a play. Why? Not because all Americans are in sympathy with Sovietism, but because people go to theaters to see the new, the novel, the startling.

I am absolutely opposed to the teachings of Christian Science, but I would gladly go to see a good photodrama based on the phenomenal rise of the Christian Science church, because such a play would portray the new order. The fact that other people have this same desire is shown by the way people flocked to see "Earthbound," being fooled by its title into thinking "Earthbound" was a play portraying modern spiritualism, though "Earthbound" was really propaganda for a certain old-established, conservative church, and the title was the only part having any connection with the new spiritualistic movement.

Film producers are only able to "put over" their plays today by using an immense amount of expensive advertising, high-salaried stars, various "contests," and by employing well-known authors to write scenarios.

A wonderful drama could be written of the persecutions of chiropractors in this state and elsewhere today, and if a film producer will only wake up to this fact and produce photoplays based on current events and actual happenings of today, he will achieve a success far beyond his wildest dreams.

I am appealing to you to ascertain if there is a film producer in this state or county who is willing to produce a really modern, 20th Century play, and also plays written from a woman's point of view. There has never been a photoplay written from a woman's viewpoint, or portraying the woman's side of any question. Is there a producer fair-minded enough to film such a play?

Trusting that you will publish this letter, so that I may be able to obtain the desired information, I am

Very truly yours,

CHARLOTTE F. JONES.

Yes, the foregoing letter is well worth publishing if only that in answering it we may be able to say a word in defense of the producers upon whom its writer lands so peremptorily.

First, in accusing them of being interested only in propaganda of an ancient order, she displays either a pitiful lack of information or else an amazing prejudice. That such a thing is intentional among our big picture makers is absurd. Then to prove that our modern scenarists scorn to gain sympathy for the new, or progress, if you will, she chooses the chiropractor and the Christian Scientist as examples and states that they are neglected in our current films. Her idea is obviously to eliminate propaganda for all save strictly 20th Century movements in cinema plays. Excellent! and certainly worth considering were it not that we have long since passed up even that advanced type of thing in the knowledge that any sort of labeled propaganda is something that may not be tolerated in the picture that succeeds. The film is a free agent; consequently no circle in the world may utilize it to force beliefs, old or new, upon the people. Moreover, if there is one thing that producers are desiring today above all others, it is to turn out photoplays whose themes are big enough for universal application.

We are convinced that this lady's information about "Earthbound" is also in error. Mr. King's somewhat startling venture was merely an attempt at the unusual in the spiritual; and in so far as we can learn, not one of its audiences has been impressed with the idea that this very popular production was a "sold at both ends" proposition. In criticising a picture, we must yet consider the box office.

If there still remains to be filmed the modern woman's viewpoint, we have that to look forward to. In fact, the next year will undoubtedly produce it, if present indications mean anything. This is certain: When the much-referred-to "new women" are in the majority, they will be among those present in the drama. Again we repeat: "The public gets what it orders."

ANOTHER NEILAN FEATURE

News of the production of a picture which has been quietly under way for the past four months is disclosed in the initial announcement concerning this film, issued by Marshall Neilan. This production has been under way during the filming of "Dinty" and "Not a Drum Was Heard." It is a picturization of Randall Parrish's "Bob Hampton of Placer."

Actual shooting on the picture will be finished in about ten days, when the task of cutting and assembling will be started by Mr. Neilan, with the assistance of Miss Fairfax and D. J. Gray.

The length of the production and its title have not yet been decided on. It will be released through Associated First National, soon after the first of the year.

FAIRBANKS PICTURE PROGRESSING

Progress is being made in the filming of "The Nut," Douglas Fairbanks' fifth United Artists starring vehicle.

The interior "sets" are being constructed, and the cast has been selected by "Doug" and his new director, Ted Reed. The photographing will be in charge of Harry Thorpe and William McGann. Robert Fairbanks will continue as manager of productions.

SHIPMAN PRODUCING CONNOR STORIES

Ralph Connor's story, "The Foreigner," had its premiere showing at the Biltmore Hotel in New York last week. The occasion was the annual dance and dinner given by the Canadian Club of New York. The picture is the first of a series of productions to be made under the supervision of Ernest Shipman for release through the Associated First National.

The second production, "Cameron of the Royal Mounted," has already been completed, and Director Henry MacRae has started on the third, "The Patrol of the Sun Dance Trail." Gaston Glass will play the leading role.

CHAPLIN BACK

Charlie Chaplin has returned to his Hollywood Studio, where Carter de Haven is now filming "The Girl in the Taxi."

Room will be made on the stages so that Chaplin can soon start work on the first of a series of three two-reel productions that will be released through Associated First National Pictures.

AT VITAGRAPH

"Three Sevens," Antonio Moreno's new feature, is rapidly nearing the end of production under the direction of Chester Bennett. It will be completed within two more weeks.

William Duncan and Edith Johnson have reached the ninth episode of their new chapter play, "Fighting Fate," and completion of the serial before its release date is assured.

Earle Williams is taking a motor trip while continuity is being prepared for his next feature. He just finished "Diamonds Adrift."

Joe Ryan is preparing to take his Western unit, "The Purple Riders," to San Francisco for scenes in Chinatown.

Maurice Tourneur will return shortly to Los Angeles and begin his second "A. P." subject, the name of which he guards with much secrecy.

BORZAGE TO DO "GET-RICH-QUICK" WALLINGFORD

"Get-Rich-Quick" Wallingford is to be put on the screen. The work has been entrusted to Frank Borzage. Episodes of the various Wallingford stories will be combined in one play for this production.

AT GOLDWYN

Will Rogers' next starring vehicle will be O. Henry's "Whistling Dick's Christmas Stocking." Arthur F. Statter has made the screen version. Clarence G. Badger will again direct.

Pauline Starke, a member of the cast of the Reginald Barker company filming "Snow Blindness," has been suffering from a serious infection of the eyes. The company is on location at Banff, Canada. For a time it was feared that her sight would be impaired, but she has now recovered.

Director Wallace Worsley and the company filming Gertrude Atherton's first original photoplay are on location at Del Monte, California. They will return this week. "Noblesse Oblige," the working title of the picture, will be changed before it is released.

The title of Rupert Hughes' first photoplay has been changed from "Mr. and Miserable Jones" to "Dangerous Curve Ahead." E. Mason Hopper is directing.

The Boxer rebellion will be staged this week in a specially built Chinese street as a part of "The Water Lily," a Frank Lloyd production of an original story by Gouverneur Morris.

In "Mr. Barnes of New York," Tom Moore's present vehicle, the star is being directed for the first time by Victor L. Schertzinger. Naomi Childers is again playing opposite Mr. Moore.

AT UNIVERSAL

Erich Von Stroheim is expected back this week from Monterey, California, where he has been filming scenes for "Foolish Wives." He will spend approximately six weeks more in production before the work is ready for the screen.

The opening scenes for "False Colors," Priscilla Dean's forthcoming photodrama, are being filmed under the direction of Stuart Paton.

A California gold mine is being used as location for the concluding scenes of "Colorado," Frank Mayo's forthcoming production, which Reeves Eason is directing.

Production on "The Millionaire Kid," which was delayed by injuries to Gladys Walton, the star, and Antrim Short, her leading man, is again in full swing.

"The Diamond Queen," by Jacques Futrelle, has been finished.

Edward Laemmle is directing Hoot Gibson in a Western drama.

News cabled from Havana states that Eddie Polo has begun work on his forthcoming serial, "The Seal of Satan," the scenes of which are laid in Cuba and other Atlantic islands.

Vin Moore is at work on another Dorothy Wolbert comedy, "The Adorable Lover."

Marcel de Sano is busy with the manuscript of "The Dangerous Moment," by Douglas Doty, in which he will direct Carmel Myers as soon as she has finished her current feature.

Before leaving for New York, Carl Laemmle announced that Priscilla Dean's last Jewel feature, "Outside the Law," produced by Tod Browning, would have its world premiere in Los Angeles about Christmas week.

GRANDON TO DO ANIMAL SERIAL

Francis Grandon, who was responsible for the direction of the first serial success, "The Adventures of Kathlyn," starring Kathlyn Williams, is preparing an animal serial to be filmed by himself upon the Selig lot. Work will commence next month.

"HELIOTROPE"

"Heliotrope," another Cosmopolitan production, has commenced an indefinite run at Grauman's Rialto. It is one of the at present so popular theme stories, and treats of a father's sacrifice. George D. Baker has handled the staging and the direction of his unusual cast with ease and artistry. The story combines the appeal of "Humoresque" with several novel situations in a manner that will be certain to attract. Richard Washburn Child is responsible for the original novel from which the adaptation was made.

Fred Burton, who heads the cast in the role of "Heliotrope Harry," not only an aristocrat of the underworld, and convict, but also an adoring and self-sacrificing father, accomplishes a characterization that is truly wonderful. His attitudes, first as the cringing "lifer," and later as the resourceful, heroic parent who dedicates his life to the protection of his unknown daughter and her happiness, are the versatile yet consistent work of an artist.

In the role of Mollie Hasdock, his wife and she-devil blackmailer, Julia Swayne Gordon is equally well cast. Her performance convinces the audience of her knowledge and mastery of what she attempts; her technique is superb.

William D. Mack is very good as "Spike" Foley, the reformed crook, pal of Heliotrope Harry. He impresses with his extreme sensitivity.

Thomas J. Findlay has several good scenes as Warden Pyne, who believes in the reform system.

Diana Allen, a very attractive little ingenue, does the really small part of Alice Hale, the girl whose existence provides the story's plot. She has little action, but is delightfully cast as the child who, although born in crime and disorder, grows up in innocence of her origin.

Wilfred Lytell, who, although unknown to us, possesses a profile that bears a decided resemblance to that of Bert Lytell, plays Jimmie Andrews, Diana's young sweetheart. Theirs is a very pretty romance.

William H. Tooker does the Governor. The play rings true in its humanness. Moreover, by subtly placing the audience in a position to view both a tense drama and a beautiful romance (the one occasioned by and interwoven in the other, and the latter untouched apparently by the first), it tactfully impresses the public with the fact that it is indeed privileged. Again we acclaim this an unusual picture.

"HALF AN HOUR"

The screen version of Sir James Barrie's play, "Half an Hour," is presented this week at Clune's Broadway. It has not the screen possibilities that the original had on the stage, and is only fairly interesting. It may take well with the small-town audience which always "falls for" gorgeous clothes and the almost sensational.

Dorothy Dalton is starred in the role of Lady Lillian. Miss Dalton is beautiful, and her work means more than usual.

Charles Richman appears opposite her as her husband, Richard Garson. As a leading man, he is certainly disappointing.

Albert Barrett accomplishes Hugh Paton in a fairly satisfactory manner.

Frank Losee's performance as Dr. Brodie forms real relief from the general mediocrity of the cast.

Hazel Turney does Susie, a slavey. Her introduction promises more than she accomplishes, but a promise is something.

Harry Knoles directed.

NEGRI PRODUCTION HAS NEW YORK PREMIERE

"Passion," the Associated First National special production starring Pola Negri, will have its American premiere at the Capitol Theatre, New York, this week. It opened in that theatre last Sunday. The film marks the American debut of Pola Negri as a star and Ernest Lubitsch as a director.

Current Reviews

"THE SAPHEAD"

Metro presents Winchell Smith's "The Saphead," an adaptation of "The New Henrietta," at Tally's. William H. Crane and Buster Keaton are featured. The latter, however, has the title role and provides all of the interest that the picturized version of the play holds.

The story is a rather sad mixture of the usual Wall Street line and Buster's unadulterated slapstick. The last is very amusing in spots, although it is weirdly silhouetted against a serious background.

Mr. Crane does the character role, and, although he is always good, there is little reason why the part should be featured. It is certainly unimportant.

Irving Cummings does the only ordinary heavy as well as is possible. The role is also unfortunate.

Carol Holloway and Beulah Booker have been given most of the feminine footage as Rose and Agnes. Their parts mean nothing.

Katherine Albert, Helen Holte, Alfred Hollingsworth, Henry Claus, Jeffery Williams, Edward Connelly, Jack Livingston, Edward Alexander and Edward Jobson complete the cast. They are all given lengthy titles in the deceptive press sheets on the play. Their action has been, however, butchered into a set of bewildering bits, some of which gave real promise.

Authors certainly seem to be slipping when it comes to demonstrating their knowledge of cinema construction.

Fontaine La Rue is playing Sila in "Two Kinds of Love."

"A VOICE IN THE DARK"

Frank Lloyd's Goldwyn production, "A Voice in the Dark," plays at the California Theatre this week. It is an exceptionally good detective story, depending entirely upon the suspense and twists in the plot and the performance of its cast to carry it. It will prove entertaining to those who enjoy its type.

Irene Rich heads the all-star cast as an alleged murderess. She does some excellent work, probably her best.

Ora Carewe plays her younger sister. The part is rather inconsequential and requires little action, although it has a place in the story's complication.

Ramsey Wallace does the assistant district attorney opposite Miss Rich. He has some interesting scenes.

Alan Dale is cast as Sainpolis, the heavy, whose murder occasions the climax of the play. He is an excellent type for the suave Doctor.

Richard Tucker's interpretation of the police lieutenant is one of the best performances of the kind that we have seen. He interested us in his comparatively small role as much as any other actor in the piece.

Gertrude Norman has to her credit an excellent "bit" as the state's star witness, a deaf and otherwise invalid inmate of the Glenwood Sanatorium.

Alice Hollister's ordinary introduction as the old lady's nurse makes her subsequent confession of the murder a complete surprise. Her good work carries her character's rather overdrawn action.

William Scott does the unfortunate woman's brother.

Alec Francis plays another blind man in this story. He takes all possible advantage of his opportunity in this character, who solves the mystery.

James Neill, with an interesting touch or so, gives the head of the sanatorium a real personality.

The performance makes up for the slightly disconnected and illogical situations of the play.

"THE COUNTY FAIR"

Maurice Tourneur's "The County Fair" shows at the Kinema. It is an adaptation of the Neil Burgess play by the same name. It lacks, however, much that the 1920 public demands in picture entertainment. The rather slimpsey story has been strung together with rural atmosphere that is too apparent "padding." The well known plot is unrelieved in its age, but the cast is good, better, in fact, than the roles provide opportunity for the actors to prove.

Helen Jerome Eddy is quite well cast as Sally, the simple-hearted heroine.

David Butler's role of Joel is disappointing in that it gives him nothing to do.

Edith Chapman and John Stepping have to their credit some comedy which in places is very clever, as Aunt Abigail and Otis Tucker, her bashful suitor.

At that, it remains for Wesley Barry to win the audience in the small role of Tommy Perkins.

William V. Mong has a few good scenes as Solon Hammerhead, the convincing villain, and Arthur Houseman plays his son.

Charles Barton is the jockey, Tim Vail.

The production fails to convince as a serious proposition, as a result the pathos misses.

Scott McKee is playing "the Weazel" in Louise Lovely's current Fox production, directed by Jack Hill.

William Irving is playing Andrew Larkin in "Twin Beds."

GETTING ACQUAINTED WITH INTERESTING PEOPLE

CHARLES GORDON

Charles Gordon was born in Ballycroile, Ireland. At an early age he crossed to England, and later after a trip to Shanghai, entered Eton college at Windsor.

He was trained for diplomacy. Finally he joined the army as a lieutenant in the Irish Guards. He was for a while manager of the entire depot theatricals at Ripon Command depot.

Following his discharge from the army on account of disabilities, Mr. Gordon spent more than two years on the stage, appearing in "The Wiggler," "The Ghost of Jerry Bundler," "The Joss-House," "Nicodemus," and "The Vishnu." The latter was his own ballet, which he produced at the Rye theatre. The young actor had been tutored in the ballet by Checetti, Master of the Imperial Russian Ballet.

Later he deserted the footlights for the screen and appeared in the following English productions: "Lady Clare," "The Polar Star," "The Auction Mart," "The Usurper," "The Castle of Dreams," etc.

About six months ago Gordon arrived in the States. Since that time he has played the male lead opposite Bessie Love in "Bonnie May," Clarence in "The Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," and the juvenile lead in "Scattergood Makes a Hit," an Edna Schley production.

In a short time he expects to lead his own company, now being organized, as director.

SPANISH PAINTER WITH METRO

Mario Larrinaga, Spanish painter and designer, has taken possession of one of the art studios at the Metro studios in Hollywood and in the future will do the art work for Metro productions. Mr. Larrinaga will assist Amos Myers, head of that organization's art department, in the designing of unique sets for forthcoming productions.

Helen Howard and Marjorie Prevost have been cast for parts in the Metro all-star production, "What's the Matter with Marriage?" which Philip E. Rosen is directing.

CAMERAMEN ASSIGNED

Cameramen for the new Metro pictures have been assigned. Sol Polito is working on Alice Lake's new starring vehicle, "Uncharted Seas;" Allen Siegler is photographing the all-star production of "What's the Matter with Marriage?"; John Arnold will photograph Viola Dana in "Home Stuff," and Jackson Rose is behind the camera for "Big Game," May Allison's newest production.

Virginia Lee will shortly be seen in a leading part in Marguerite Clark's production, "Scrambled Wives," which will come to the screen via Associated First National release. The production is under the direction of Edward Griffith, and will be completed shortly after January 1st.

Puss Applegate is in the South, doing a picture.

Frank S. Mattison is writing and will direct the next three Romances of Youth for the series of that name being distributed by the Reelcraft Pictures Corporation. The productions will be made in New York.

California papers contain advertisements paid for by Niles Welch, denying that he has gone to Universal.

Ralph Block, formerly dramatic editor of the Kansas City Star and New York Tribune, and more recently director of advertising and publicity for the Goldwyn Company, has been chosen for the post of editor of the scenario and research department (in New York) of Goldwyn Pictures Corporation.

Tina Modotti has joined the ranks of the Dial Film Company.

"Broncho Billy" Anderson has organized a new company to return to the screen.

Les Bates is playing Gil Brandon, the second heavy, with William S. Hart.

Gordon McKim is playing "Compton" in "Three Sevens," Tony Moreno's new feature.

Art Dennis is playing heavies with the Alt-Cameron Comedy Company.

Forrest Stanley has been engaged by Metro to play opposite May Allison in "Big Game."

Carl Gerard is enacting an important role in Alice Lake's forthcoming production, "The Woman Who Went Away."

Florence Lawrence has arrived from San Francisco and is rehearsing her role in "The Unfoldment."

A sign of the times is the act of J. L. Frothingham, who has discarded stars and will hereafter make only non-star pictures.

Hal Mohr will turn the crank for the first Florence Lawrence production to be supervised by George H. Kern.

Percy Hilburn, who photographs all the Reginald Barker productions, has purchased a home on Highland Avenue.

The matter of Frank F. Greene Art Titles made up in lantern slides to present choice bits of humor and editorials at Grauman's Million Dollar theater, is pending.

Zeffie Tillbury has been cast for an important role in May Allison's next starring production, "Big Game." Dallas Fitzgerald is directing the picture.

Charles Meakin has recently closed with Roscoe Karnes, with whom he did a character lead under the able direction of Craig Hutchinson. He is again working under the direction of Mr. Hutchinson at the King Vidor Studio, in Mrs. Dickinson's production of her well-known work, "Mothercraft."

PLAN WELCOME FOR JOHN EMERSON

A reception to John Emerson, president of the Actors' Equity Association of America, who has arrived from New York, will be given by Los Angeles actors who are members of the organization, in the Hotel Alexandria next Sunday, according to a recent committee announcement. The affair will start at 2:30 in the afternoon, and Mr. Emerson will speak upon the achievements of the Equity during the past year and its plans for the coming season.

The reception committee includes William H. Crane, Lionel Belmore, Elsie Ferguson, Fred Niblo, Alla Nazimova, Enid Bennett, Edward Connolly, Milton Sills, Joseph Kilgour, Dorothy Dalton, Robert Edeson, Lewis Stone, George MacQuarrie, Douglas McLean, Charles Bryant, William Courtleigh, Henry B. Warner, Thomas Meighan, Lawson Butt, DeWitt C. Jennings, Frank Lalor and R. D. McLean.

"Los Angeles has been kinder to actors than any other city in the world and a reception here is like a welcome in one's own home town," said Mr. Emerson, when notified of the actors' plans. "Motion pictures have done much to place the American actor in his present strong and self-respecting position, and the wonderful work of the Los Angeles actors has been of inestimable value to the Equity. I hope to meet every Equity member personally next Sunday."

HAMILTON WRITES BOOK ABOUT THE THEATRE

Clayton Hamilton, now of the Goldwyn editorial department, is the author of a new book, which has just been issued from the press of Henry Holt & Co. It is called "Seen on the Stage" and is the fourth volume of a series, the other three being "The Theory of the Theatre," "Studies in Stagecraft" and "Problems of the Playwright." The new work is dedicated to Henry Arthur Jones, the English playwright, now visiting this country.

SANTSCHI DOWNS HIS FOE

Tom Santschi has vanquished his little (but mighty) adversary, Vermiform Appendix, and after his month of continuous fighting he left the Clara Barton Hospital for home on Monday (December 13). As soon as his strength is fully recovered, production will be resumed at the Williams studio on "The Sagebrush Musketeers" for Pathe, which was interrupted by the sudden attack of his old enemy.

DOC WILLAT LEAVES NATIONAL

C. A. (Doc) Willat, vice-president and general manager of the National Film Corporation of America, has resigned from that firm in order to give his entire attention to the Willat Productions, of which company he is president and general manager.

Irvin V. Willat, his brother, is directing productions for the latter organization.

Will and Jimmie, young sons of Will Rogers, have returned to their homes from a Los Angeles hospital after having had their tonsils removed.

Catherine Curtis is in Los Angeles, conferring with Director King Vidor anent the filming of the closing scenes for her picturization of "The Sky Pilot." It is expected that the film will be ready for the cutting room within a fortnight. Both Miss Curtis and Vidor will assist in the editing and cutting of the Ralph Connor story.

CLIFT TO LEAVE ENGLAND

Denison Clift, scenarist and director, is now in London. In a tour through Europe to obtain local color for stories, as well as to observe motion picture conditions, Mr. Clift was made several offers to write and direct. It was only in England, however, that he found effort to advance picture making to the American standard. In London he has produced one of his own stories, "The Pariahs," and has recently completed for Ideal Film Company a production of de Maupassant's "The Diamond Necklace." Clift will return to Los Angeles soon.

JOHN STEPPLING

WILLIAM DUNCAN ON THE SERIAL

Forecasting the readjustment of serial production during 1921, William Duncan is making a chapter play, entitled "Fighting Fate," that he expects to fulfill the new demands of the public.

Mr. Duncan is frank in saying that the old type of serial, the sequence of thrills loosely linked together with a bare excuse of a plot, is deemed. But the chapter play that is really a continued story, the same as carried by the best magazines in fiction form, is always welcome, he believes, and will grow in popularity the same as such have in the periodicals.

Mr. Duncan has been star and director of his type of picture for years.

"There is no reason why the continued story will not attain the popularity in screen form that it has in magazines," says Mr. Duncan. "I feel that in pioneering to gain that end I will have my judgment proven before many months of the new year. I always have been a severe opponent of the so-called 'hokum' serial, because of the odium it attached to all legitimate chapter play producers and am glad to see that this is being abandoned by producers in favor of the modern logical picture."

Bob Horner, who is writing and directing a series of two-reel Western dramas for the Beau Arts Film Company, has returned from Santa Susana Pass, where he has been staging battle scenes. He will immediately start on his next subject, "When Outlaws Meet."

VICTOR HERBERT TO PREPARE MUSIC FOR "SENNETT REVUE"

Victor Herbert will be heard as the composer of a revue score. He has been secured by Mack Sennett to write the music for the forthcoming New York "Sennett Revue" in the production of which Mr. Sennett, Al Woods, Arthur Hammerstein and Otto Harbach will collaborate. Mr. Harbach and Mr. Sennett will work out the book on a plot scheme devised by Mr. Sennett. Arthur Hammerstein and Al Woods will be in charge of the New York production and Victor Herbert will set it all to music.

This announcement concerning the engagement of Herbert and of Arthur Hammerstein comes from the Sennett studios in this city.

Mr. Sennett states that Al Woods, Victor Herbert and Otto Harbach will leave New York on January 3d to pay an extended visit to Los Angeles, where the locale of the plot will be laid.

Suffering a slight breakdown last week, Erle Kenton, director of Mack Sennett comedies, is reported as being greatly improved.

HOLUBAR GOES EAST

Allen Holubar has recovered from his recent illness and is once more at work completing the cutting for "Man, Woman, Marriage."

Holubar expects to complete the task during this week, and, according to present plans, will leave for New York on Saturday. He will be accompanied by his wife, Dorothy Phillips. The trio will personally deliver the negatives of "Man, Woman, Marriage" to Associated First National executives in New York, and discuss plans for the exploitation of this production while there.

During his Eastern visit Holubar will also perfect plans for future release of his productions, which will star Miss Phillips.

"HACKNEYED PLOTS"

"The lost will," "the mortgage on the old home," "the sacrifice of a wife's honor to gain success for an artist husband," and "the heiress who is stolen and brought up a gypsy girl," are only four out of over a hundred hackneyed plots that are listed under "What Not to Write," just written by Wycliffe A. Hill, in the Union League Building, president of the Photoplaywrights' League of America and William Gilmore Beymer, scenario instructor for the University of California Extension Division.

D. W. Griffith evidently has plans to make only the biggest kind of pictures hereafter. It is said that he is negotiating for land on Broadway, New York, on which to build his own theater.

After four days' illness, Harry Carey has returned to Universal City and has resumed work on "If Only Jim," his current feature, based on Philip J. Mighel's story, "Bruvver Jim's Baby." Jacques Jaccard is directing the production, and Carol Holloway is Carey's leading lady.

John Hoenvest, who has directed Leo White lately, has been chosen as director for the Molina Film Corporation, located at Anaheim. The company is backed by General Royer and is "shooting" at the studio on the General's ranch.

Mr. and Mrs. Al Risley are the proud parents of an eight pound baby, which was born at the Angelus Hospital Tuesday morning at seven o'clock. Both mother and son are well and doing fine.

Analysis of Handwriting—By Fritzi Remont

In submitting specimens for analysis, readers will kindly remember that the more writing I receive, the better able am I to diagnose dominant characteristics. Write in ink always. No free analyses will be sent by mail.

1. HELEN M. GRANT:

Sample is too short for adequate analysis. You are very fussy, conscientious, painstaking in daily routine. You show secretiveness, reserve, coupled with impulsiveness and courage. You are fastidious, inclined to self-righteousness, very ambitious. Your writing shows a positive character, a little argumentative, often obstinate. You have a financially successful handwriting.

2. HENRY ROGERS:

Your hand shows tremendous energy, initiative, force and self-sufficiency, a very independent disposition, quick inspirations, love of making decisions right on the dot. You are unselfish and kind-hearted, but a little obstinate and argumentative, so that people will not readily impose upon you. The artistic instincts are very lively, and you have splendid chances for success along commercial lines, also. You are very critical and analytical, have a good bump of humor, are sociable, lively company, interesting. Your writing shows ability to acquire any sort of sport, to be a good dancer and hiker, a strong swimmer. You are talkative, but can keep a secret. You always take the short cut to work. You are punctual, dislike delays, are fond of music, love to spend money freely, enjoy admiration, and possess an ardent love nature, a very sympathetic soul.

2. Henry Rogers
3. Carlyne Orkin
4. Del Elliott
5. Betty Hull
6. Harry Edelstein
7. Ramond Sinclair
8. Mary A. Hartnett

3. CARLYNE ORKIN:

You are a very intuitive and temperamental little lady, and betray impressionability to such an extent that you need not fear to analyze anybody whom you meet. You like or dislike on first acquaintance, but are so liberal, kind and affectionate, not to mention sympathetic and tenderhearted, that your criticisms won't hurt any one. You are cheerful, imaginative and original. You must acquire more will power. You are cautious and often too timid, and this accounts for your change of writing slant from backhand to the impulsive forward handwriting. You change as environment and people contact you. You would be a good metaphysical healer or nurse, character analyst, writer for publication.

4. DEL ELLIOTT:

Quite a forceful phist you have. You are ardent in affections, positive and practical, quick tempered, often too obstinate. You show a super-conscientious streak which should aid you in business. You are observant, imaginative, inspirational.

The writing betrays high ideals, emotionality, a tendency toward nervousness. You are a fighter for your principles. You go to the extremes of mood, hence will often have to fight discouragement and depression. Your buoyancy always lifts you up eventually. You betray excellent mental and physical vitality, determination, originality, unselfishness (save where a clash with your self-will precludes your yielding as you really should) and tendency toward extravagance. You can make money as actor, musician or salesman.

5. BETTY HULL:

This young lady wants to know whether one can rise above environment and eliminate hereditary traits. Of course, one can. Any one with your strong will, high ambitions and personality can achieve any height she wishes. The things to eliminate—or rather to leash, for I would not see you rid of those traits—are rather the tendency toward over-emotionality, enthusing too rapidly.

SNOWY BAKER TO STAR

Snowy Baker, former Olympic hero of Australia, has succumbed to the lure of the screen and will shortly be seen as the star of a series of five and six reel pictures to be known as Snowy Baker Productions.

The statement containing this announcement comes from the Selig studio, where the pictures will be filmed. Colonel William N. Selig and Sam Rork are associated with Mr. Baker in the enterprise.

AT LASKY'S

It is practically settled that George Melford will start his production, "The Money Master," by Sir Gilbert Parker, about January 3. Dorothy Dalton will arrive in Hollywood about Christmas time to star in this picture, supported by James Kirkwood. Mr. Melford and Sir Gilbert are working upon the scenario.

Roscoe Arbuckle is expected to start work on January 17. His picture will be Frank Condon's story, "Three Miles Out." Mr. Arbuckle will doubtless return from his trip abroad the early part of the new year.

William de Mille returns during the early part of January, also, and will begin a production some time during that month. The nature or cast of the picture are both unannounced at the present time. Mr. de Mille has been spending several weeks in New York.

Cecil B. de Mille is progressing with his new production based on "The Affairs of Anatol." Meanwhile the cutting and assembling of his previous picture, "Forbidden Fruit," is being completed.

Thomas Meighan is completing in Hollywood at the Lasky studio the scenes for his picture based on "The Quarry," by John Moroso.

Kathlyn Williams has completed work in a picture in the east and is expected to return next week from the metropolis.

Ethel Clayton is scheduled to start on January 3 under the direction of Thomas Heffron in "Sham," by Elmer Harris and Geraldine Bonner.

GORE BROS. & SOL LESSER ENGAGE MANAGER FOR AMBASSADOR AND KINEMA

Gore Bros. & Sol Lesser announce that they have engaged S. Barrett McCormick, for the past six months managing director of the Rivoli theater in Toledo, Ohio, and that he will guide the presentation destinies of the New Ambassador theater and will, immediately upon his arrival next week, center his activities upon the opening of that new playhouse. The Kinema theater also is to come under his active direction.

COGLEY PROMOTES PICTURE ACTORS' RODEO

Nick Cogley, of the Goldwyn players, has been appointed chairman of the committee to arrange a rodeo to be held near Los Angeles by the motion picture people. It is to last four days and it is hoped that $75,000 will be raised to be distributed to the poor through the office of Mayor Snyder.

Joy Winthrop is playing an old maid with Allen Dwan.

George Hieshima is playing a part in Frank Lloyd's Goldwyn production.

FILMING BLIZZARD SCENES

The Anita Stewart company has left the Louis B. Mayer studio for Truckee to film snow and blizzard scenes for the star's latest offering through Associated First National. The snow is now three feet deep in this mountain recess, according to reports, and is still coming down. Taking no chances on the elements, however, Director Edwin Carewe has had three wind-machines shipped to the location to be assured of getting blizzard scenes when he is ready to shoot.

In addition to Miss Stewart and Mr. Carewe, the company making the trip includes: Rudolph Cameron, manager, Walter McGrail, Herbert Rawlinson, Grace Morse and a number of extras, Robert Kurrle, cameraman, Al Greene, his assistant, Wallace Fox, assistant director, and Madge Tyrone, scenario writer.

EMERSON-LOOS COMPANY GOES TO MEXICO

A special train carried John Emerson and Anita Loos and the entire company with which they are making "Wife Insurance," their first special production, into Mexico last night. They will stop at San Diego and journey thence to Tia Juana and the surrounding country for scenes in the Kingdom of Bunkonia, which is the locale in their new satire upon romantic melodrama. Victor Fleming will direct the picture.

Mr. Emerson will return to Los Angeles to speak at the reception arranged for him at the Hotel Alexandria next Sunday afternoon by members of the Actors' Equity Association, of which he is president.

AT METRO

Sir Gilbert Parker, the English author whose "The Right of Way" won him knighthood, visited Metro's Hollywood studios the other day to study the special productions being filmed.

The aurora borealis will be caught for the screen for what is said to be the first time, with the filming of Metro's special production of the northern ice fields, "The Woman Who Went Away." Alice Lake is enacting the leading role in the picture, which is a screen version of John Fleming Wilson's story, "The Uncharted Sea."

Al J. Kelley, assistant director, has been selected by Bayard Veiller to direct Viola Dana in "Home Stuff," an original story by Agnes Johnston and Frank Dazey, which will be Miss Dana's new starring picture.

Dallas M. Fitzgerald will direct May Allison in "Big Game."

UNION FILM COMPANY FINISHES TWO COMEDIES

The first two of the series of twelve Alt & Howell comedies, starring Alexander Alt and Helen Howell, both Union Film Company stars, are now ready for distribution.

Under the direction of Al Martin, Mr. Alt and Miss Howell are working at their studio in Sherman.

CHARLES RAY DIRECTS

Charles Ray directed personally the adaptation of Charles Van Loan's story, "Scrap Iron," in which he also starred.

He will also handle the next feature, "The Midnight Bell," by Hoyt.

Albert Ray is writing the continuity for "The Midnight Bell."

THINGS YOU WON'T READ ANYWHERE ELSE

By Frank P. Donovan

Owen Moore, we learn, will direct himself in the future.

D. W. Griffith has started another feature, a Chinese story.

Hamilton Smith had his apartment broken into and the thieves just took everything except the bath tub.

Marguerite Clarke returns to the pictures under George D. Baker's direction for Metro release.

Famous Players shut up their Long Island City studio and laid off over one thousand people. All future production will be done in Los Angeles.

George Beban is in town with a print of his latest feature and as he is keeping daily company with Hiram Abrams, you can judge for yourself what he is up to.

J. Stuart Blackton has his Brooklyn studio up for sale. It seems he means to make England his future home. Sir Thomas Lip-ton is backing him, I learn.

The New Year prospects look blue here. There are lots of things predicted as starting. But it remains for something to really happen.

Reelcraft Pictures have some mighty ambitious plans for 1920, we'll say. They may produce in New York as well as adding additional companies to their Los Angeles studios.

George Fitzmaurice and wife are in London at the Famous Players studio. Other directors will follow suit, some going to India where Famous Players have just built one.

The Dupont Film Company is no relation to the Coleman Du Pont people of powder-making fame, even though both hail from Delaware.

There is a new combine starting in New York, composed of stars and directors, to be called "The Big Five." This big five, we hear, includes Clara Kimball Young, Anita Stewart, George Loane Tucker and Allan Dwan. We may be wrong, but we don't think so.

The Green Room Club held a Revel. That means a good show. Raymond Hitchcock, Frank Bacon, R. H. Burnside, guest of honor, Herbert Cortnell, Will J. Ferguson, Rollo Lloyd, Frank Wunderlee, Capt. Stoll, Julius Singer, William Turner, Belle Story, Jack Tarvey, Hamilton Smith, Carlyle Fleming, Mike Ring, Frank Perguni, Jack Pringle, Saul Harrison, Jerome Siegle, Dr. Louis Stern, a host of stage and movie players and other folk had a good old time such as only the Green Room can offer.

Hal Ferner is now playing the heavy in the Western drama, "When Outlaws Meet," for the Beau Arts Film Co., under the direction of Bob Horner.

Murdock MacQuarrie has been selected by George Kern, general manager of the Producers' Pictures Corporation, to co-direct in the production of "The Unfoldment," the vehicle in which Florence Lawrence returns to the screen after an absence of a few short years.

"CORNERED"

By W. Renick Smith

Special to Camera!

New York, Dec. 14.—The cat no longer has Madge Kennedy's tongue! Once again the voice of America's premier farceuse is to be heard along Broadway, for Madge has come back to the spoken drama, having been seen and heard for the first time in three years on the speaking stage this past week. Sunny California may as well bid a fond farewell to Madge Kennedy for many moons, for Broadway has won her again and promises to keep her busy for some time to come. In Henry W. Savage's "Cornered," a very melo-melodrama about crooks, dope, burglars and long lost twin sisters, Miss Kennedy has again found her way to Broadway. There's no denying that the Great White Way has missed this delightful little lady of "Fair and Warmer" fame and the heroine of an earlier success, "Twin Beds." It is to be regretted that a better play was not available for Miss Kennedy than "Cornered," but the star's name will go a long, long way in helping the poor play to be received with kindness.

Playing dual roles or impersonating seems to be most popular pastime on Broadway this season. Miss Kennedy plays a dual role in "Cornered," Frances Starr is doing the same in "One," Genevieve Tobin is playing first a boy and then "herself" in "Little Old New York," and Ruth Findley is doing a "prince and pauper" role in the Mark Twain play. In "Cornered," "Mary Brennan," gangstress and second-story woman, and "Margaret Waring," society girl of the East Eighties, are really sisters and twins at that. Miss Kennedy deftly enacts the dual role. "Mary" is persuaded to "burtle" the home of "Margaret," but while attempting to get away with the brass candelabra and the alarm clock is confronted by "Margaret," who is shot by "Mary's" confederate. "Mary," out of sympathy for the woman who looks so much like herself, remains to nurse her, and the rest of the story concerns the bewilderment of "Margaret's" lover, who thinks "Mary" is "Margaret," and vice versa; in fact, he is so completely fooled because of the resemblance that he makes love to Mary, and in the end, when he finds she is not Margaret, decides to let Margaret slip and take Mary. There is the inevitable explanation by minor characters, the butler and friends of the Waring family, about how Mrs. Waring was separated from one of her baby girls, which gives the author a flimsy excuse to concoct such an improbable story with the extraordinary coincidence of the sister thief and the sister society girl meeting twenty years later, etc.

Regardless of the weakness in plot and the ridiculous and absurd situations and nonsensical lines scattered through "Cornered," it does give Miss Kennedy a chance to show her versatility as a comedienne and an opportunity to make some lightning changes in the dress line, as well as switching character role from a Bowery girl to that of a debutante so quickly that one wonders if she is not really two different persons. Miss Kennedy's voice is too pleasing to have been hushed all these three years before the movie camera. "Voice," she says, "is what I missed most in pictures—more than audiences." It would indeed be an easy and delightful task to watch Madge Kennedy in any sort of play. Personality hath power to put the poorest sort of play in the background and make the star shine out brilliantly, and Madge Kennedy's is just that type.

The majority of the New York critics "panned" Miss Kennedy's show in a terrible manner, but most of them had a very good word for the star. One paper, an evening daily, said: "Rather than embarrass the star and members of her cast any further, we shall not print her name nor any others." And they didn't! Severe "panning" in the case of Madge Kennedy and "Cornered" may turn out to be the best advertisement the show could possibly get, for Miss Kennedy's name is so well known and her past stage successes so vividly remembered that the public will be "curious," if nothing else. At any rate, the second night audience filled the Astor Theatre and was a really an enthusiastic one.

ly over new schemes, taking on others' troubles through excess of sympathy, and lack of concentration. You want to rise too rapidly. Remember, big things grow slowly; takes a long time for an oak to mature from an acorn. Mushrooms spring up overnight and die quickly. You rely too much on inspiration—what you need is hard perspiration. You are too quick-tempered, a born fighter for justice. You start things and tire of them. You are versatile, but you must become a specialist. You have histrionic ability and dramatic intensity to burn. Don't ever think you can be happy in office work.

6. HARRY EDELSTEIN:

How often must I repeat, "Don't write on ruled paper!" I judge by spontaneous margins and spacings and you hamper my work by not following rules. Your writing shows much love of music, fine vitality, an expressive soul. You are conscientious, rather original, imaginative and very affectionate. You show shrewdness and resourcefulness, high ambitions, longing for advancement and culture. You are an admirer of all that is beautiful, have a good head for accounting or selling, estimating and appraising. Your judgment is clear, you are sociable, and will make a business success.

7. RAMOND SINCLAIR, Berkeley, Calif.:

You are well suited to any sort of mechanical work, but that need not necessarily be muscular. You have talent for mechanical or civil engineering, surgery, dentistry. You have a fine sense of proportion and form, are a good diagnostician, are forever analyzing and drawing clever conclusions. You are a good character analyst. You show splendid focus, nothing escapes your bright eyes. You learn by experience. You show practicality, common sense and conscientiousness. You are inventive, courageous, positive, very industrious. You have strong individuality, initiative, love of reforming and reconstructing. You are talented and have every asset for success.

8. MARY A. HARTNETT, Chicago:

Too short a sample, so don't expect much analysis. A carpenter needs more than one board to build a house and to analyze character from handwriting, I must have writing, see?

You have a very self-sufficient, proud, almost arrogant, streak in you. It's not easy for you to make friends, and you often repel people by your hauteur. You are very positive and hard to convince, domineering in your methods. The writing shows me a love of occupying an executive position. You would make a formidable teacher. You are quick-tempered, but have learned self-control admirably. You exercise reserve in all directions, are one who dislikes any criticism of herself, who rebels at coercion, and who prefers to be alone rather than with inferior intellects. You have a good sense of form, are inventive and original. You are very shrewd, hence business advancement and financial success should readily come your way. Other people's troubles don't affect you deeply, you are too full of your own ideas. Yet you are impressionable and quickly sense mental states. You would make a good doctor or nurse—matter of fact, doing the things which are necessary and making no fuss about it, but you would find it difficult to show affection or sympathy in any demonstrative manner.

The Sidney A. Franklin production, "Unseen Forces," being presented by Mayflower as an Associated First National release, will be released within a month.

Invest Now in Good Securities

There is every indication that now is the opportune time for investors to take advantage of falling prices in commodities and rising prices in investment securities, by investing their surplus funds to the maximum of their ability in sound, high-grade bonds. The trend of the times is so clear that he that runs may read.

The well-defined downward movement of the price level on commodities and the upward swing of security prices, which of necessity must follow, is general. We confidently look forward to this movement being even more pronounced during the coming year.

Just as the dealer in commodities found his inventories, during the period of rising prices, rapidly appreciating in value, so the investor whose money is safely invested may expect an appreciation in the value of his holdings, due to the increased purchasing power of his income.

We believe the investor acts wisely who invests at this time in the bonds of soundly managed, prosperous industrial and utility corporations. If you are interested, we shall be glad to go into the matter in detail.

Good, high-grade securities may still be had to yield the investor from 6% to 8%. A list of our current offerings will be sent on request—without obligation.

Between Us

Right away in the first paragraph, before we begin to spend space upon reminiscences or visions of the future, no matter how glowing they may be, we find in our hearts the desire to express a wish for the continued prosperity in progress and the happiness that results only from such accomplishment, of the entire motion picture world, a profession that has undoubtedly created more, entertained more and advanced faster than any other on earth.

Its successes have been and always will be ours; consequently we are indeed glad that at this cheery season we may look back over the past three years with the realization that this little publication has given its best to the people of its choice and that, out of recognition of this fact they, who compose the most human of circles, have taken it to their hearts individually. As a natural result, it belongs irrevocably to the picture man. Nor does his station count. When in scope Camera! becomes too narrow to intend the best for each and every producer, props and extra man in the business, it will make its exit as noiselessly as possible.

Thus our editorial policy has come to be controlled by the fact that to these, our friends, we must speak the truth. Financial gain gives no satisfaction nor does it last if it is to be had through deceit or even voluntary blindness. With the knowledge of this general truth in our hearts, we undertook the somewhat complicated duties of general justification and enlightenment of our people, long ago, and in great part it has been the wonderful support of the many who have known our object to be theirs that has resulted in what good this paper may be able to accomplish.

Having now proven its original policy correct, it will do more in the future. This with the readers' assistance, however.

The editor wishes to personally voice a desire that you may all permit her the pleasure of receiving, from time to time, such suggestions as might assist in the right advance and greater satisfaction of those who read and those who write this paper. Such suggestions will be cordially received and seriously considered, for only in this manner may we benefit each other in what we are all attempting. Remember, it is largely up to you to obtain from your one publication the thing that you desire.

A new year approaches and the possibilities of it should be practically appreciated rather than merely sonnetized at this time. Again, we wish every member of the industry a "merriest" Christmas and a "happiest" New Year.

FANCHON ROYER.

Concerning England

By LESLIE GOODWINS

Although, since the war, England has made great strides in the betterment of every branch in the industry there, she has not, as yet, reached that stage where her pictures can be acclaimed as being the equal of American productions, and, in view of the number of American companies who have either cast longing glances upon the other side of the Atlantic as a possible field for their future activities, or else have definitely stated their intention of sending a company across, an idea of the principal causes which have contributed to the dilatoriness of Great Britain in catching up to America, may prove of some interest.

England's great drawback, of course, when the country is surveyed from the viewpoint of film production, is her climate, with its preponderance of days either rainy, cloudy or misty; but climate, although an important, is not the sole, factor to be considered, for the difficulty of working on location that it occasions is more or less overcome by building the exterior on the stage, and therefore a country which is striving to make headway in film production, as is England, should, it would naturally be assumed, have finely equipped studios. On the contrary, however, the majority of English studios are far behind the times in such matters as equipment, organization, co-operation, and technical ability.

In the matter of equipment, there is a surprising shortage of material of almost every description, be it lumber or wardrobe, whilst the type of lights generally used until a few months ago were but second-rate, both as regards actinic value and portability. Things from the photographic point of view are now not so disheartening, however, for many of the companies have installed Kliegs and Wohls on their stages to distinct advantage; although at least one of the companies ordered, and obtained delivery on their lights before they discovered that they were intended for use with direct current only, with the result that they had to go to further expense in installing transformers.

Although there is a gradual semblance of organization showmanship. Let it be put to his credit that his adaptability very slipshod until a short time ago, and there could be found many a square peg in a round hole, perhaps the most typical case being that of a very efficient military officer who was given the position of studio manager of a large firm without having previously had any experience whatsoever in showmanship. Let it be put to his credit that his adaptability soon enabled him to fall into the swing of things, but the instance serves to show the inefficiency of the policy which is more or less followed.

The lack of co-operation is another lamentable feature

NEILAN ANNOUNCES PLANS

Marshall Neilan left Los Angeles on Sunday last for New York, where he will spend several weeks going over with Associated First National officials his plans for presentation of productions already completed and close several deals now pending involving the acquisition of material for the coming year's production.

With the completion of "Bob Hampton of Placer" and "Not a Drum Was Heard," Neilan has finished a year's activities. The negatives of these productions accompany him to New York, where he will personally supervise the cutting and editing.

While East, Mr. Neilan will also make some of the scenes for his production of "Penrod," in which Wesley Barry will be starred. Business Manager Leeds Baxter, Production Manager Howard Hawkes, and Cameraman David Keeson accompany him.

MILDRED HARRIS TO START WORK HERE

Mildred Harris, who returned last week from New York with her mother, will start work this week at the Louis B. Mayer studio on "Playthings of Desire." The production will be directed by John M. Stahl for release through Associated First National.

Stahl is daily expected at the Mayer plant from the East, and upon his arrival the supporting cast will be chosen.

AT GOLDWYN

This week marks the completion of five productions at the Goldwyn Culver City studios. Three Eminent Authors Productions, one star picture and a Booth Tarkington comedy have been filmed, and the directors are now engaged in cutting and assembling the negatives.

Wallace Worsley finished the photography of Gertrude Atherton's first original story, tentatively known as "Noblesse Oblige."

Frank Lloyd has completed the filming of "The Water Lily," an original screen story by Gouverneur Morris.

E. Mason Hopper will finish Rupert Hughes' original screen story, "Dangerous Curve Ahead," formerly called "Mr. and Miserable Jones."

Victor Schertzinger will complete "Mr. Barnes of New York," with Tom Moore in the stellar role.

Paul Bern finished the twelfth episode of the Booth Tarkington "Edgar" stories, which is tentatively known as "Ole, the Hand."

Clarence Badger started production last week on O. Henry's story, "Whistling Dick," with Will Rogers as the star. The company will go on location shortly after the holidays.

Reginald Barker, directing "Snow Blindness" for Goldwyn, is still in Canada, taking snow scenes. The absence of snow in Banff has forced the company to charter a train every day to take them from that locale to Lake Louise. Mr. Barker expects to be back in the land of sunshine by Christmas.

Mason N. Litson expects to start on his next story shortly after the first of the year.

BEAU ARTS TO DO COMEDY DRAMA

Bob Horner, directing for the Beau Arts Film Company, is now cutting the last of his series of western dramas. He will immediately prepare the continuity of "Hell's Valley," the first of a series of five-reel western comedy-dramas, which he will also direct for this concern.

RAY TO START SIXTH INDEPENDENT PRODUCTION

Charles Ray will return to his studio immediately after the holidays to begin work on his sixth independent production for First National release.

While his editing staff will cut and assemble his fifth picture, "Scrap Iron," the technical and art departments will begin preparation for the sets for Charles Hoyt's story, "The Midnight Bell."

Al. Ray, cousin of Charlie, is writing the continuity and will assist the star in the direction.

AT METRO

C. H. Mulder-Ruhaak and wife, of The Hague, Holland, were interested visitors at Metro's West Coast studios the other day. Miss Alice Lake entertained the guests at tea between scenes of her newest starring picture, "Uncharted Seas."

One more week will be required for the final cutting of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," Metro's special production of the novel by Vicente Blasco Ibanez. Slightly more than six months have been consumed in the filming of the picture, which involved the use of more than 12,000 players and probably half that number of technical men, costumers and builders.

Josephine Crowell is the first member of the cast selected to support Viola Dana in "Home Stuff," the little Metro star's newest vehicle. "Home Stuff" is an original story by Agnes Johnston and Frank Dazey and will be directed by Al. J. Kelley.

Madame Nazimova's next screen offering will be a special production of "Camille." The change of plans under which the filming of "Aphrodite" has been postponed temporarily is due to atmospheric rather than artistic obstacles. "Aphrodite" called for many big settings in the open. And, since the costuming of the picture is necessarily of the filmiest, it was feared that even Southern California's far-famed climate would not be sufficiently mild to admit of picturing the scenes out of doors in mid-winter. The Nazimova screen version of the story by Alexander Dumas is being prepared by Miss June Mathis, working in collaboration with the Russian star. Ray Smallwood, who directed Madame Nazimova's three preceding productions, also will serve in the same capacity for this picture.

May Allison's company, as well as Alice Lake's, will venture into the regions of deep snows and icebergs within a short time for the shooting of scenes for their respective productions, "Big Game" and "Uncharted Seas."

AT REALART

Elmer Harris, supervising director of the Realart studio, announces the appointment of Douglas Doty as a member of the West Coast scenario staff. He comes to filmdom with the record of twenty years as an editor and writer—fifteen years of which were spent in an editorial capacity with the Century Publishing Co. and Century Magazine. He is given credit for having discovered Jean Webster, author of "Daddy Long Legs," and Eleanor Hallowell Abbott, author of "Molly Make-Believe." He will devote his attention to writing continuity of the light entertaining comedy drama sort required for the Wanda Hawley and Bebe Daniels Realart productions.

Mary Miles Minter left this week to spend the holidays in New York. She has just completed "The Little Clown," by Avery Hopwood, her latest production for Realart. On her return from the East, Miss Minter will O. K. final plans for a new home which she is to build on property recently purchased in Laughlin Park. She is expected to return to Los Angeles early in January.

Bebe Daniels is at present in Dallas, Texas, her birthplace. This is the Realart star's first visit to Dallas since her accession to stellar heights. On her return from this short vacation Miss Daniels will immediately begin work with Cecil B. de Mille's all-star adaptation of "The Affairs of Anatol." Miss Daniels, who has been lent by

THE MUMMERS PERFORM

Successful, indeed, were the performances given by the Mummies in The Mummies' Workshop in Hollywood, December 15th, 16th, 17th and 18th. On those evenings four one-act plays were presented to specially invited audiences.

The first, "An Idyll of the Shop," was an interesting little atmospheric sketch. William Penn as Louis rather ran off with it, but he was ably assisted by Yvette Mitchell, Edwin Hunt, Wyn Richie, Jimmy Hague and Harriet Wilber.

"Columbine," the next offering, was a fantastic little affair, having to do with Dan'l, an old man, played by George Hackathorn, Nathan'l, a boy, enacted by Francis Carpenter, and the wonders they saw on the hill.

Cecil Bruner did Columbine, a beautiful creature with a rare little philosophy.

George Gramlich was a scream as Harlequin, the pompous suitor of Columbine. His ridiculous bearing was an art in itself.

Knarf Arbath plays Pierrot, the successful lover.

The almost futuristic stage setting of this sketch was highly artistic.

Possibly the most extraordinary work of the program was that of Nina Morse and Vincent E. Duffey in "Cocaine," a, to say the least, daring bit from the lives of two dopes. Their work was excellent and worth an evening in itself.

Last, but not least, came a travesty upon "The Prodigal Son," by that name. It made a very amusing little farce costumed a la the Winter Garden.

Ted Dickson as Levi, the prodigal, and Yvette Mitchell as Rachael, the slave, controlled most of the comedy, which was rich in spots.

Paul Vickers as Simeon, Louis Challinor as Reuben and Harriet Wilber as Miriam completed the cast.

Some of the lighting effects were unusual, and we may expect some real results from this organization.

"The Victim" and "Dangerous Love," features of C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation, have been sold to the Independent Film Service of Dallas, Texas.

"THE CHARM SCHOOL"

Grauman's Million Dollar Theatre plays Lasky's "The Charm School," starring Wallace Reid. It is an adaptation of the Saturday Evening Post story by Alice Duer Miller. On the whole, it makes a clever screen comedy.

The cast is very good and moves with sprightliness through a series of mirth provoking sequences.

"Wallie" plays Austin Bevans, a most fortunate young man, in that he inherits a young ladies' boarding school, at least for a time. His performance is characteristic and will please.

Lila Lee is much more interesting than usual as Elise, the child who heroically refuses a college career to please her principal.

Grace Morse is very entertaining as Miss Hayes, a dissenting instructor in the charm school.

Patricia Magee and Lincoln Stedman are "immense" as Sally and Georgie Boyd.

Adele Farrington is Mrs. Rolles, and Beulah Bains plays her daughter, Susie.

Kate Toncray, with a few clever touches, makes a part out of Miss Curtiss, one of the weaker sisters of the faculty.

Minna Redman, Snitz Edwards, Helen Pillsbury and Tina Marshall are included in the cast.

James Cruze directed.

ANITA STEWART COMPANY RETURNS

After a week in the snow-bound region of Truckee, the Anita Stewart company has returned to the Louis B. Mayer studio to resume work on interiors for the star's latest Mayer vehicle for release through Associated First National.

"Plain Folks," a Tod Browning-supervised picture directed by Leo McCarey and starring Eva Novak, will be completed this week, according to word from the production office at Universal City.

Current Reviews

"TWIN BEDS"

Carter De Haven Productions presents its screen version of "Twin Beds," an Associated First National release, at the Kinema. As will be remembered from the original, the farce is crowded to capacity with mirthful situations and interesting possibilities. The extremely swift action is well handled and the laughs never fail to hit a receptive audience.

Carter De Haven is delightful as Signor Monti, a more unfortunate than wicked little individual whose human errors in regard to a bewildering number of twin beds leads to much confusion. This role is the most interesting one that he has accomplished on the screen.

Helen Raymond, who created Signora Monti in the original production of the stage play, enacts the same character in the picture. She makes an excellent comedy opposite for Carter and succeeds in scrambling situations beautifully.

Mrs. Carter De Haven is attractively cast as the petite Mrs. Hawkins. Her role is well handled and kept consistent even through the chaos.

William Desmond makes a very attractive Harry Hawkins, completing the mixed quartette.

Catherine Lewis and William Irving do the very small roles of Amanda and Andrew Larkin.

Lottie Williams, cast as Nora the maid, gets several chuckles on her own account.

Lloyd Ingraham directed the production.

"THE MISLEADING LADY"

Bert Lytell plays this week at Tally's Broadway in his latest Metro release, "The Misleading Lady." It is an adaptation of the Goddard and Dickey original by Lois Zellner. The picture has several clever situations that do not mean enough as handled. There are also some comedy touches which, since they have little connection with the main plot, are given far too much footage.

The star makes an interesting "cave-man" hero and should have better support. His abduction of his lady love is at least amusing.

Lucy Cotton appears opposite him as Helen Steele, would-be vamp and actress. Miss Cotton plays her part prettily, but with seemingly little thought. In creating an inconsistent woman, she succeeds in muddling the plot in the audience's mind.

Cyril Chadwick does Tracey, the villain, in the good old-fashioned way.

Frank Currier has some truly clever scenes as Napoleon, the nut. It is unfortunate that there couldn't have been a little more logical reason for his appearance.

Stephen Grottan, Rae Allen, Barnet Parker and Arthur Hausman complete the cast. George Irving directed.

"LITTLE MISS REBELLION"

Paramount presents Dorothy Gish in "Little Miss Rebellion," at Clune's Broadway. This comedy is undoubtedly better handled than have been any of the little star's recent offerings. It is interesting to note that the direction was in the hands of George Fawcett. We hope he makes another with her.

Some of the picture's sub-titles are clever; others pre-digest the action a little too much. On the whole, however, "Little Miss Rebellion" is delightful, and it will be sure to go over beautifully with Miss Gish's followers.

As the precocious little Grand Duchess Marie Louise she is at her best. Her eccentric mannerisms are given full sway and she waltzes merrily through the plotting of the amusingly atrocious Bolshevik.

Ralph Graves does Sergeant Richard Ellis, the male lead. The part contains little action, but he tackles it smilingly anyway.

George Siegman is the terrible heavy, Colonel Moro. It is a typical role.

Riley Hatch creates a very pretty bit of heart interest in the part of Stephen, the old guardsman. His reverence for his sovereign is really accomplished seriously.

"WHAT HAPPENED TO ROSA"

The California is running "What Happened to Rosa," featuring Mabel Normand. The story is a very weak comedy that possesses many overdrawn situations and an unusually small amount of interest. A good deal of slapstick sprinkled throughout doesn't improve the whole.

Miss Normand is not at her best and appears to be physically unable to do such work as she has proven herself capable of accomplishing.

Hugh Thompson plays opposite her as Dr. Maynard Drew. His part calls for little demonstration of the ability that he promises.

Eugenie Besserer does an extraordinary "bit" as Madame O'Donnell, the Egyptian seeress. She "takes" her scenes bodily.

Doris Pawn does Rosa's shop girl chum.

Victor Schertzinger directed the picture for Goldwyn.

DIETZ APPOINTED GOLDWYN ADVERTISING DIRECTOR

Howard Dietz has been appointed director of advertising and publicity for the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation in New York. During the past two years Mr. Dietz has, in turn, headed every department connected with advertising and publicity and has been largely responsible for many of the exploitation policies adopted by the Goldwyn Company.

In addition to his work with the Goldwyn Company, Mr. Dietz is serving actively as a member of the censorship committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry.

Grover Jones now has full charge of the direction of comedies starring Billy Franey.

Alberto Presco and William Conklin will appear in leading roles with Florence Lawrence in "The Unfoldment."

Anita Simons and J. Buckley Russell are now with the Charles R. Seeling Company in a series of two-reel westerns.

Sidney D'Albrook has been cast for the part of the French guide in "Big Game," May Allison's newest Metro picture.

Charles West has been added to the cast of Sessue Hayakawa's latest feature, which he is now filming under the direction of Colin Campbell.

Catherine Henry, author of "Prisoners of Love," starring Betty Compson, which shows at the California the week of January 2nd, spent three months in the preparation of this story.

Fred Lancaster, former actor on the New York legitimate stage, will be seen in the role of Zayd, the merchant, in "Kismet," at Tally's Broadway the week of January 8th.

Three two-reel comedies featuring George Bunny, son of the late John Bunny, have been completed and work commenced last week on the fourth of the series.

Edward Connelly has been granted special permission by Metro to enact one of the leading roles in the Anita Loos-John Emerson production of "Wife Insurance," which Victor Fleming is directing.

James Clemens, formerly director of Christie Comedies, has been signed to direct Johnnie and Emma Fay in a series of five-reel feature comedies at a Culver City studio. Production on the first subject commences this week.

Hank Mann, who has been under the banner of Morris R. Schlank for the past year, completed his contract with the producer this week and will start work on a new series of comedies in the near future. A series of 26 two-reel pictures were made by the comedian during the past year.

Due to a printer's mistake, the name of Mr. Claude Camp appears under both his picture and that of Mr. Fred Lancaster in our publicity space. That the error might be corrected, at least in a measure, we have rerun Mr. Lancaster's Christmas greeting to the profession.

When the party arrive in New York a special showing of the picture will be held for Associated First National officials, trade journal representatives and others. Miss Phillips expects to spend the holidays with her mother and daughter in Baltimore, her old home.

GOLDWYN ANSWERS "REFORMERS"

In commenting today on the campaign of the Lord's Day Alliance to prohibit the showing of motion pictures on Sunday, Samuel Goldwyn suggested that it might also be wise to revise the old "blue laws" still on the statute books in some states, which prohibit a man from kissing his wife on the Sabbath.

"We have already gone far enough in taking away the people's constitutional rights," said Mr. Goldwyn. "There is a decided tendency to deprive them of still more, and, unless we exercise ourselves, we will wake up some morning to find the Statue of Liberty being crated away by a bunch of fanatical reformers."

The Lord's Day Alliance is also seeking to abolish Sunday baseball, Sunday motoring, and cigarettes on Sunday and every other day in the week. The National Association of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America have made plans to fight the Sunday closing movement.

VIOLA DANA VACATIONING

Viola Dana is spending a two weeks' vacation between pictures showing her mother and father the sights in Southern California. Her parents arrived several weeks ago from New York to spend the winter with Miss Dana and her sister, Shirley Mason. So far, Miss Dana has journeyed to Mount Lowe, Catalina Island, Mission Inn at Riverside, and numerous other resorts. ## FREDDIE GOODWINS BACK IN HOLLYWOOD

His many friends in the Hollywood film colony will be glad to hear that Freddie Goodwins, who for three and a half years played light comedy parts before he left America in 1918 with the service, has returned to Los Angeles after two very successful years spent with the English film business, during which time he directed seven feature-dramas for several of the biggest British companies. In addition, he had his own comedy company there, with which he made three two-reel productions, featuring himself as light comedian.

One of his biggest successes in England was the first, and only, film version of Thackeray's English classic, "The Newcomes," which picture he directed for the Ideal Film Company.

He is at present taking a vacation prior to resuming his former activities in the histrionic end of the business here, and some sidelights upon the industry in England may be given to readers of "Camera" by way of some articles he has promised to write upon that subject at a later date.

IRVINE LEAVES TOURNEUR

Clarke Irvine, director of exploitation for Maurice Tourneur since last June, has left the French producer, after finishing his work on "The Last of the Mohicans," Tourneur having temporarily stopped production with the Cooper Indian classic which he filmed.

Irvine, being a member of the U. S. Naval Reserve Force, intends taking on some active sea duty with the Pacific Fleet on its cruise to Panama and South America in January, and may possibly go on the round-the-world cruise later in the year.

While away Irvine will do special articles on picture subjects and will write film theater news from foreign countries.

CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEE VISITS GOLDWYN STUDIOS

The Congressional Joint Committee on Naval Bases recently took a day off from inspecting the harbors of Southern California and spent it at the Goldwyn studio. There are twenty-five members of the committee and with their wives and attendants, it made a large party. They were keenly interested in all phases of picture-making and when Reginald Barker, directing the production of Katherine Newlin Burt's "Snow Blindness," said that his company was going on location the next day and invited the committee to go along, it accepted. Motion pictures of the party were taken and run off in the theatre on the studio lot, at the end of the adventure.

Eddie Baker, of the Special Pictures Corporation, and his wife, plan to spend New Year's week with friends in San Francisco.

Elmer Poister, assistant to Director Grover Jones at the Reelcraft studios, narrowly escaped serious injury last week when fire broke out in his home in Hollywood. Considerable furniture and clothing were destroyed.

Helen Starr, with J. B. Woodside, is handling all the publicity in Southern California newspapers for the Herbert Hoover European Relief Campaign. During the holidays, the European Relief Council hopes to raise $33,000,000 in America for the starving children of Europe. Film stars and professionals are organized under Carter De Haven.

Concerning England

which impresses itself upon one at an early moment, for very few departments have any idea as to how and why they should co-operate, and lack of co-operation is the surest indication of lack of efficiency. That is another point which, although it is happily not general, is sufficiently prominent to be counted as one of the present hindrances to production.

The English studio workers have some smattering of the main principles of business, but, for some inexplicable reason, they do not seem to be able to improve upon the knowledge they already possess. Advice they receive from some person who has seen the advanced condition of the industry on this side is readily accepted, and eagerly listened to, but it is followed in a fashion resulting in a mediocre improvement or possibly none at all. The lack of experience that the industry suffers from is probably the biggest reason for the inefficiency of the staffs in general. Want of experts at the helm has apparently little bearing on the situation, for quite a number of either Americans, or else Englishmen with much American experience, have been placed in responsible positions, but even their expert guidance has not resulted in anything like the improvement it should have done.

A tendency is very noticeable for the companies to enter into the business in a half-hearted fashion, a tendency perhaps best exemplified by the fact that, of about 20 studios in and around London, but one, to the best of my knowledge, was originally built as a studio! The remainder have been converted from anything, from aerodromes to power stations, into plants, which indicates fairly well the feeling generally prevalent to make do with whatever is possessed rather than to start in under the most favorable circumstances. The one exception is situated in a field which would make an admirable lot for the building of streets and other exterior sets, for it is much larger than many a lot to be seen here, but upon only one occasion has it been put to that purpose, and then only after much heated discussion as to the advisability of so doing. That, incidentally, is the one and only set that I have ever seen built outside the stage. The inclemency of the climate is, naturally, the main reason why this is not done, but, at the same time, England has some sunny months, during which an outside set could be profitably employed.

Productions are made too cheaply. The average six-reel production is made at a cost of from $12,500 to $15,000, a figure which is far too low, with the result that many British pictures show their cheapness on the screen. The comparative cheapness of labor and material make the figure appear somewhat lower than it really is, but not very much so.

Location conditions are also trying at times, for, instead of assistance being given by the police, as it is here, the police there, solely in the execution of their duty, make mention of an arrest for "causing an obstruction" of traffic, when the inevitable crowd gathers upon the first view of a camera. The crowds themselves are none too obliging at times, and will persistently gather in front of the lens, and, owing to the English law, they have a perfect right to do so, with the result that the director has to ask them to oblige him by moving out of the way.

English actors are recognized as being good, and but little difficulty is found in obtaining talent, a fact which is easily seen in the poorest of British productions, but no little trouble is occasioned by reason of the fact that about 75 per cent of film actors are working on the legitimate stage at night and at afternoon shows, thus causing great hindrance and delay on the schedules of work. Their attitude, in some cases, of regarding film work as a rather lucrative pastime, is also annoying, for not half of them, although good actors, regard the industry with sufficient seriousness to attempt to adapt themselves to, or to understand, the peculiar demands of the camera.

An interesting fact to note is that fully 95 per cent of the film companies in England are engaged solely in the making of drama. Comedy companies are few and far between, springing up now and again, and making perhaps six pictures before they disappear from the trade. There is no studio at all in England at this time which devotes its energies solely to the making of comedies, strange as it may seem, for there would appear to be better facilities for the making of comedies in England than there are for dramatic production.

To sum up the situation from the point of view of an American company intending to visit Great Britain, the only advantages that are offered are the beauty of the rural scenery and old houses and mansions, the ability of the actors, and the minds of the authors. As the actors have come here, and the authors would seem to be coming over, whilst the scenery and houses can be passably well duplicated by carpenters, a trip to England for these advantages would seem to be unworthy of the expense entailed in going over, and, with the British industry in its present retarded condition, it would be a Napoleonic task for any American company to attempt to revolutionize it at the present time.

England's one remaining attraction would work out at too great a cost per drink to make the transportation of a company attractive.

KING VIDOR FORECASTS CINEMA'S TREND IN 1921

King Vidor, director of "The Jack-Knife Man" and "The Sky Pilot," believes that some drastic changes are due in the types of photoplays to be produced in 1921; he proffers conclusive reasons for believing that motion picture theatre patronage will be increased fully fifteen per cent; and says, in substantiation of his predictions:

"The great number of churches and schools that are beginning to make photoplays a feature of their entertainments, and the serious consideration being given the cinema as a possible ethical force of wide scope, will cause many noted educators and men in public service to take an active interest in cinema production; these men, with their high ideals, will be the means of fostering photoplays which will present contemporaneous life in its cleanest, most useful, and therefore highest aspects.

"The World War and ensuing events have tended to make people more unselfish; those statesmen who love their country best by striving to make it best will realize the far-reaching power of the screen; and will advocate the making of film productions which stimulate the love of country, and tend to solidify national ideals.

"The success of such photoplays as 'The Miracle Man,' 'Earthbound,' 'Broken Blossoms,' 'Humoresque,' 'The Jack-Knife Man,' and 'Something to Think About' will cause more directors to film pictures super-physical, psychological, or ethical in theme. Furthermore, the Cinema's spiritual renaissance of the past fifteen months or so marks, in my judgment, the dawn of an era of loftier, grander photoplays.

"Many unfettered minds will begin to realize that the Cinema Art is the highest of all, being the only universal medium of expression. I believe, in the Divine Plan of Life, the purpose of the motion picture's advent to be the creation of a deeper understanding between the various nations and races of the Earth; ultimately, to make Universal Brotherhood a realized fact.

"I am inclined to believe that many more actors of the spoken drama will turn to the Eighth Art, awakening to the fact that they may reach millions instead of thousands; that many more writers and playwrights will turn to the screen, realizing that their brain children will reach, through that wide channel, almost half of Humanity.

"I am convinced that the public of 1921 and later years, will regard actors, actresses, directors and screen writers, who give the world some great message of hope or understanding, as the most useful members of the human race.

NEW YORK NEWS

By J. J. Livingston

Leonce Perret is preparing a new story and expects to go into production within the next few weeks.

Ethel Clayton will start on her new picture, "Sham," some time in January. This production will be made in Hollywood.

Chas. Giblyn will soon pick up the megaphone again to direct Pearl White in his fourth feature photoplay for William Fox.

Kenneth Harlan has been engaged to play the lead with Constance Talmadge in the "Man From Toronto." Chet Withey will direct.

Margaret Beecher, who is being featured in the Edward Hemmer production, "Sunshine Harbour," will take a short vacation, visiting her folks over the holidays.

Madlaine Traverse has been scouring the kennels of the outlying districts of New York and Long Island searching for a Great Dane of intelligence to play a prominent part in the picturization of the "Ivory Disc."

Herbert Brenon has started directing Norma Talmadge on her latest picture, entitled "The Passion Flower." Mr. Brenon has selected Courtenay Foote, Natalie Talmadge, Robert Payton Gibbs and Harrison Ford for the cast.

Jean Paige of Vitagraph, in just a few short years has climbed from practically an extra girl to stardom and will shine as the biggest star in the life of Albert E. Smith, president of Vitagraph, from now on, as Miss Paige and Mr. Smith were married in Illinois last week.

Harry A. Klein, who recently was manager of Universal City, California, is the president of a new incorporation entitled Candler Pictures. The first series will be re-issues, after which a series of ten foreign-made pictures will be offered.

Pola Negri, who is playing Du Barry in "Passion" at the Capitol Theatre, stands out as an actress of rare ability. "Passion" at 9:30 at night has as big an audience waiting outside to get in as there is inside looking at the picture. The press has unanimously claimed it is the best picture of the year.

Henry Kolker will direct Conway Tearle in "The Fighter," by Albert Payson Terhune.

Albert Parker, who directed Norma Talmadge in "Satan's Paradise," is at present engaged in cutting and preparing the picture for release.

The New Capital record: 21,109 people on Sunday paid admission to see "Passion." This tops the record reached by the "Mark of Zorro."

Martha Mansfield and Conway Tearle are two new stars under the Selznick banner and will make four productions a year each.

Louis J. Selznick, head of the Selznick Enterprises, has changed the corporation's name to the Selznick Corporation and has increased the capitalization from $60,000,000 to $120,000,000.

The Board of Directors of the Famous Players had a meeting yesterday at headquarters, declaring a regular quarterly dividend of 8 per cent on preferred stock payable February 1st to stockholders at the close of business on January 15th.

Andre Himmel of the French-American Cinematograph Corp., has been in conference since his arrival with the Fleischmann Construction Company relative to the affairs of his organization.

Maxwell Karger, now directing "A Message From Mars," has engaged the 8th Coast Artillery Armory at 196th street and Fordham road and has built there a complete English setting which consists of London streets and scenes necessary. The star of this production is Bert Lytell.

The members of the Motion Picture Directors' Association, New York Lodge, and those belonging to the coast organization, held a dinner last Tuesday evening at the Hotel Biltmore. An elaborate entertainment was given, interspersing and following the dinner.

John Mayer will appear with Marquerite Clark in her forthcoming production, "Scrambled Wives." Under a nom de plume Mr. Mayer has written many amusing short stories and scenarios. His latest scenario, "If the Shoe Fits," will be produced early in the coming year.

Violet De Bieary, well known for her work in the "Unwelcome Mother," "Under Two Flags" and the "Spirit of Lafayette," has just closed with the Grace George company, playing "The Ruined Lady." Miss De Bieary, who was playing the ingenue role, has had many stage offers but will stick to pictures from now on.

A WORD FROM THE PICTURE FOLKS IN NEW YORK TO LOS ANGELES

By Director Frank P. Donovan

Hello, California! How are you, anyway? We, or us, as you like, back in the city of sighs and tears, busted bank rolls and phoney picture companies, send our regards to you and yours and the rest. We have just about kept from starving. How about you? Of course, you eat regularly—some days. That's all in the game of movies.

Stanley Walpole, Al Riccardi, Mike Ringe, Hamilton Smith, Carlyle Fleming, Harold Forshay, Leslie King, Fred Chaston, Paul Allen, George Sargent, Howard Hall, Frank Perigini, Edgar Lewis, Jack J. Harvey, Saul Harrison, Jack Pringle, Al. Thomas, William Turner, Burton King, Louis Haines, Dan Duffy, and a lot more picture folk and Green Roomers, send their best wishes for a Merry Christmas and a happy, prosperous New Year to everybody in the picture game in Los Angeles. We are all one; let us keep that way. Pass along the good word, for a fellow may be down but he's never out.

For every one you make happy, think of all the happiness that will be yours. Think how much more happily you can sleep, and think how much more happy the fellow you assisted will be. Don't be a glutton; pass the joy around. Every dog has his day. If you're having yours, don't be selfish. The other fellow will have his sometime. So help all you can now, especially now, and don't put it off.

For some it will be a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year. For others a gloomy blue Sunday. No one feels happy on an empty stomach, and no one can feel the Yuletide cheer unless he has some of the cheer to imbibe. Get the point at issue? Shake yourself, old pal, remember the other fellow. Make every player happy by lending a helping hand. Don't feel it's been a great year, for it's not unless you make some others less fortunate think so. Let your hand slip into your wallet pocket and accidentally on purpose on your roll. Do something for the business you call an art.

Let it be known that the picture folk stick like glue, that they help one another out, and advocate that great brotherly feeling that goes so far to make work a pleasure.

OLIVER MOROSCO BACKS "ALL STAR" CAST

In these days of "all star" casts Oliver Morosco, who is entering the film industry, believes that the solution of the "better pictures" problem will be in ideal casts rather than all-star make-ups.

"I have some very definite ideas regarding this," said Morosco today. "Often times we are over-influenced in casting by the weight of names. I want to see a picture made with the 'ideal cast' idea regardless of whether the make-up is all-star or half unknown.

"For instance, we may find the perfect type for a certain part. I believe in carrying that idea out through the entire cast. In other words, just as much care should be taken in the casting as in the direction of a picture.

"Of course, we know that 'finds' are not common occurrences in pictures. There must be certain development of the technique of appearing before the camera. But the 'ideal cast' will do most to develop talent and at the same time make better pictures."

TALMADGE COMPANY GOES TO EGYPT

The latest announcement of a company going abroad concerns Norma Talmadge. Miss Talmadge, her director and players, will proceed to England and thence to Egypt within a month or so, in order to film Robert Hichen's desert tale, "The Garden of Allah."

Recently Miss Talmadge's company went down to Jamaica for atmosphere for her next production, "Satan's Paradise."

BARRYMORE ON LAST PRODUCTION FOR FIRST NATIONAL

Lionel Barrymore has completed "The Great Adventure," the third production in a series of four in which he is to be starred by Whitman Bennett for distribution by Associated First National Pictures, Inc. Work on the fourth, an adaptation of "Jim, the Penman," has already been started. The Barrymore productions are being directed by Kenneth Webb, and the second of the series, "The Devil's Garden," had the distinction of being one of four pictures that have been classed as "exceptional" by the National Board of Review.

A Questionnaire for Scenarists

By J. Leo Meehan

Proud of a success unique in the annals of the cinema world, the Palmer Photoplay Corporation begins the new year with what is perhaps the most radical departure from ordinary correspondence school methods that has ever been attempted. Secure in the confidence of its thousands of students all over the country, and dignified by the fact that it numbers among its student body a steadily growing group of writers who are either directly connected with the industry or who are doing successful free lance work, the Palmer Corporation has established an entrance examination which every applicant for enrollment must pass.

Collaborating with H. H. Van Loan, screen writer, and Professor Malcolm Shaw McLean, formed instructor in short story writing at Northwestern University, the Palmer faculty has devised a questionnaire designed to discover the existence of creative imagination and dramatic insight. Experience has proved that these qualifications are necessary for successful photoplay writing and also that they are inherent.

"We have never claimed that we could 'make' photoplaywrights," said Frederick Palmer, president of the corporation and director of its department of education. "We have always insisted that there must be an inherent talent, the fundamental spark of creative ability. It may be that it is undeveloped, but nevertheless there must be some indication of its presence. In the Creative Test questionnaire we have followed generally the method adopted by the United States government in the days of the war for analyzing a person's natural aptitude. And of course in this instance we base our analysis on qualifications that would make for success in photoplay writing. Unless the applicant for enrollment indicates very clearly in this test that he, or she, has the latent creative talent and a sense of the dramatic, we will not accept enrollment at any price.

"We believe, today more than ever, that there is a place in the motion picture industry for such an institution as ours; one that employs experienced instructors to teach the technique, the possibilities and the limitations of the screen. This is but another step in our policy to develop as screen writers only those who indicate that they have possibilities, and to discourage those whose chances for success are extremely small.

"Producers are now convinced, more than ever before, that screen writers must be developed; writers who know the technique of the cinema, and who write picture drama, not spoken drama or narrative. Through our course of study and our careful criticism of students' weaknesses, we are developing those who have real ability, and eliminating those who do not seem suited to this work—who just have the notion that they can write screen drama."

There are a comparative few within the industry, perhaps, who realize that the Palmer Photoplay Corporation now occupies nearly an entire floor of one of the downtown office buildings. And larger quarters are already needed.

The questionnaire is a six-page examination divided into the following ten divisions: General information; training or education; vocation and hobby; an analytical test of dramatic insight through the selection, by the applicant, of the one big dramatic climax in a given brief synopsis; a test of visual memory and power of retentive observation; two creative tests of imagination in which the applicant is required to complete synopses of plots given; an analytical test in which the applicant is required to analyze the dramatic outcome of a given plot and explain logically why it so ended; a request for a brief statement of the ideals of the would-be writer; and, lastly, a series of questions designed to discover the seriousness of purpose and the applicant's real reasons for looking to photoplay writing as a means of income.

An important and growing feature of the Palmer organization is its Sales Department, of which Kate Corbaley is manager. The department not only handles the best and most acceptable work of the students, but also does a large business in published works of well-known magazine and stage authors. The Palmer Sales Department is said to have transacted the largest volume of business of any institution of its kind in Los Angeles during the past twelve months.

"We find that our Sales Department service is meeting with the enthusiastic approval of an increasing number of producers," said Roy L. Manker, general manager of the Palmer organization. "For we believe we can furnish a complete variety of screen material. We have the best of the originals from amateurs, and we eliminate the thousands which are unsuited for production, offering only those which are really picturable. The same is true of the published material that is offered to us. We reject as much of it, or more, than we accept for sale. We do this because we have readers who know picture values and who will not accept material unless it has pictorial value."

Frederick Palmer, who was formerly associated with a number of Los Angeles studios, is president and director of the educational department. Roy L. Manker is general manager, with H. E. Teter as vice president and S. M. Warmbath as secretary-treasurer.

In addition to the instructional and sales branches of the organization, the Palmer Corporation is also publishing a monthly magazine devoted exclusively to the information and interests of screen writers. It is called "The Photoplaywright" and is being edited by J. Leo Meehan, formerly with the Benj. B. Hampton staff.

Why not actually buy more scripts from the outside and give screen credit to Lizzie Allen down in Seguin or Oshkosh? What if her effort at scenario writing does contain only one situation, or the germ for a story? Go ahead and buy it—and then have your expert staff writer develop it. Give him the credit for the scenario, but mention her name and all the papers in Southwest Texas will give extra space to the picture. Besides, you will be making good on your claim that no one has a scenario monopoly around your studio and that you do actually buy stories from the outside.

Another thing. The stereotyped, printed rejection slip is the greatest enemy-making agency that motion picture producers have. True, the magazines have never used anything else, and it does not seem to hurt them. It does hurt the motion picture industry because there is a more intimate relation between the motion picture and the masses than that which exists between publishers and their readers. The printed rejection slip wounds hearts, crushes ambition, bleeds enthusiasm to death, and breeds suspicion.

Lizzie Allen attends the little picture show around the corner. She is one of the millions of "fans" who keep the producers at work. As she watches the drama unfold itself on the screen she is fired with an ambition to write a story for the handsome and dashing hero she sees there. The more she thinks about it, the more enthusiastic she becomes. Dramatic incidents in her own life are vividly reproduced in her memory, and her imagination soars. There is no question in her mind but that she has just as good a story, or perhaps a better one than she has just seen at the little picture show. An article in one of the "fan" magazines tells her that a wonderful man, a genius in Los Angeles, whose likeness she sees there in the magazine, and whose master hand guides the destiny of world-famous stars, has sent out an appeal for stories. He is appealing to her. "Gee, but he's a great man!" And wouldn't it be just wonderful if he would buy her story? She goes around in a half daze for a week. Then she has the story finished. The article in the magazine has said that the scenarios must be typed. She has no typewriter, nor could she use it if she did. So, she pays half of her week's wages to have it all typed and fixed up pretty with a pink ribbon. It must look just right when it is laid on the desk in front of that great man whose picture she saw in the magazine. The story is finally mailed and extra postage tucked away to cover a reply. She has spent an extra hour in composing a sentimental little letter, to go along with her first story.

Now Lizzie goes to the picture show oftener than ever. She has read something in the magazine about how to write scenarios. She goes to the little show twice—three times—to see the same picture. She compares the story with her own. All the time she can imagine the thrill that she will feel when she sees her own name on that very screen. In just a few days now she will hear from that grand man to whom she has sent her story. A week elapses and she watches every mail. She begins to study the distance to Los Angeles. The old postman tells her how long it takes a letter to go there and back.

Two weeks has elapsed and Lizzie runs to meet the postman. Her heart gets heavy when he digs a heavy envelope out of his bag and hands it to her. He turns his face away as she searches his countenance shyly to see if he knows. Then she runs into the house and opens the big envelope with trembling little hands. Well, she will at least get a letter from that grand man anyway. As she takes out the script—her script—she looks back in the envelope again for the letter. It is not there. Then she looks at the script again—there are a few cold, printed words on a little slip of paper which tell her that the story is "unavail-

"Poor Fish"

By Wycliffe A. Hill

"Poor fish!" That is the very complimentary appellation I heard a gum-chewing, fluffy-headed, washed-out, and brainless blonde female at one of the motion picture studios, give to a brilliant professional man whose first effort at scenario writing had been received in the morning mail along with some dozens of others. Another employee, an attache of the scenario department, laughed with her as he gathered up the armload of scripts as if they had been so much kindling wood and started across the room. One or two of them which had dropped on the floor, he nonchalantly kicked into a corner. What were two scenarios, more or less, anyway?

To me, that was a reflection of the wrong attitude, and one which is not going to do the motion picture industry any good. The fact that everybody and his neighbor is trying to write for the screen, is the best evidence in the world of the popularity of the motion picture. I contend that motion picture producers are overlooking a bet, in the consideration that they show to the thousands of amateur writers all over the world who are taking the appeals for stories made through publicity departments, seriously.

In submitting specimens for analysis, readers will kindly remember that the more writing I receive, the better able am I to diagnose dominant characteristics. Write in ink always. No free analyses will be sent by mail.

1. JAS. B. SMITH:

The easy swing and big loops in this signature betray a genial, imaginative, resourceful mentality. Mr. Smith connects cause and effect even as his letters are joined from word to word. He is far-sighted, idealistic, can make money, for you'll notice that his "s" is tightly closed. The writer is good-natured, witty, loves travel, is observant, courageous and very practical. He has high ambitions, shows versatility, and makes friends readily. Salesmanship, executive ability, fluency of speech which would make of him a linguist or actor, writer of advertising, etc., are marked traits of this writing.

2. AVIS SCOTT:

This is a very ardent nature, one which loves intensely, is very critical and discerning, analytical, quick-witted and quick-tempered. Miss Scott is artistic and musical, mimetic, witty, never needs a blueprint when you tell her a joke. Such pointed writing is unusual and denotes that the young lady sees a point instantly, speaks up sharply when annoyed, has a tendency toward nervousness and emotionality. She is imaginative, unselfish, generous and sympathetic to the core. She will suffer through her strong love nature, meeting many disappointments and much ingratitude, because she gives out too freely of emotions and personal belongings. She should become a character reader and vocational specialist, a diagnostician, art critic, proofreader, actress or musician. Don't hug a desk, Avis—for you're a rara avis, not easily tamed or happy in a cage, even when gilded!

3. MADELEINE L'ESTRANGE:

The mate to the extreme forward slant of Miss Scott is this very noticeable backhand of Miss L'Estrange. The two girls are extremes. This hand shows exclusiveness, hauteur, pride and self-sufficiency, critical analysis, selfishness, enthusiasm in matters which bring personal reward, but not much ardor in helping other people. Miss L'Estrange gets along very well alone. She is discriminating, hence avoids quick intimacies. She shows psychic ability of no mean proportions. She is very sensitive to ridicule, neglect or scolding. She's independent, shrewd, inclined to self-pity, and in fact thinks entirely too much about herself and in a very limited way about others. She does not forgive or forget a wrong speedily. Retrospection is her middle name. Ambitions are high, especially for the attainment of financial success.

4. MILO WINGARD:

Ruled paper sample, not reliable for character analysis. Will readers please take notice that I must have ink samples on unruled paper? You are a very critical and observant individual, self-sufficient, particular, inclined to be fussy even. You are a lover of good detail work, a stickler for order and cleanliness, quite KOSHER in your habits. The writing betrays further a scientific trend of mind, with but little educational advantages so far to back it up. You should be taking up mechanical engineering, sign-painting, card-lettering, character reading; you are versatile, however, so may be an office executive just as well.

5. IRENE BURR ANSWER:

No, one does not have to be a subscriber to Camera to have an analysis—just a "constant reader." I don't answer letters by mail when you fail to enclose postage.

6. NORMA S. B—:

Your writing shows a very temperamental streak, and a splendid talent for mimicry, dramatic art, music, self-expression along some distinctive line. You are whimsical and have a good sense of humor. You show tremendous imagination, hence exaggerate your joys and sorrows needlessly—you'll suffer if you don't curb your impressionable heart-outpourings. You are idealistic, critical and ambitious. You are quick-tempered and vain, and yet very unselfish, kindhearted and willing to do favors. You fly impulsively into new schemes, and yet keep your wits pretty well about you. You must not overdo yourself; nervous disorders threaten from over-fatigue. Constitution is good, however.

You are very positive, as most intuitives are. No one can drive you, you're too individualistic and independent. Hand shows refinement, good taste, versatility, intense nature, smartness.

7. GRACE E. MALGREN:

Short sample, short reply. Your writing shows talkativeness, high ambitions, good nature, extreme conscientiousness, tremendous imagination and love of the mystic. Very sensitive and proud.

8. MARJORIE E. SCOTT:

Too short again. You're ambitious, imagination excellent, practicality and wit combine, strong will offsets unselfishness, are industrious worker, independent, strong, clever character.

able" and signed simply with printed name of the film company. "He—didn't even see it!" is all she says.

At about the same time a corpulent, good-natured lawyer and one of the mainstays in his city, several hundred miles away, opens a large envelope which the mail man has just brought in, and finds the same kind of a slip attached to a "masterpiece" that he has written. All he says is "Hell!"

That genius with the commanding features whose picture they saw in the magazine, don't look like such a "hell of a fellow" after all. Incidentally the receipts at a couple of picture shows fall off a few nickels.

Later on, Lizzie sees an old picture which has been made a couple of years and which contains a similar situation to one in her story, and she just knows that that hateful moving picture producer stole her idea.

A little letter to Lizzie signed with that producer's name and giving her some reason—anything that would have sounded logical to her—for the rejection of the story, and thanking her for sending it in, with a request to try again—and he would still be "that grand man." And of course every time she saw his name on a billboard as the producer of a certain picture she would be sure to be a booster. The same feeling would naturally exist towards all the motion picture folks, too.

I have given criticisms to many people who just knew that theirs was the only story ever written—and who would have been highly indignant if I had rejected their stories without an explanation—but who agreed with me and became my friends when I showed them what was wrong. It is against human nature to be turned down with no comeback.

A big man in the film business said to me the other day: "I think it is wrong to encourage amateurs to write scenarios." He was a writer of the old school. I replied to him: "When you kill their interest in writing for the screen, just in that same proportion you destroy their desire to attend the picture shows. Remember that you were once an amateur yourself and you would have bitterly resented any attempt to discount your ability or to place a handicap on your future."

The motion picture industry is facing two grave menaces right now, in which the friendship of the thousands of "bugs," as some choose to call them, will be greatly needed. The silly, obnoxious, Sunday closing law, and censorship which is pending in thirty-eight states, must be met and fought. This must be done with the aid of public opinion. Thousands of those to whom appeals will be made are motion picture "fans" and the same "bugs" who have had their scenarios sent back with stereotyped printed rejection slips attached to them.

I tell you the "high and mighty" attitude doesn't pay.

PRESS AGENT WRITES SCENARIO

"The Man From Nowhere," Ben Wilson's five-reel feature starring Jack Hoxie, which has just been released, is the first continuity from the pen of Jay Chapman, former newspaper man and short story writer, who is now publicity manager of Benjamin B. Hampton Productions. Mr. Chapman believes that newspaper work is the best school for scenario writers, supplemented by a short term of publicity or reading in the studios for picking up technique. He quotes his chief, Ben Hampton, former magazine editor and now president of Zane Grey Pictures, Inc., and Great Authors Pictures, Inc., to this effect:

"There will be a new literature on the screen in a few years. It will not come from our novelists or fiction writers, but from newspaper writers—regular reporters. Scenario writing is a field in itself, and the best training for it is to be had in newspaper work; first, small town paper experience, then city experience. From the young men and women who are now writing news will come the highly-paid scenario specialists of the future, who will give us a new, fresh, vigorous screen literature."

CHICAGO DISTRIBUTORS

Six months ago Russell-Greiver-Russell opened an office at 8 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, to act as distributing agents for film producers. We have expanded rapidly and now our activities embrace production at and supervision of one of the large studios on the coast, as well as supervision of a national distributing organization.

We are grateful to the industry for so kindly receiving our initial efforts, the Fritz Ridgeway two-reel westerns, the single reel Tusun comedies, five-reel Cuneo westerns and "Gasoline Alley" animated cartoons.

We now have under consideration numerous propositions for the production of film suitable for our requirements.

Indications point to an unusually active and prosperous forthcoming year to the industry, to all members of which we extend cordial greetings.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF THE COSMOART PICTURE CORPORATION

It is the purpose of this company to conduct a motion picture studio of eight units, and to produce pictures with one or more producing companies.

As a location for our studios, we have secured a park-like tract of ground, almost within the heart of Los Angeles—by motor, less than 15 minutes from the Alexandria Hotel. Four car lines touch within a block of the property.

This tract is a natural park of great beauty. In looking about the grounds, one is prompted to think nature must have meant this spot for motion picture usage. In improving the grounds, every advantage will be taken of the forest and streams at our command, our effort being to combine our improvements with the work of nature in such a manner as to produce the effect of wild natural beauty.

It is our determination to make this one of the most beautiful parks in California, developed primarily with the thought of its use as a motion picture park, thus making it the perfect "PARK AND STUDIO BEAUTIFUL."

A variety of water scenes enter into practically all motion pictures. In this regard, our grounds are ideal. Two ever-flowing streams wind their way diagonally across the property. These streams will develop the three waterfalls and a boulder-broken cascade, and will also afford long stretches of water courses, giving an infinite variety of scenes, the sluggish tropical jungle streams, the meadow brook of New England, the cataract of the mountains, and the swamp streams of the cane-brakes and tules. Aside from the streams, there will be two lakes, or lagoons. The lower and larger lagoon is now forested on one bank for a distance of more than a quarter of a mile. The present forested shore will be further improved with trees, plants and shrubs common to the Eastern states. The opposite bank for an equal distance will be given over to forests and shrubbery of the tropics and semi-tropics; or, in other words, the lagoon will be so improved that it will furnish on one side a great variety of scenes native to the greater part of the United States, and on the other an equal variety of scenes of the tropics, let us say from California to the Nile.

The upper and smaller lagoon will be improved in quite a different manner. Its principal shore line will be built up as a bit of Venice.

The lagoons and waterways are large enough to give ample room for canoeing and boating.

The combination of the tree-grown meadow, the waterways, the forested hillside, the jungle-like swamps, furnish almost an inexhaustible variety of artistic background for pictures, and another important advantage is that all this scenic material is under the lighting system of our park, and exterior night scenes of every variety can be made without delay.

The studio buildings will be so located that they will not mar the park, nor in any way encroach upon it. Each studio unit will be complete within itself. The separate studios will, so far as exterior lines are concerned, be planned with the same care as though they were residences upon estates. These buildings will include every important type, from the Latin to the fine country lodge of America today.

In connection with our producing studios, we will maintain a well-equipped modern laboratory, and every effort will be made to produce pictures of the highest quality, and where quality rather than quantity will be the aim.

Billy Fletcher, starring in one-reel comedies at the Burston studios, will finish his contract for fifty-two pictures a year this week.

COMPANY TO DO METAPHYSICAL NOVELS

By Harl McInroy

"Mata the Magician" and "Linked Lives," two metaphysical novels by Isabella Ingalese, writer of occult and philosophical works, with which many of our readers are doubtless familiar, have been acquired by the New Era Productions, Incorporated, of Los Angeles, California, and will shortly be produced.

The picturization of "Mata the Magician," the first of the novels to be filmed, while not to be looked upon strictly as propaganda, will yet provide the world with scientific truths, demonstrated in a most strikingly dramatic and convincing manner.

The personnel of those comprising the staff of the New Era Productions, Incorporated, are all students of the occult, and their intention is to produce pictures dealing with Life after Death, Karma, and Reincarnation.

The directors of the company are of the opinion that the time is now ripe for many of the great truths to be disclosed to those who will understand, for an almost imperative need for such pictures has arisen. The recent world strife with its devastating results has brought home to everyone the immense questions of Life and Death—gigantic problems that must be faced by all—in which each one must play his or her part individually in their solution.

Mr. Richard Ingalese, author of "History and Power of Mind," is the president of the company; Mr. Harl McInroy, the vice-president, and Mr. William H. Augustus, secretary and treasurer. The business offices of the corporation are at 406 Laughlin Bldg.

LETTERS FROM ONE EXTRA MAN TO HIS BROTHERBy Hess Punko
(Apologies to Don Hix)

Hello Jim:

Things have been running purty quiet here for the last few weeks an' I think you must a had a purty good hunch when you went back to frin' on the R. R. Say, Jim, I was just beginnin' to make up my mind to hit the roads back to Arizona when Claude Lampman called me up from the Equity and slipped me a check to do a cow puncher over in Edendale at the Doubleday for Lester Cuneo in that western they're makin' called "Rangers of the Law," an' believe me, Jim, I was so near starved to death that I put on a big front an' busted right in to John's that night an' spent half my check on the old feed bag. Sittin' over in one of the little stalls was King Baggot (you remember him, don't you? The guy with the white streak in his hair) an' George Bunny, the son of the old Vitagraph comedian, John Bunny, who died several years ago, an' he is sure a chip off the old block, Jim. They must have worked the same day that I did for they were sure puttin' a swell bunch of eats out there for 'em. I tell you if any of them fans back east want to see the stars (an' near stars) all they have to do is to have enough real dough to buy a feed some night at John's an' the whole gang will be there some time during the night.

The next day I started to scout for another job an' looked around till I was blue in the face. I stopped at the old National and had a talk with John Waters who is assistin' Irvin Willat an' found that they are just finishin' a big sea picture called "Partners of the Tide" an' the only thing left was some under sea stuff an' I'm a rotten swimmer so I tried to get myself in line for some work when they get into their new studio that they are buildin' at Culver City. Johnnie told me that he might have somethin' for me in "Face of the World," the first picture Willat will make out at the new corral. I ran over to the Metro from there and thought sure I could get some ridin' to do in Ingram's "Four Horsemen of the Eucliptus," but Walt Mayo told me that they had finished with the horses and about all they had to shoot yet was some near-ups with the stars. One thing I can't understand tho is how do they find room on the stage for the actors after they get twelve cameramen all set up.

Excuse me just a minute, Jim, while I take another hitch in my belt. Since the saloons left these parts the free lunch counters went too an' that makes it purty tough on some of us actors when jobs go low.

I dragged myself over to Bob Brunton's big place when I heard that Mary Pickford was castin' but luck was against me again for there ain't a guy bein' put on that is less than six feet high. You remember Harry Keton that I introduced you to one night in Chinatown? Well, I think he has found out what Lasky an' Goldwyn an' a lot of those big guys have been tryin' for years to do. How to make a picture without a studio or crew or actors or any expense except film and him. An' he asked me in to see it an' I'll say he's good, Jim, for the kid has turned out a two-reel comedy with a barrel of laughs in it and he is the star, director, producer and studio all himself. He is what you might call a "producer without a studio." More power to him, eh Jim?

Now to get back to job huntin'. I chased all over Hollywood huntin' Frank Grandin, the director who is gettin' ready to start makin' another serial called the "Unfinished Warning," an' when I think how long it takes to make fifteen or twenty parts of one of them serials I tries my durndest to get in it. At least you would be sure of a place to sleep an' a ham sandwich each day for some time. And this man Grandin sure knows how to make serials too. Because he was the guy that made the first serial that ever said "Continued next week," an' you remember it, Jim, it was called "Adventures of Kathleen," starrin' Kathleen Williams, and was made *** years ago at the old Selig place. You noticed I didn't put in just how many years ago because Miss Williams is a friend of mine and I know that she wouldn't never speak to me again if I told her age ** You know how women are about things like that, Jim.

While I was over there at Selig's (and gee, Jim, you ought to see how natural things look at the old place—you remember we broke into the game over there), I ran into Genevieve Berte, who is starrin' in another serial that is bein' made at the zoo an' she is goin' in with the same animals that we used in the other serial years ago.

Sometimes when I look for a job all day long and can't connect, Jim, I feel just like Abbie Stern out at Loco once said, "Our comedies are not to be laughed at." He made himself famous over night (without hiring a personal publicity man) when he said them noble words but he should have taken in more territory and included the extra men in it too.

Well, Jim, I got it all fixed to stand the landlady off for another week an' maybe I'll slip in on a job next week so I can pay her up.

Throw in a shovel full of coal for me, Jim, till next week.

Your kid brother,
HESS PUNKO.

TO PRODUCERS

Many of the screen's most competent writers—men and women whose names have appeared conspicuously on the silver sheet—are members of this organization. Their stories are on file in our Manuscript Sales Department. Through the League you may secure originals or published material—writers to prepare originals or continuity on order—as well as experts in editing, titling and revising pictures.

Realart to Paramount, will return soon to the Realart studio to commence work on a Saturday Evening Post story by Nina Wilcox Putnam.

Wanda Hawley completed work early in the week on her production, "All Night Long," by Philip Bartholomae. Miss Hawley started work the following day in her particular episode of Cecil B. de Mille's adaptation of "The Affairs of Anatol," to which she, like Miss Daniels, has been lent by Realart. Miss Hawley's next Realart offering will be from a story by Lulu Ragsdale, and screening will start early in January.

The Realart Precision laboratory for the repair of fine camera equipment has been completed, and is now in use at the Los Angeles studio. Chief Mechanician Rudolph has at his command milling machines and lathes capable of accuracy to one one-hundred-thousandth of an inch.

AT UNIVERSAL

"The Millionaire Kid" has been finished and is now being edited. It was directed by Harry Harris and features Gladys Walton.

Norman Dawn is concluding "Hidden Fires."

Production on "Colorado," Frank Mayo's forthcoming starring vehicle, is progressing rapidly under the direction of Reeves Eason. Gloria Hope is appearing in support of the star.

Harry Carey is well into the theme of "If Only Jim." The star is working under the direction of Jacques Jaccard.

Edward Laemmle is preparing to start a series of two-reel western photodramas starring Jack Perrin. Laemmle has just finished directing Hoot Gibson in a western drama, "The Little Maverick."

Eva Novak's next starring vehicle will be "Plain Folks," which is now nearing completion under the direction of Leo McCarey.

A cablegram from J. P. McGowan, commanding the Universal Expeditionary Force which is in Cuba to film "The Seal of Satan," an Eddie Polo serial, states that the Cuban authorities and business people are giving them every assistance in their work and that they have already secured many scenes.

Steady progress is being made in filming "False Colors," Priscilla Dean's forthcoming feature, in which the star is being directed by Stuart Paton.

Vin Moore is producing "Ghosts," differing from Ibsen's play of that name, and featuring Dorothea Wolbert. Chuck Resiner is directing "Won, One Flivver," a rib-tickler featuring Cliff Bowers and Ena Gregory.

Edward Kull is busy in the editorial rooms supervising the cutting and assembling of the final episodes of his recent serial production, "The Diamond Queen."

Before leaving Universal City Carl Laemmle entrusted to Tod Browning the production of Edna Ferber's story, "Fanny Herself," the screen rights to which were recently acquired by his company. This will be a Jewel production and will engage the services of an all-star cast. Tod Browning will begin production on "Fanny Herself" as soon as his last feature, "Outside the Law," starring Priscilla Dean, has been fairly launched.

William Worthington, who has been added to Universal's list of producers, is already busying himself on the manuscript of "Three at Table," a story by Bennett Cohen, in which Edith Roberts is to be starred. Wallace Clifton prepared the scenario.

Robert Thornby will make his debut at the Big U studios by producing "A Blood Brother to the Pines," with Frank Mayo in the stellar role. The story is by J. C. Hawks, and the production calls for a trip to Northern California for a sequence of snow scenes.

AT VITAGRAPH

Joseph Rickson, playing the heavy with Joe Ryan in Vitagraph's western serial, "The Purple Riders," broke a leg in a fifty-foot drop over a cliff at Newhall and is now at the Pacific Hospital. The company is shooting other scenes until he can resume work.

The last scenes of Antonio Moreno's "Three Sevens" will be made by Director Chester Bennett this week and editing the picture will begin. The star will enjoy his first vacation in three years at the finish of the picture. He will go either to Honolulu or Mexico City. "Three Sevens," by Perley Poore Sheehan, is his first feature after three serials.

William Duncan and Edith Johnson have completed ten episodes of their chapter play, "Fighting Fate," and will start releasing this production in January.

VOX POPULI

Every now and then Vox goes to Popping, and if one has his trained ear close to the ground he may be able to catch an inkling of something sweeping in the way of changing public opinion.

Fads and fancies, like the Rabbit Twist, Bear Walk and other erstwhile popular amusements, come, occupy a small niche in an unending Hall of Fame, and gradually or suddenly, according to the condition of our changing states of mind, pass on to the limbo of forgotten things.

Truth alone—regardless of the manner of its concrete form of expression—LASTS. For who is there that will even VENTURE the assertion that some of our present-day popular jazzy compositions will outlast a Beethoven sonata; or a modern conception of art, a Da Vinci; or a dramatic literary conception, a Shakespearean tragedy; or yet the "up-to-date" and utterly ridiculous portrayal of COMEDY a la slap-stick, with its absurd appendages in the matter of dress and make-up, a REAL comedy based on the average human being's peculiar characteristics and idiosyncrasies?

Time was when all we expected to see in film comedy was a few swats, innumerable custard pies, and a finale consisting purely of chase and bumps. Intelligence has worked wonders in the film comedy game. And today, as a result, there is an ever-growing tendency toward what will undoubtedly prove more lasting—a comedy art based on human nature, and the foibles and idiosyncrasies of the average man and woman.

Vox has been Popping. All of our few present-day comedians have not been deaf to what it all means. Indeed, there is a decided improvement on our screen today over what it was a few years ago. The constant endeavor, however, has been to produce something different. But mere difference does not strike the "key" that plays on the human heart strings and brings long-remembered joy.

As in music, painting, or any art, so it is in film comedies—the real comedies in the "art" class—the VOX POPULI brings out the real artist. It may not be in a day, or month, or year, but a few years at least; while at the end of the testing time the change seems to have come overnight.

On our morning horizon today there are a number of comedians that the VOX POPULI has not acclaimed. Their claims, however, if true, will bring us the lasting comedy—not that later years will bring changes again—but they will be true works of art.

Out of the maze of film events comes from all announcements a modern Alexander, an actor with no little experience behind him, and with claims to answer the VOX POPULI. Whether he, Alexander Alt and his co-star, Helen Howell, will bring about such dear ideals as we have spoken of, time and VOX POPULI can only tell.

These two players have, however, gone about their work with more than usual caution, although they had developed ideals of their own through long years in pictures and previously on the stage.

Earle Williams will start "Loot of the Night," his next feature, shortly after the first of the year.

Jimmy Aubrey, Vitagraph comedian, is being rewarded for steady production throughout the year with a holiday vacation.

"Babe" Hardy, comedy heavy man, has been farmed out to G. M. Anderson for one picture.

Larry Semon is finishing "The Hick," another special comedy. He will start another after the first of the year.

FRANKLIN CASTING

Sidney Franklin announces that he has chosen several members of the cast for his picturization of Andrew Soutar's "Courage," his second independent for Associated First National release, which goes into production next week.

The scenario has been completed by Sada Cowan and Mr. Franklin, and the technical staff has already started work on the sets.

"Courage" will be filmed at the Brunton studio, under the sponsorship of Albert Kaufman.

SPECIAL PICTURES

The report that the Special Pictures Corporation was to increase its scope and enter the feature field as well as the domain of comedies and other short subjects was vigorously denied this week by C. C. Craig, business manager of the west coast producing organization.

"At the time we turned our distribution over to the Federated Film Exchanges of America, and announced that we would confine our activities to production only, a rumor was started that we were to invade the feature field," says Mr. Craig.

"Later when two feature companies leased space at our studio and started producing, this report gained further credence, for a weekly Los Angeles film magazine carried a story to the effect that these companies, and a unit which Jesse D. Hampton is directing, were a part of our organizations, namely the John Gorman production.

"Such is not the case. We organized as specialists in short subjects and have found that field sufficiently productive, and we will continue along the same line during 1921."

According to Louis W. Thompson, president of Special, the output of Comiclassics will be doubled in 1921. Instead of releasing one every two weeks there will be one release a week.

Louise Fazenda will return from her nation-wide popularity tour early in 1921, and all will be in readiness for her to start production within a week after her return. An internationally known comedy director has been engaged to handle her two reels, which are to be sponsored by the A. L. Hart productions, the producing unit that has been responsible for the Chester Conklin comedies.

"Dick" Burrud, creator of the Sunset-Burud series of scenics, will start on another expedition early in 1921, while the best part of the travel pictures secured during his "Tia Juana, Mexico, to Nome, Alaska," jaunt are yet to be released.

Two two-reel western companies will be working at the Special Pictures studio, the Art Acord company, of which S. M. Piercy is president and the "Broncho Billy" company with G. M. Anderson at its head.

A. L. Hart, head of the A. L. Hart productions sponsoring Chester Conklin comedies for Special Pictures Corporation, has recovered from an illness which kept him from the studio for several days.

The Police Force Would Act!

The fact that there is a law prohibiting Los Angeles policemen from engaging in other remunerative occupations is generally known, and yet they continue to work in motion pictures. The profession is not appreciating this condition, since these patrolmen and motor cops are drawing checks for services that should rightfully be rendered by actors.

Moreover, from the viewpoint of the public, an officer who has worked all day before the camera is scarcely in a fit condition to walk a beat at night. Such a situation is not to be tolerated by a city whose recent robberies and attacks of various kinds upon women have become almost daily. If this ordinance is dead, it had better be struck off the books. What is the matter with the department, anyway?

EARNINGS THAT GIVE ASSURANCE

Company's stock, representing the equity behind these bonds, is about $250,000,000.

Class Legislation?

Once more comes the echo, well press-agented this time, of another agitation which is being created by that always busy yet far from contented little missionary, The Lord's Day Alliance. It concerns the blue laws again! Not satisfied to let well enough alone, even after the miserable failures that the holier ones have met in nearly every instance of their pet hobby's adoption, they have commenced a campaign by which they would fain force upon a sane country absurdities that half-wits could not tolerate and maintain their self-respect.

About and to the fanatics who are attempting this insult to American intelligence, with the idea that religion may be crowded upon humanity, we have nothing to say other than to heartily applaud what has already been published in the nation's representative papers and magazines.

There is, however, a phase of the affair that seemingly has been overlooked, which we mention because it affects our profession particularly. During the past two or three years, churches all over the United States, of various denominations, have taken up the practice of showing motion pictures at their Sunday evening services. True, some have barred all save educational and religious subjects, but there are many more who, having recognized that a good picture invariably accomplishes twenty times more for right than the most logical, finished and artistically delivered sermon ever composed, habitually run regular photoplays, chosen on account of their themes, and procured, we understand, at a materially cheaper rate than that asked of the showmen.

Perhaps the most marked advantage to the church is that this sort of thing draws the crowd which finds an evening's cinema entertainment with admission free thoroughly attractive. The church meanwhile is also the gainer financially, for the "no admission" pretense is gotten around by special collections and donations "to cover expenses, etc."

It is largely this class that is endorsing the closing laws, by which they hope to eliminate competition! No, not all of the pious brothers who push this project are fools. We admire their diplomacy, but beg to remind them that class legislation of this kind is as yet unconstitutional and a large section of their heretofore good-natured victims are fully aware of the fact.

Another Boost for the Free Lancer

Editor Camera!:

Congratulations on the holiday number of Camera! It was a very attractive, useful and entertaining number.

Especially I wish to sanction Wycliffe A. Hill's article, "Poor Fish." In this article Mr. Hill has sounded a vital note. Producers of motion pictures must and will eventually look to the original writer for the screen for screen material, and it is only through the original writers that motion pictures are going to advance triumphantly to a new and higher era. Writing for the screen is an art in itself, and not to be confused with any other. It is distinctive in its purposes and its development, and not to be confused with writing the novel and the short story. The time will come (if indeed it has not already) when it will be a matter for study and preparation, and students will prepare themselves for motion picture writers just as many now prepare for short story writing. The scenario plot is not the short story plot, but a structure meant primarily and entirely for presentation on the screen. It is easily perceived that when men begin to spend years in preparation for WRITING FOR THE SCREEN, that the screen is going to have greater, better, and more distinctive stories, and that through them, motion pictures are going to have a more firmly established place in the world of art.

That some prominent producing companies boast of the fact that they have acquired famous authors for their staffs, in my opinion, is nothing to be said in those producers' favor, for it stands to reason that those men and women who have spent their lives in preparation for, and have won their places in the fiction field, are going to contribute their best and most worth-while efforts to that field.

In conclusion, let me add that I am not a scenario broker, nor am I thinking of becoming one, but I have made the foregoing remarks solely out of my interest in the advancement of the great motion picture ART. I trust that the editor of Camera!, the only magazine of the profession, will see fit to emphasize this very important phase of motion picture making—THE PLACE OF THE ORIGINAL SCREEN WRITER.

With best wishes for the continued success of the Camera!, I am,

Very truly yours,

W. E. SPENCER.

The Police Force Would Act!

The fact that there is a law prohibiting Los Angeles policemen from engaging in other remunerative occupations is generally known, and yet they continue to work in motion pictures. The profession is not appreciating this condition, since these patrolmen and motor cops are drawing checks for services that should rightfully be rendered by actors.

Moreover, from the viewpoint of the public, an officer who has worked all day before the camera is scarcely in a fit condition to walk a beat at night. Such a situation is not to be tolerated by a city whose recent robberies and attacks of various kinds upon women have become almost daily. If this ordinance is dead, it had better be struck off the books. What is the matter with the department, anyway?

Film Capital Production Notes

NO SLUMP IN PRODUCTION HERE

Despite the rumor that motion picture production is to be curtailed, several new companies this week started production. The "Broncho Billy" company has leased space at the Mayer studios where a series of western pictures will be produced.

An organization headed by Denver Dixon has commenced work on a series of one-reel comedies at the Balboa studios, Long Beach, while at the Brunton studios the John Emerson-Anita Loos company has started work on "Wife Insurance." At the same studio the Dial Film Company has commenced shooting scenes for "The Light in the Clearing," under the direction of T. Hayes Hunter.

At Bakersfield the Kernco Film Corporation commenced production this week on its first two-reel comedy with Frank Terry handling the megaphone.

Another new organization that has entered the field is the Lone Star Film Company, which has taken offices in the Mason Opera House Building. "Ranger Bill" Miller is the star and Harry Wulze is named as director. The company has started work on a series of two-reel westerns.

Mildred Harris will commence work at once on "Playthings of Desire" under the direction of John Stahl at the Louis B. Mayer studios.

Announcement is also made that a company headed by Jesse James is soon to enter the film production field.

"BOB HAMPTON OF PLACER" TO BE INITIAL MARSHALL NEILAN RELEASE IN 1921

Marshall Neilan's initial release for 1921 will be his visualization of Randall Parrish's book, "Bob Hampton of Placer," the big production of America's frontier days in 1875, which has been in the course of production since early last summer.

Upon his return to Hollywood from New York, Mr. Neilan will finish this production for early release in the new year. The picturization of Booth Tarkington's famous "Penrod" will then be started by the Neilan company with Wesley Barry again in the starring role. This film will be staged in the East in order to give the picture its proper setting. Albert Payson Terhune's "The Lotus Eater," is also scheduled for early production.

NEW PICTURE COMPANIES FILE INCORPORATION PAPERS

Three new motion picture companies filed incorporation papers this week with the secretary of state. Colonel W. N. Selig and Samuel E. Rork have organized the Snowy Baker Productions, plans for which were recently announced in Camera! Emmet Dalton, A. C. Webb, and M. J. Grave are the incorporators for the Standard Pictures Corporation, and Gordon MacLean is incorporator of the Film Art Productions company.

HARTFORD PREPARES FOR ACTION

David M. Hartford, Associated First National director, has just returned from the Canadian Northwest, where he had gone to inspect a number of important settings constructed for his forthcoming production of James Oliver Curwood's gripping snow story, "The Golden Snare."

During his northern visit Mr. Hartford also approved the purchase of a huge pack of Siberian wolf-dogs and a number of hand-made sledges, together with several polar bears and a team of trained reindeer.

NEW WESTERN COMPANY STARTS

The Sylvanite Production Company starts work this week on the first of a series of six five-reel Westerns, starring Bill Patton. The first production is entitled "Battling Kid," and will be filmed at the Balshofer studio under the direction of Alvin J. Night.

Richard Kipling of New York City is handling the release.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS

Mary Pickford and Owen Moore in a scene from a single reel drama made ten years ago, is one of the features in Issue No. 16 of "Screen Snapshots," the "News Reel of Filmland," produced by Jack Cohn and Lewis Lewyn.

Constance Talmadge at work in the studio and getting a lunch for Sister Natalie, Director Kirkland, John Emerson, John Halladay and Publicist Beulah Livingston is also included in this issue, with Tom Mix, his leading lady, Kathleen O'Conner, and his favorite horse in special stunts.

Francis Ford, Billie Rhodes, Marian Sais and Jack Hoxie, in a specially staged comedy scene, also Lew Cody, May Allison, Muriel Ostriche, Rubye De Remer, Helen Doline, Carl Laemmle and the Christie Beauties, in a varied assortment of subjects of interest to the fans.

CENTURY STUDIOS

Tom Buckingham is ready to start work on his next comedy, which will feature Dixie Lamont.

"What's the Programme?" with Jim Davis directing, is being completed this week.

Director Fred Fishback is at work on another comedy, "The Dog Doctor," his cast including Louise Lorraine, Harry Swett, Bud Jamison and Zip Monberg.

Dick L'Estrange and Frank J. Hampton will arrive in Los Angeles January 1, 1921, to start work upon "Jennie Lind," the initial production. James Young has been engaged as Director General by this new organization.

AT REALART

Cutting and titling of three finished productions, "All Soul's Eve," starring Mary Miles Minter; "Ducks and Drakes," starring Bebe Daniels, and Wanda Hawley's production, "All Night Long," is occupying the immediate attention of the studio staff.

Preparations are also under way for new productions by Miss Hawley and Miss Daniels in January. At present Miss Hawley is playing one of the leading roles in Cecil B. de Mille's all-star adaptation of "Five Kisses," having been lent by Realart for that one production. Bebe Daniels is enjoying a short vacation in her birthplace, Dallas, Texas. She will return shortly, also, for work in Mr. de Mille's photoplay.

S. J. Twining has been appointed engineer in charge of the Precision Laboratory just established at the Realart Studio.

"Sweetie Peach," from a Saturday Evening Post story by Sophie Kerr, has been secured as the next Realart vehicle for Wanda Hawley. It will be made in place of "The Next Besters," previously announced.

AT METRO

Five Metro special productions are now being filmed at the Metro studios in Hollywood. Viola Dana has started work on "Home Stuff," which Albert Kelley is directing.

Alice Lake is in the midst of "Uncharted Seas," which Wesley Ruggles is directing.

May Allison is working on "Big Game" under the direction of Dallas Fitzgerald.

Madame Nazimova is ready to start filming "Camille," which Ray Smallwood is to direct, and Philip E. Rosen is putting the finishing touches on "What's the Matter with Mr. Marriage?" an all-star production in which Milton Sills, Ora Carew and Nigel Barrie have leading parts.

Gareth Hughes is the new star, who will begin work shortly after the opening of the new year. Neither the title of the Hughes picture, nor the personnel of his organization has, as yet, been made known by Mr. Veiler. An announcement concerning his plans will be made within a few days, however.

AT VITAGRAPH

David Smith will direct Earle Williams in his next Vitagraph feature, "Loot of the Night," by Frederic J. Jackson. Production will start next week.

Antonio Moreno and his director, Chester Bennett, are finishing "Three Sevens," and the latter is now cutting and editing this feature. The star will be given a four weeks' vacation before beginning his next feature.

William Duncan's new chapter-play, which has been announced for January release, is being rapidly completed by the star. He has spent the week at Chatsworth, Calif., for exteriors. Next week he will blow up a houseboat at Balboa harbor. Edith Johnson becomes his co-star in this production.

Larry Semon has just finished the filming of "The Hick," his latest special comedy, and he is now cutting and editing the picture preparatory to shipment east.

Joe Ryan is completing the seventh, eighth and ninth episodes of "The Purple Rider." When Joe Rickson, the heavy, recovers from a broken leg the company will go to the Mexican border for exteriors on a large ranch.

GEORGE BEBAN WILL TOUR FOR TWENTY WEEKS

The George Beban tour which includes the showing of the star's latest photoplay, "One Man in a Million" and the personal appearance of Mr. Beban at the conclusion of the film, will begin in Newark, N. J., Sunday, January 9.

The entire route has now been laid out and Beban will not be home for twenty weeks. From Newark, the attraction will move to New York and from there start westward, terminating at the Kinema Theatre, Los Angeles, some time in April or May.

Arrangements have been made in the various cities whereby the star will be met at the railroad station by the mayor and a selected committee of public officials, and from there will be escorted via street parade to the City Hall. In many instances the Mayor will turn over the keys of the city to the visitor and in some cases it has been arranged that Mr. Beban be appointed Mayor for a day, such as was done in Oakland on First National Day last summer.

"IDOLS OF CLAY"

The George Fitzmaurice production, "Idols of Clay," is running this week at Grauman's Million Dollar Theatre. The very human story by Ouida Bergere is made particularly interesting by the subtle direction of Mr. Fitzmaurice. The subtitles are an evening's entertainment in themselves and the unusual locations and sets are beautifully lighted and photographed.

Mae Murray heads the cast as Faith Merrill, a wild little daughter of nature, who finds becoming sophisticated a comparatively simple task. Her work is that of an artist in the part. The paramount characteristic of it is Youth and its interpreter never fails to get over exactly what she attempts.

David Powell is well cast as Dion Holme, a cynical young artist, who becomes an outcast. He handles the role excellently and adds greatly to the value of the production.

George Fawcett plays "Holy Jim" Merrill typically. He makes the old hypocrite very entertaining.

Dorothy Cummings is badly cast as Lady Cray, the heavy. She displays screen possibilities and has undoubtedly had legitimate experience, but as the whimsical and dissipated Englishwoman she is out of place.

Leslie King is a very good type for Blinky the beachcomber. His part is very small, however.

Richard Wangermann plays the Old Master, and Claude King is Doctor Herbert. The latter's work means nothing.

"OH LADY! LADY!"

Bebe Daniels plays at Clune's Broadway in another Realart production entitled "Oh Lady! Lady!" It is a rather sprightly farce with some fairly interesting situations and a good farce cast.

Miss Daniels' performance as May Barber is a considerable improvement over her work in "You Never Can Tell," her last Realart release.

Harrison Ford appears opposite her in the role of Hale Hamilton, a wealthy and most impressionable young artist.

Walter Hiers has a great chunk of the comedy all to himself as Willoughby Finch, who in common with all other fat gentlemen, takes himself seriously.

Charlotte Woods plays Molly Farrington, his trusting fiancée. She shows real farce possibilities.

Lillian Langdon is more than convincing as the dominant, suspicious Mrs. Farrington.

FOURTH OF NEW HALLROOM SERIES READY FOR RELEASE

"A Dog-Gone Mix-Up" is the title of the fourth of the new series Hallroom Boy Comedies.

The comedy was directed by Herman C. Raymaker, under the supervision of Harry Cohn, and will be released by C. B. C.

Sid Smith and Harry McCoy are supported by Polly Moran in this comedy.

HELEN RAYMOND

"THE JACK KNIFE MAN"

In several respects King Vidor's picturization of Ellis Parker Butler's "The Jack Knife Man," which plays this week at Tally's, is a very unusual production. It is filled to the brim with heart interest business that holds one to the end, and yet it does not depend upon a love story to carry it, since the affair of Widder Potter and old Peter can scarcely be classified as young romance. The tale of the simple old Peter and his love for the kiddie that Fate gave him is told beautifully by Mr. Vidor in his screen version. The cast is exceptional.

Fred Turner enacts the title role. His interpretation is wonderfully sympathetic with its delightful comedy touches and realistic pathos.

Bobby Kelso is excellent as the naive little "Buddy," who all unconsciously is responsible for the daily thoughts and actions of two nondescript males. This child is refreshing in his naturalness, and gives considerable promise for the future.

Harry Todd handles Booge, a gentleman of the trail, remarkably. He adds a bit of necessary comedy, and some interest to the plot with his rollicking characterization.

Lillian Leighton is more than amusing as Widder Potter, self-appointed guardian to Old Peter.

Claire McDowell has several clever scenes as Lize Mordan, Buddy's unfortunate mother, and Florence Vidor surprises us by playing Mrs. Montgomery, a "bit" in the production.

Irene Elliott (Yeager) does little Susie. Willis Marks, James Corrigan and Charles Arling complete the list of players.

"GUILF OF WOMEN"

The California is running Goldwyn's latest Will Rogers release, "Guile of Women." It is perhaps the star's most amusing recent offering. In any event its Scandinavian atmosphere proves a novel setting for the entertaining story.

Rogers plays Yal, a sea-faring Swede, who having twice had his heart and pocketbook trifled with by women, is perhaps overly careful. He is ideally cast and combines his comedy and sympathetic seriousness artistically.

Mary Warren is well cast as Hulda, the lady who loves Yal.

Bert Sprotte does some good work as Skole, Yal's friend and advisor.

Doris Pawn makes Annie the real thing in Swedish vamps and Lionel Belmore is equally wicked as Armstrong, who evilly attempts to shanghai the bridegroom.

Charles A. Smiley and Nick Cogley are also included in the cast.

"OUTSIDE THE LAW"

Universal presents Priscilla Dean in "Outside the Law" at the Superba. The production, a thrilling underworld story, was written and directed by Tod Browning. It moves swiftly and has several new twists that fulfil their hair-raising destinies to everyone's satisfaction. The audiences who enjoy the blood and thunder type of picture will certainly be pleased with this one. Quite singularly, the philosophy of the piece is based upon the teachings of Confucius as interpreted by an old Chinaman, one Chang Lo.

Miss Dean plays Silky Moll, a daughter of crook aristocracy. The plot of the story centers about a million dollar job that she "pulls" and the theme concerns her reformation, for which the old Oriental is largely responsible. Miss Dean does some of her most interesting work as Molly.

Wheeler Oakman plays opposite her as Dapper Bill, a soft-hearted and quickly repentant thief. He has several good comedy scenes and a realistic fight sequence.

"Black Jack" Moran is excellently characterized by Lon Chaney, who makes of him one of the most repulsive villains ever filmed. He will give the youngsters an unforgettable thrill. Mr. Chaney also interprets artistically Joe Wang, Chinese servant to Chang Lo, who is well handled by E. A. Warren.

Little Stanley Goethals has a very good role in "Billy," the baby who completes Chang's work of reformation. At last producers are learning that the public wishes to see real "kids" in its screen plays rather than the sophisticated little individuals heretofore used so extensively.

Ralph Lewis, Wilton Taylor and Melbourne MacDowell complete the cast.

"LOVE, HONOR AND BEHAVE"

Associated First National releases Mack Sennett's latest five-reel offering, "Love, Honor and Behave," at the Kinema. It contains many good laughs and several "different" turns. It is easy to "hear" that the audiences enjoy it immensely.

Charlie Murray may be said to lead the casts as the advising judge with a strenuous but innocent past.

Phyllis Haver and Marie Prevost play leading feminine roles, assisted by the regular Sennett organization.

Evidently the five-reel slapstick comedy is going over despite many assertions to the contrary.

John Seitz, who photographed the Metro special production of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," is now working on "Uncharted Seas," Alice Lake's newest starring vehicle, which Wesley Ruggles is directing.

Lewis S. Stone has been engaged by David M. Hartford, Associated First National director, to create the role of "Corporal Philip Raine" in the forthcoming production of James Oliver Curwood's "The Golden Snare."

Wellington Playter, who did the heavy in "Back to God's Country," has been selected by David M. Hartford for a similar role in his forthcoming production of James Oliver Curwood's "The Golden Snare."

Owing to the activities at the Mack-Sennett studios, Director Erle Kenton has been forced to shorten his vacation period. Mr. Kenton was granted a leave of absence until January third, because of a slight breakdown experienced just following the completion of "Small Town Idol."

COMPSON PICTURE COMPLETED

Director Arthur Rosson announces that final scenes for Betty Compson's third production, for Goldwyn release, have been filmed. The editing and titling will be completed in about two weeks, when it will be shipped to the distributors.

The apparatus fits on the side of the camera and is expected to prove valuable in testing location and exterior settings, which previously have taken an entire day, as it has been necessary to expose the film and then bring it to the studio to be developed.

CUTTING VIDOR PRODUCTION

There'll be no Christmas vacation at the Vidor Studio. In company with Cathrine Curtis, King Vidor will spend the holidays supervising the cutting of "The Sky Pilot," so that this film can be shipped to First National officials in the East shortly after the new year commences.

Miss Curtis is already laying plans for her second independent production, and will be able to make a definite announcement within a few days.

Charlotte Merriam, Special Pictures star, was given a Japanese poodle for Christmas. She is worrying for fear the Jap exclusion act will pass, and she'll have to part with her pet.

AT GOLDWYN

Leroy Scott has finished "The Night Rose," his first story written directly for the screen. Mr. Scott has been at the studio several weeks. Arthur F. Statter collaborated with the author on the continuity. Wallace Worsley, who directed "The Penalty," will hold the megaphone, and Leatrice Joy will play the leading feminine role in the picturization.

Frank Lloyd will direct "The Alibi," an original screen story by Charles Kenyon. Mr. Lloyd has just finished "A Tale of Two Worlds" (formerly "The Water Lily"), an original photoplay by Gouverneur Morris.

Ten pounds heavier, Mabel Normand has returned to the Goldwyn studios after a three-months' vacation in the East, and will soon start to work on another picture.

Reginald Barker and his company of players returned to the Culver City studio from Banff, Canada, where they have been making scenes for "Snow Blindness," just in time to celebrate Christmas. They will leave almost immediately for Yosemite Valley.

Will Rogers will appear in a screen version of O. Henry's "Whisting Dick's Christmas Stocking."

Director Victor Schertzinger is cutting and assembling the negative for "Mr. Barnes of New York," Tom Moore's latest starring vehicle.

"The Bridal Path," from the stage play by Thompson Buchanan, will be done in film form soon. Richard Dix, who has just finished in "Dangerous Curve Ahead," will play the leading male role. Marcia Manon has also been engaged for an important part.

The twelfth of the Booth Tarkington Edgar comedies featuring Johnny Jones has been finished under the direction of Paul Bern. It is tentatively called "Ole, the Hand."

Mason N. Litson, who has been enjoying a month's vacation, will return to work shortly after the New Year.

Gertrude Atherton's first original screen story, known under the working title of "Noblesse Oblige," will be released as "Don't Neglect Your Wife."

AT UNIVERSAL

Norman Dawn is filming "Hidden Fires," the photodrama in which Edith Roberts will next be seen.

The filming of "Colorado," Frank Mayo's forthcoming production, is nearing completion. The feature is being directed by Reeves Eason from the stage play of the same name by Augustus Thomas.

"If Only Jim," in which Harry Carey is being directed by Jacques Jaccard, has been completed.

Word comes from Monterey, where Erich Von Stroheim is filming "Foolish Wives," that the company will return to Universal City within a week to begin producing the concluding scenes.

Four Universal directors are preparing forthcoming productions which they will begin as soon as four directors now concluding pictures are finished. Tod Browning is making ready to begin work on "Fanny Herself," with an all star cast; Edward Kull will soon begin on "Renunciation," featuring Eileen Sedgwick; Robert Thornby is ready to start shooting on "Blood Brother to the Pines," with Frank Mayo; William Worthington is at work on "Three at the Table," starring Edith Roberts, while Harry B. Harris will begin work next week on "The Bobbed Squab," with Gladys Walton.

Another two reel western was started on its way to the screen this week when Edward Laemmle began directing "Under Blazing Skies," a starring vehicle for Jack Perrin.

Professional Notes

Chuck Reisner is at work on a comedy entitled "The Baby Bandit." Ena Gregory and Cliff Bowers are featured. Vin Moore has just finished "Ghosts," featuring Dotty Wolbert.

Word comes from New York of the arrival in this country of Arthur Clavering, managing director of the Film Booking Office, of London, the leading motion picture exchange in the United Kingdom. This company handles all the Universal productions for England and Ireland. Before he returns to England he will probably come to California and see how pictures are made at Universal City, according to a statement made by Irving C. Thalbert, Carl Laemmle's personal representative.

E. P. Heath has just finished an adaptation of "Blood Brother to the Pines," a tale of the north woods by J. G. Hawks.

BREWSTER-KEMBLE PRODUCTIONS TO START

John Kemble, director-general of the Brewster-Kemble Productions, announces that active work will begin January 3rd at the Special Pictures Corporation studio, 7100 Santa Monica boulevard, upon the arrival from New York of Thomas R. Mills, who has been engaged to direct a series of feature comedies.

Mr. Mills was the first director of the O. Henry series for Vitagraph, and has directed Earle Williams, Gladys Leslie, Corinne Griffith, Alice Joyce and all-star productions for Selznick.

Thomas Regan will assist Mr. Mills and later co-direct comedy features.

HAYAKAWA PICTURE NEARLY FINISHED

Sessue Hayakawa expects to complete his latest feature and have it ready for the cutting room in a few days. Colin Campbell, who is directing, has had his company on location for the last few days, but with weather permitting, will shoot the last few feet this week.

AT LASKY'S

Fresh from his European journey, Roscoe Arbuckle returns this week to Hollywood, prepared to start work about the 17th of January, under the direction of James Cruze on "Three Miles Out," by Frank Condon.

Cecil B. de Mille has made rapid progress thus far with "Five Kisses," his production based upon "The Affairs of Anatol," by Arthur Schnitzler.

William de Mille is now engaged upon preparations for his forthcoming production, the title and nature of which are as yet veiled in mystery, although an announcement is expected very soon. Mr. de Mille will in the future devote his attention to original stories by authors as opposed to adaptations.

Although Dorothy Dalton will not arrive in Los Angeles much before the 5th of January, George Milford, who is to produce the picture in which she is to star, will begin a few days earlier on scenes in which she will not appear. The picture is, as previously announced, Sir Gilbert Parker's novel, "The Money Master," for which Sir Gilbert and Mr. Melford are writing the scenario.

Dependent somewhat upon Gloria Swanson's completion of her work in Cecil de Mille's production, it is tentatively planned to start production of Elinor Glyn's "The Great Moment," about February 1st. Sam Wood is to be the director, and Monte M. Katterjohn is writing the scenario. The same obtains in the case of Wallace Reid, who, upon finishing work for Mr. de Mille, will start under the direction of Frank Urson, in "Watch My Smoke," by Byron Morgan.

Thomas Meighan will begin approximately January 10th on "White and Unmarried," which is now running serially in Munsey's magazine.

Ethel Clayton reaches Los Angeles about January 1st.

Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, left this week for his annual business trip to the New York offices and studios, and will reach there just in time for the beginning of a very active season in the Long Island plant of the company.

Owing to the greatly increased work of the publicity department, under the direction of Adam Hull Shirk, larger quarters are being arranged, which will facilitate the amount of detail and filing that is necessary as a result of the largely augmented production schedule. The offices will be segregated into separate divisions, so that each member of the department will be able to work independently, while there will be a general room for the reception of guests, interviews, and so on.

OLIVER MOROSCO BACKS "ALL STAR" CAST

In these days of "all star" casts Oliver Morosco, who is entering the film industry, believes that the solution of the "better pictures" problem will be in ideal casts rather than all-star make-ups.

"I have some very definite ideas regarding this," said Morosco today. "Ofttimes we are over-influenced in casting by the weight of names. I want to see a picture made with the 'ideal cast' idea regardless of whether the make-up is all-star or half unknown.

"For instance, we may find the perfect type for a certain part. I believe in carrying that idea out through the entire cast. In other words, just as much care should be taken in the casting as in the direction of a picture.

"Of course we know that 'finds' are not common occurrences in pictures. There must be certain development of the technique of appearing before the camera. But the 'ideal cast' will do much to develop talent and at the same time make better pictures."

ART TITLE PROGRESS

That Frank F. Greene, of art title fame, appreciates the difficulties of the cameraman in shooting titles, is evinced in the following to Camera:

"The general public knows not the many obstacles that beset the path of the cameraman—the great care and patience necessary to achieve satisfactory results—the many discouraging title propositions appearing in the guise of art with their attendant faults of weak lights and poor blacks tending to absorb the whole in a middletone of despair.

"I find that with first class copy the cameraman can be depended upon for beautiful work. The only point I might mention is covered in this warning: Don't cut into the margin field any more than is necessary (unless the artist has made definite allowance for so doing). The artistic balance and composition of areas, trends, lines and tones may easily be wrecked by too close framing."

Elsie Ferguson, in William D. Taylor's production of Arnold Bennett's "Sacred and Profane Love," has reached an important stage of the picture, which was adapted from the stage play by Julia Crawford Ivers. Fully one-half of one of the largest of the Lasky stages has been devoted to the erection of a stage and part of the auditorium of an immense concert hall, and hundreds of extras have been employed to make up the audience.

Says:

Have you made your 1921 resolutions yet?

Here's one for the girl who knows she can act, who is confident of the future, who has faith in herself and her profession and the rewards it holds:

"I am going to get publicity in every city of importance in the United States."

Seena Owen made that resolution six months ago. We talked it over. She said she'd take a chance with me. Since that time I've had 1,000 stories and a lot of pictures printed in over the country—from Los Angeles to New York, from Minneapolis to New Orleans.

Today she wired me from New York, where she has the leading role in "The Woman God Forgot," Robert Vignola's all-star picture, saying, "I am playing The Woman, the biggest part I ever had."

I'm going to tell you about Colleen Moore, Grace Morse and Lynne Lewis, too.

Persistent publicity pays. I'll be mighty glad to talk it over with you.

The cost is reasonable.

"Supervised By——"

It has long been the custom of several of our foremost producers to label pictures made by other directors in their organizations "supervised by" themselves. The practice has presumably been of advantage to them in disposing of program pictures which have naturally been considered more valuable by showmen when advertised under the signatures of recognized artists.

In recent weeks, however, we have received various complaints from the "smaller city" exhibitors to the effect that they are considering such productions in a very unfavorable light. This is resultant of the unrelieved mediocrity of so many of them, despite the reputations of their famous supervisors. And it is only too true! Producers who would never permit the release of one of their personally made photoplays were they not better than standard, continue cheerfully to tack their names on to weak, silly affairs made by men in their employ.

If there be those who imagine that their names alone will carry an unsatisfactory picture, they have reckoned without the educated exhibitor of 1921. He knows what he wants and recognizes it upon meeting. Furthermore, he has become rather hard-boiled from having been much deceived. Consequently the big producer by this procedure is only discounting his own work in the eyes of the booker, which is admittedly poor business. It would be far more advisable for him to entirely omit his signature on only fair productions filmed at his studio. Without it they will clear as much, eventually, and the chief at least has not committed himself.

The above, of course, refers only to the picture man who has passed in this way upon pronouncedly inferior work. Unfortunately he seems to be in the majority largely because it is almost impossible for even a genius to indulge in much genuine supervising when he has upon his hands an all-absorbing special for early publication.

There are instances, however, where such is considered to have been accomplished satisfactorily for all. Successful handling of any experiment deserves commendation, although it is interesting to note that this was one of the tryouts that apparently failed in the estimation of the greatest experimenter in the profession, the man who both originated and abandoned it.

How They See Pictures in Sovietland

The following has been translated from the Russian for us by Mr. Ali Kara, who is in Los Angeles from Paris, representing several large French film publications. We have heard much of the attitudes of various European fan publics, but as yet little has been revealed of the Bolshevik picture enthusiasts, which lends interest to this rather heavy humor and constant reference to their now established institutions.

Maybe there is nothing to eat in Moscow, but all theatres and movies open their doors hospitably every evening and large crowds of hungry, gloomy, bored by their hopeless life "comrades" fill them long before the beginning of the performance.

Like a drove of horses they stamp their poorly shod feet, unable to wait patiently the enchanting moment when it will be possible to forget for a while their tedious life and to dive headlong into the imaginary world of phantasy, beauty and alluring fictions.

Then the lights are out at last. A poor, old, worn-out picture begins to flicker on a soiled screen. A voice, of a literate one, reads aloud the titles, stuttering on each too long word. The titles are badly translated from the French, and are not easy to understand.

"The Mys-mys-mystery of the Count Pour-Poursognac!" Several listeners make remarks:

"That's a French picture! Poursognac! It sounds like 'cognac'!"

"Shut up!"

"The count lost his wife soon after their wedding."

"Waal!" says a voice from the darkness sympathetically, "why did she die so soon?"

Another, also invisible, answers assuredly:

"Why? Plenty of reasons nowadays."

"Hush!" protest the others.

"The count had an only daughter, whom the grief-stricken father, after the mother's death, sent to the convent to study."

"Eh?" wonders some one. "The father is also dead! Bad luck for the family!"

"Where did you see he's dead?"

"It said 'stricken.'"

"Dünce that you are! Grief-stricken—it is not to death! But I wonder why he sent his daughter to the convent. What can they study in a convent?"

"Oh, that's simple: You see, the convent was requisitioned, the nuns driven away, and, instead of them, school. Nothing to wonder about!"

"What's there? 'The daughter is grown up in and her father goes to take her out!'"

"That's a cinch! The count, comrades, proves to be a commissary!"

"Aw, get away! Where you see it?"

"Where? Isn't he driving a motor car?"

"That's true!"

"Never mind! Look here: 'In the forest the count meets Henrietta, the wood-cutter's daughter.'"

"Some forest!" exclaims a voice ecstatically; "look at them trees!"

"Watch him! He's going to strangle her!"

"You bonehead! He's hugging her—not strangling!"

"Dear, dear! Hugging! Ah, imperialist, damn him! Drove the girl to tears!"

Jimmy Aubrey is on an automobile trip to San Francisco and California points north while Director Jess Robbins is preparing his next comedy script.

GOLDWYN FINISHES SEVEN PRODUCTIONS AND STARTS ON SIX MORE

Goldwyn directors are now putting the finishing touches on seven productions, while six other pictures are either in production or about to get under way. Five of these will be Eminent Author productions, filmed with the aid and co-operation of the author.

The pictures which are now being finished are Reginald Barker's production of Katharin Newlin Burt's "Snow Blind;" Frank Lloyd's production of "A Tale of Two Worlds," an original photoplay by Gouverneur Morris; "Don't Neglect Your Wife," an original photoplay by Gertrude Atherton, directed by Wallace Worsley; "Boys Will Be Boys," an Irvin S. Cobb story starring Will Rogers, directed by Clarence Badger; "Mr. Barnes of New York," from the novel and play of the same name by Archibald Claverling Gunter, starring Tom Moore and directed by Victor Schertzinger; "Dangerous Curve Ahead," an original screen story by Rupert Hughes, with Helene Chadwick in the featured role, directed by E. Mason Hopper; and the twelfth of the Booth Tarkington Edgar comedies featuring twelve-year-old Johnny Jones, directed by Paul Bern.

The six productions now getting under way are Reginald Barker's production of "The Old Nest," from Rupert Hughes' novel of the same name, for which the author is now writing the continuity. Will Rogers is in the midst of "An Unwilling Hero," a screen version of O. Henry's "Whistling Dick's Christmas Stocking," with Clarence Badger again holding the megaphone.

Lon Chaney has been engaged for "The Night Rose," an original photoplay by Leroy Scott. Wallace Worsley will direct.

Frank Lloyd's next production will be "The Alibi," an original screen story by Charles Kenyon, author of the stage play, "Kindling."

"The Bridal Path," from the stage play by Thompson Buchanan, will be put into film form under the direction of E. Mason Hopper.

Correan Kirkman is playing in the present William Fox production being made by "Big Bill" Russell, directed by James P. Hogan.

"PRISONERS OF LOVE"

Betty Compson's initial starring vehicle, "Prisoners of Love," probably marks the debut of the much discussed modern woman's photoplay. In any event, it is a true and absolutely consistent drama of 1920 life among the upper classes. The story is unusually interesting, while the chief characteristic of the entire production is ease. The continuity and action move naturally through the various tense sequences that might easily have been butchered without excellent direction. Arthur Rosson is to be congratulated. Much of the attraction of the piece also lies in the cleverly written philosophy of the sub-titles, which is at no time let down.

The little star, formerly a comedienne, surprises us even more than we hoped to be surprised with her performance. She, in fact, impresses us with the fact that at this moment she is by far the biggest bet among our younger actresses. Hers is a charm that means much more than mere beauty, and her poise and grace are superb. Moreover, her dramatic ability may not be questioned after her interpretation of Blanche Davis, the independent, intelligent, fair-minded daughter of a man to whom such characteristics are odious in the feminine. This part of Miss Compson's is bound to prove one of the foremost young woman characters yet filmed.

Ralph Lewis, as her father, has the most interesting role in which we have seen him, and his work is excellent. It is impossible to imagine anyone else in the part with such satisfactory results. His character is that of the typical wealthy father, whose scruples end when he has won respect from the world. Knowing men, he classifies them pretty much together, reserving only the right to distinguish between and censure women.

Emory Johnson, in common with the rest of the cast, is unusually convincing as Jimmie Randolph, the average young man who is blessed(?) with a handsome face, ambition, education and fascination. The fact that it is natural for women to love his type and his background provide the inevitable action. Johnson's work as the youngster who can't help doing what he desires to do is more than interesting.

Roy Stewart plays Martin Blair, the twentieth century man who "has learned a bit." His character is probably the real point of the story. Needless to say he handles it subtly.

Clara Horton is really delightful as the spoiled, empty-headed little flapper who wins the progressive Jimmie with the aid of her father's millions from the woman who has sacrificed for him. She is constantly "on her toes" and takes free advantage of her footage.

Kate Toncray as Jimmie's mother, the pampered, aristocratic, jealous invalid, adds another excellently rendered type to the cast.

In extreme contrast we find Claire MacDowell as Mrs. Davis, the submissive wife and mother of a stronger-willed family than herself.

Even to the "bits" the actors are well placed.

The picture which is showing at the California Theatre is a Goldwyn release.

Lynne Lewis recently received an offer from an English producing company.

H. J. Reynolds, president of the Renco Film Co., who recently completed "Lavender and Old Lace," will visit 27 of the principal cities of the United States directing in person the work of exploiting the picture.

C. B. Price of Price Films, Inc., had a special trade showing of his latest state right offering, "Your Daughter—and Mine," in Chicago during his recent visit to that city. The picture was exhibited not only for the Chicago exchange managers, but also other state right buyers in the centers surrounding the Windy City.

Current Reviews

"PASSION FRUIT"

Doraldina's first Metro-Screen Classic, "Passion Fruit," is released this week at Tally's Broadway. With the presentation of the Carey Wilson story, appears the famous artist herself in one of her latest and most interesting dance creations, "The Young Amazon." Needless to say the theatre is packing them in, and it is doubtless largely because of this personal appearance.

The production itself is a great handicap to the cast, which for the most part is very good. The continuity is unfortunate in its repetition and the sub-titles are unsatisfactory in that they both pre-digest the action and are oftentimes unnecessary.

The star is well cast in Regina Dominant, daughter of a wealthy plantation owner in Hawaii. She introduces a quietness and composure in her characterization which promise a new personality for the screen. One of the striking notes in her work is, quite naturally, her dancing. Moreover, it is perfectly timed for the camera, which is an unusual accomplishment. We offer the suggestion that the story is not big enough for Doraldina.

Edward Earle makes a good opposite for her, but since his interest is purely romantic, that element might have been played up stronger to advantage. There is a definite place for Mr. Earle in pictures.

Stuart Holmes handles the heavy, Rance, excellently. For the interpretation of polished villains he has few peers.

Florence Turner also does some good work as Nuana, the little half-caste servant.

The characterization of the Ancient One lends a bit of interesting island folk lore to the whole.

John E. Incé directed the production.

"DINTY"

Marshall Neilan's latest First National release, "Dinty," is showing at the Kinema this week. The production is of the same type as "Go and Get It," but its punches fail to hit as did those of the former picture. Moreover, in this particular instance a mixture of slapstick and drama results only in two confused stories that fail to blend. A huge cast doing little more than "bits" does not add to the production's value.

Wesley Barry, the featured player, does "Dinty" O'Sullivan, a newsy of obvious nationality. Some of his work is very good, and he will be sure to please the kiddies.

Colleen Moore is really excellent as Dinty's invalid mother. The remarkable-ness of her interpretation is that it proves her ability along character lines.

J. Barney Sherry is cast as Judge Whitely. Throughout his work, for some unaccountable reason, there runs a note of insincerity that renders the part unconvincing.

Noah Beery has to his credit another grotesque heavy in his characterization of "King" Dorkh of Chinatown. He creates an impressive personality for the Oriental role with which he will thrill the picture's audiences.

Pat O'Malley has the small part of Jack North, assistant district attorney, and Marjorie Daw does Ruth Whitely, the judge's daughter. They control the weak romance.

Tom Wilson plays Barry Flynn and Kate Price is Mrs. O'Toole.

Newton Hall does a very clever bit on his own hook as "the tough one" and creates much amusement. His music score assists him somewhat.

The little coon and the Chinaman who form Dinty's body guard show possibilities.

Tom Gallery and Young Hipp complete the cast.

"FLYING PAT"

Grauman's Million Dollar Theatre is playing Dorothy Gish's newest release, "Flying Pat." The interesting fact that Dorothy has recently married Mr. James Rennie, her leading man in this production, will naturally attract, but it will scarcely succeed in strengthening the absolutely empty story. The photography is not very good and the situations are unspeakably old.

The star's always fascinating little mannerisms are lost in a chaos of slap-stick, unfortunately, as Mrs. Patricia Van Nuys, who would have a career.

Mr. Rennie is also handicapped, doubtless by his rôle. Jealous young husbands in farce are hardly different nowadays, and Mr. Van Nuys is less different yet.

Morgan Wallace does William Endicott, the dare-devil aviator.

Kate Bruce has a good bit as the "sweet old lady" shark.

Porter Strong is rather funny as the reporter.

Harold Vizard, William Black, Tom Blake and Mrs. Waters complete the list of players.

CHAPLIN DELIVERS PRINT OF "THE KID"

On New Year's Eve Charlie Chaplin personally delivered the completed print of his five-reel motion picture production of "The Kid" to Sol Lesser, Western representative for Associated First National Pictures, Inc.

"The Kid" is the result of Chaplin's undivided work for a period of two years. It is said to be utterly unlike anything he has ever done before.

VIRGINIA NORDEN RETURNS

After five months in the East, Virginia Norden, Louis B. Mayer's personal representative, has returned to the Mayer studios in Los Angeles, bringing with her a finished print of the producer's special feature, "The Woman in His House," which John M. Stahl directed. While en route west, Miss Norden stopped off at many of the large cities and gave preview exhibitions of the production. Arrangements are now under way to give the picture a premiere in Los Angeles, after which Miss Norden expects to introduce it in film circles in San Francisco.

Helene Chadwick is playing opposite Tom Moore in "Made in Heaven."

Boris Karloff is in the Yosemite valley doing the exteriors of "The Cave Girl," with Jesse D. Hampton.

Florence Turner has been borrowed by Universal from Metro, where she is under contract, to play an important role in "The Bobbed Squab."

Charles W. Herzinger is playing the sheriff in "Trigger Trail," with Jack Perrin. It is a two-reel feature under the direction of Ed. Laemmle.

Iris Ashton has been cast for the second lead with Shirley Mason in "The Lamp-lighter" at Fox under Howard Mitchell's direction.

The cast of "Whistling Dick," an O. Henry story being made by Goldwyn with Will Rogers as the star, was completed last week with the addition of Ed. Kimball, father of Clara Kimball Young.

Dorothy Farnum, who has a contract with Joseph M. Schenck to write continuity for Constance Talmadge, has been loaned by Mr. Schenck to Whitman Bennett, in order to write the continuity of "Jim, the Penman," for Lionel Barrymore.

Julian Josephson has been added to the staff of J. G. Hawks, Goldwyn managing editor, according to announcement by President Samuel Goldwyn. Mr. Josephson will specialize in adapting stories for Will Rogers and Tom Moore.

STAHL RETURNS

After a three months' visit to New York, Director John M. Stahl has returned to Los Angeles to resume production activities under the Louis B. Mayer banner. Mr. Stahl's pictures will hereafter be known as John M. Stahl Productions. They will be all-star cast stories.

BURNS SIGNS WITH UNIVERSAL

Harry Burns, who has long been associated with W. S. Campbell in the direction of C. L. Chester comedies, has signed with Universal to direct Joe Martin in a two-reel comedy entitled, "A Monkey Fireman." Mr. Burns personally handled the last four "Snooky" pictures.

Scott McKee is playing the part of "The Artful Dodger" in "Oliver Twist," under the direction of Millard Webb at the Fox studio.

Bob Horner of the Beau Arts Film Co. is now cutting his two-reel western, entitled "The Scorpion's Sting."

Bobbie Mack has finished the part of Eddie, the Yegg, in "Three Sevens," with Antonio Moreno at Vitagraph.

Chuck Reisner is producing a comedy under the title of "Mamma's Boy." The featured players are Cliff Bowers and Ena Gregory.

Director and Mrs. Louis Chaudet are back from an extended trip to New York. Several interesting contracts returned with them.

Harold Goodwin, the new star at the William Fox studios, will soon begin work on his first picture under the direction of Millard Webb.

Miss Louise Lovely and company, directed by George William Hill, are shooting location scenes at Venice this week, for their present picture, "While the Devil Laughs," a William Fox production.

Hal Ferner has just signed with Metro to play in Alice Lake's current production, "Uncharted Seas," under the direction of Wesley Ruggles.

Josephine Crowell says that she has been cast for so long in female villain roles that she is glad to tell "Camera!" that she is once more playing a sweet character, "Ma Deep," in Viola Dana's next release.

"Sunset Jones" is the newest "Special" in the American Film Company's Chicago Laboratories. It includes in its cast Charles Clary, Irene Rich and Kathleen O'Connor. George L. Cox directed the production.

"Blind Wives," a special film version of Edward Knoblock's play, "My Lady's Dress," will be the feature attraction at the California Theatre the week starting Sunday, January 9. It is a William Fox production.

Lawrence Underwood, director of the Hermann Film Corp., of Santa Monica, has been loaned by E. P. Hermann to Realwest Pictures to direct a series of westerns. It is the policy of this company to make western pictures of a type dealing with the West as it is today. The first story which was written by Burt Wilson is already under production at the Hermann studio.

John Meighan, assistant director to Jules Furthman, is playing a crook part in "The Blushing Bride," starring Eileen Percy. John says he believes no one can play crooks better than assistant directors. And John should know, for he grew up in the "profession"—that is, motion pictures. He was one of the first to come west with William Fox.

FORMER FISHER MODEL BACK IN PICTURES

Marjorie Manning, who has been absent from the screen for nearly a year, is about to return. Miss Manning, a former Follies beauty, was just getting established in pictures when she was taken ill with "flu" and pneumonia. Since that time she has lived on Mt. Lowe and has regained her health. She acted as model for some of Harrison Fisher's most popular pictures.

LUNCHEON FOR NELL SHIPMAN

Nell Shipman was the guest of honor yesterday at a luncheon tendered her and her company by Louis B. Mayer, at whose studio the Shipman unit has been engaged for the past few months in the production of a feature. Among those who echoed Mr. Mayer's toast to the star were: Bert Van Tuyle, the director; Joe Walker, Miriam Green, George Green, Virginia Norden, C. R. McCray, Florence Browning and J. H. McCarron.

WILD BOARS IN STEWART PICTURE

To secure some realistic scenes of wild boars romping in their native haunts, Edward Carewe, director, has dispatched his assistant, Wallace Fox, and two cameramen to Santa Rosa Island, lying off the coast of Southern California, that is said to be literally overrun by the animals. The scenes will be used as flashes in Anita Stewart's latest Louis B. Mayer-First National attraction, as the real boar hunt to be seen in the picture has already been filmed on the Lasky ranch.

William D. Taylor motored to Coronado on New Year's Day. He denies, however, that he visited Tijuana.

An article entitled "Too Much Sex Stuff in the Movies" by Ben Hampton appears in the January 15th Pictorial Review.

Wm. G. Badger and Iris Ashton were married New Year's Eve by the Rev. Mr. Richardson of the Christian Church.

Charlie Murray, in Mack Sennett's forthcoming comedy-drama, "Heartbalm," will appear on the screen for the first time in a sustained role of legitimate drama and without comedy trimmings.

Harry Brown, electrical chief at Universal City, has been elected president of the Electrical Illuminating Engineers' Society. The organization is composed exclusively of studio electrical men.

Special music composed by Bert Crosland, chief musician at the Goldwyn studios, for "Hold Your Horses," a Rupert Hughes story starring Tom Moore, will be used when the picture has its premiere at the Capitol Theatre in New York.

George Loane Tucker, producer of "The Miracle Man," is recovering from a very serious major operation which was performed about three months ago. For several weeks Mr. Tucker's life was despaired of. The operation which was performed privately followed several years' intermittent illness.

Claire DuBrey, who is playing an emotional role in support of Louise Glaum in her J. Parker Read, Jr., special feature, "The Attorney for the Defense," is spending the holidays in Fresno with her mother, Mrs. R. C. Fugitt. Miss DuBrey will make several personal appearances during her stay in the northern city.

AWAITING ARRIVAL OF A. H. WOOD

Al. H. Wood is expected soon in Los Angeles, where he will consult with Mack Sennett regarding the production on Broadway, New York, of the "Mack Sennett Revue," the book of which will be the work of Mr. Sennett and Otto Harbach, the music by Victor Herbert and the production by Wood, Arthur Hammerstein and Mack Sennett.

FRITZI BRUNETTE, playing Lorna in "A Soul of a Butterfly."

HAYAKAWA COMPLETES PICTURE

STROHEIM COMPANY CELEBRATES

The Von Stroheim Company of the Universal is still working at Point Lobos, near Monterey. If the fine weather continues, however, the work there will probably be completed this week.

The members of the company made up a purse and bought a Victrola and records as a Christmas present to Von Stroheim and his wife. He reciprocated by giving a banquet on Christmas evening to the company.

Albert Ray is the proud father of a first son, who was born the day before Christmas.

Samuel Goldwyn announces that he will film some costume plays in 1921.

Alice Terry has returned to Hollywood after an extended vacation spent in Northern California.

Three stories have been put in technical form by Ida May Park, which she will soon screen under her own banner.

Bill Hart has completed his last picture under Paramount contract, and it is rather expected that he will write for the screen.

Erich Von Ritzon is in the city for a day or two on business, but he will return for the rest of his work with Erich Von Stroheim in "Foolish Wives" at Monterey.

Enid Bennett has made her last picture for Thomas H. Ince and will now strike out on her own hook with her husband, Fred Niblo, as her director.

Tom Gallery, who was formerly a press agent but is now "Mr. ZaSu Pitts," has just finished an engagement with Marshall Neilan and has gone to Metro to play opposite Viola Dana.

Hobart Bosworth was recently married to Mrs. Cecile Percival, widow of the California artist. He almost fooled the reporters by securing a license under the name of "H. Van Zandt Bosworth."

Philip E. Rosen has returned from a seven-day duck hunting trip in Northern California. Mr. Rosen reports the ducks fairly plentiful, and the hunters much more so.

Bebe Daniels is still in Dallas, Texas, her birthplace, enjoying a vacation from her recent Realart activities. She is, however, to return shortly for work in a leading role of "Five Kisses," Cecil B. de Mille's special production.

Edward Lowe, Jr., of the Metro scenario staff, is back at his office at the company's West Coast studios after a two weeks' vacation spent in Chicago with his family. Mr. Lowe will start work immediately on the scenario for a new production.

Edward Connelly has just celebrated the seventh anniversary of his continuous association with the Metro company. Mr. Connelly, who played the feature role in "Masah Covington," Metro's first production, has been in practically every big picture made by that concern since.

An out of the ordinary Christmas present was received by Mildred Davis, Harold Lloyd's leading lady; it was an old Quaker tome from Philadelphia relatives, containing the rules of conduct of the Society of Friends in the seventeenth century. Miss Davis is herself of Quaker ancestry.

NEW YORK NEWS

J. J. Livingston

Commodore J. Stuart Blackton will sail on January 9th for England, there to take up his new production activities.

Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle, who has been visiting London and Paris, is now on the high seas bound for America.

Elisie Ferguson has left New York for the coast where she will appear in "Sacred and Profane Love," under the direction of William D. Taylor.

Pola Negri has been signed by the Export & Import Film Company and will appear in pictures made in this country. Miss Negri will leave Germany early in the new year.

Jacqueline Logan of the Ziegfeld Follies plays the leading feminine role opposite Monte Blue in Allan Dwan's "The Perfect Crime."

Jack O'Brien, who has played opposite Olive Tell, Marguerite Clark and several other stars, has now been engaged to play opposite Marion Davies in her forthcoming picture.

It is rumored that Lionel Barrymore on completion of his role in "Jim the Penman" will leave the screen for the legitimate stage.

Alice Brady has just completed at the Long Island studio "The Voice of the Blood," by Harry Chandlee and William B. Lamb.

William Farnum, who is now working on a picture at the Fox Eastern studio, was chosen "Collie" of the Christmas gambol of the Lambs.

Passengers of the steamship "Martha Washington" of the Munson Line are being entertained with motion pictures while crossing the ocean. This has been made possible by the use of a slow-burning film.

Donald Crisp has just finished the production of Edward Knoblock's story, "Appearances," at the Famous Players-Lasky Studios in London. David Powell and Mary Glynn played the leading roles.

Dr. George Galvin, author of the book entitled "A Thousand Faces," and Carl Morgan, director who will produce the picture for the Metropolitan Pictures Corporation of Boston, Mass., have about completed arrangements for the release of the picture.

Alpheus Lincoln, leading man in "Determination," played the role of Santa Claus on Christmas Eve at the studio and presented to each and every person in the organization a little Christmas gift.

Rena Parker, known for her work in "Betty Be Good," both in New York and on tour, has left that company to play a big part in the new William Fox serial, "Fantomas," this being Miss Parker's first appearance on the screen.

The Labor Film Company has started work on its feature production, "The Contrast." This is the first of the series which the company proposes to make.

Mabel Strauss has just finished the story in continuity.

Production activities in the East are at a complete standstill, and will be for the next few weeks, but the future never was brighter for the independent producers.

Miss Emily Fitzroy, who appeared in "Way Down East" under the direction of D. W. Griffith, has just completed the part of Mrs. Van Beckman with Alice Brady at the Famous Players studio in Long Island.

SCOTT MCKEE

TERRITORY SOLD FOR "HALLROOM" SERIES

The New Series of "Hallroom" Comedies has been bought by Bromberg Attractions, Atlanta, for Georgia, Florida, Alabama and Tennessee.

North and South Carolina have been bought by Premiere Pictures Corporation of Charlotte, N. C., announces C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation of New York.

LESSER IN NEW YORK

After a series of delays, Irving Lesser arrived in New York last week. Mr. Lesser made a coast to coast trip direct, stopping only in Chicago for change of trains.

Lesser is making his headquarters with Harry D. Wilson, representing Sol Lesser, who is now in New York with the George Beban tour project.

THINGS YOU WON'T READ ANYWHERE ELSE

By Frank P. Donovan

Lew Brice, the stage star, is going into pictures in New York.

The Dooleys, Gordon and Bill, have made two comedies for Reelcraft pictures.

The New York "Star" is running a series of articles on the foreign picture quest.

Edward Peil of the West Coast is playing a Chinese heavy for D. W. Griffith now, at the Griffith studio at Mamaroneck, N. Y.

Dorothy Gish's company is idle for lack of studio space. Victor Heerman will direct her next picture.

Fred Chaston is photographing the new D. W. Griffith special with Billy Bitzer as chief of staff.

Famous Players, Goldwyn, Selznick, Vitagraph, Metro, Pathe, etc., are going to cut out all production if things don't improve, and there is no sign of any improvement.

Lillian Gish has returned to D. W. Griffith since her independent company failed. We understand that Jerome Storm, her director, will go back to Charlie Ray.

Frank "Reelcraft" Mattison is the proud father of a nine-pound baby girl and informs present picture stars that a future Mary Pickford is in the making.

There is a flood of foreign-made pictures being unloaded on the New York market. We can't make pictures and sell them for $3,000 like the Germans are doing. Do something—agitate—protect the game.

Al Lichman and Arthur Friend, vice-president and treasurer respectively of Famous Players-Lasky, have resigned from that organization. Difference of opinion seems to be the reason. Adolph Zukor, the president, will follow suit shortly, it is said, to please Wall Street interests.

"Determination" will resume production after a temporary delay, in a few weeks, it is said.

This company has been a life saver for a score of players in New York, as it is the only real big picture now in production in the East.

Professional Notes

A new comedy unit has been established to produce one and two reelers. It is composed of Wm. Beaudine, director; Frank Conklin, author, and Scott Darling, scenario writer.

Art Acord has been re-engaged for another chaptered melodrama. The story is being written by Ford Beebe and will be produced by Albert Russell.

Harry Burns has been engaged to direct a series of animal comedies featuring Joe Martin, the orang-outang. He will be assisted by C. A. Stecker, who has had charge of Joe's education since the simian actor was six months old.

Jack Ford, who formerly directed Frank Mayo and Harry Carey at Universal City, but who has been at the Fox studios for a year, returns to the Big "U" to direct his old star, Carey, in "Everybody for Himself."

AT LASKY'S

George Melford started the ball rolling this week with his first shots for "The Money Master," by Sir Gilbert Parker, the scenario being an adaptation by the author and Mr. Melford. A number of very important opening scenes will be made pending the arrival of Dorothy Dalton, who will play the role of Carmen Dolores.

William de Mille, it is announced, will start work about January 15th on a new production from an original story by the dramatist, Edward Knoblock. Full details are expected in the near future.

William D. Taylor still has about two weeks more work on his production for Paramount starring Elsie Ferguson, adapted by Julia Crawford Ivers, from Arnold Bennett's "Sacred and Profane Love."

Cecil B. deMille is making rapid progress with "Five Kisses," adapted from "The Affairs of Anatol."

Wallace Reid is scheduled to begin February 7th under the direction of Frank Urson in Byron Morgan's story, "Watch My Smoke."

Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle, after his jaunt abroad, plans to start January 17th on Frank Condon's story "Three Miles Out," scenarized by Walter Woods, and directed by James Cruze.

Ethel Clayton has started work under Thomas Heffron's direction on "Sham," adapted from the play by Elmer Harris and Geraldine Bonner. Douglas Doty is the scenario writer.

February 17th has been set for the starting date of Elinor Glyn's "The Great Moment," scenario by Monte Katterjohn, which will serve as a starring vehicle for Gloria Swanson under the direction of Sam Wood.

On January 15th Thomas Meighan begins his next star picture entitled "White and Unmarried," with Tom Forman as the director. No further details of cast, etc., have been announced as yet.

"Love Special" has been selected as the title for Wallace Reid's recently completed picture directed by Frank Urson and adapted by Eugene Lewis from Frank Spearman's story "The Daughter of a Magnate."

AT METRO

Viola Dana has gone back to the farm. For the next month, she will spend most of her time at the old Magnolia farm near Whittier, where a great part of "Home Stuff," her new starring picture, will be filmed. It is an original story by Frank Dazey and Agnes Johnston, and is being directed by Albert Kelley.

Gareth Hughes has just returned to the company's West Coast studios, where he will participate in several forthcoming special productions. Mr. Hughes was loaned to Famous Players to play the leading role in their screen version of "Sentimental Tommy," which has just been completed in the New York studio. The name of the first picture in which Mr. Hughes will be featured by Metro has not yet been announced by Bayard Veiller.

EDUCATIONAL OPENS NEW BRANCHES

Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., has found it necessary to open two additional offices which were not called for in its original plan for twenty-seven branches in the principal cities of the United States and at the six focal points in Canada.

One of these offices will be at Albany, N. Y., and it will take over all the territory north of the greater city except that operated from the Buffalo exchange.

Manager E. J. Drucker of the Denver territory is also opening a branch in Salt Lake City early in January. He has already placed the first run bookings for all of the pictures in this territory, including a complete booking with the American theatre. The separate office will afford better shipping facilities and enable more continuous use of the same prints.

With the opening of the two branches Educational will take third rank in number of exchanges in the United States and Canada among all releasing organizations.

ROBERTSON-COLE TAKES BEBAN PICTURE

Announcement comes from New York to the effect that the firm of Robertson and Cole have taken over world distribution for George 'Beban's "One Man in a Million."

The deal was closed with Mr. Cole acting for his firm and Irving M. Lesser, who made a special trip to New York in behalf of his brother, Sol L. Lesser, who was interested in the Beban picture. Incidentally the consummation of this contract will mark the final production activities of Sol Lesser.

Hereafter, producing enterprises will be handled and managed exclusively by Irving Lesser, with Sol Lesser confining all of his efforts to the exhibiting field.

The Beban picture opens in Newark, N. J., immediately.

AT THE CHRISTIE STUDIO

Al Christie's next special comedy will be called by the enlightening title, "Man vs. Woman," and it is to be billed as a Christie comedy in two rounds instead of two reels.

The leading roles are to be played by Neal Burns and Dorothy Devore.

A similar program to that of last year will be carried out, in that Christie and Scott Sidney will both direct features as well as comedies.

Cameraman at Liberty

"The picture is French. Damn blabbers, them Frenchmen!"

"Aw, stop it! Look, he's taking a gun!"

"Well, good-night the count! He will pinch him! Back to the wall—"

"Go on! Where can you find a wall in the forest?"

"Mebbe a small one!"

"Just so! They will build a wall for you."

"I don't need it."

"And if you don't, why talk about things you cannot understand?"

"You don't know French customs. They, in the first place, invite you: 'Would you like, Mossier, to fight a duel with me?' And the other to him: 'Merci, Mossier, although I am a poor shot, but to oblige you!' And they begin to shoot each other—politely! And you with your wall! Poor fish!"

"Nay, brother, there is another stuff! Listen: 'Being lost in the forest, a wolf assails the count, but the wood-cutter kills HIM—the former warmly thanks the latter.'"

"My, my! Who is the latter—count, wolf or wood-cutter?"

"How do I know?"

"Say, comrades, are the wolves eatable?"

"Why not? The same as a dog, even larger!"

"Then why did they go away, even did not glance at him? Hey, comrades, there is some food, hey!"

"Shut up! Why are you hollering? Can they hear you?"

"Yell in French, brother! Mebbe they will understand!"

"That's a shame anyhow! Such a large piece of fresh meat!"

"Part Two: In a few days the unsuspecting father goes to the city for some shopping."

"Did you see it? He buys dry goods! Just buys them and that's all, without waiting in line!"

"Without an order from the Soviets!"

"Ah, such a silly picture!"

"French people—what can they know?"

"Mebbe he requisitions it!"

"A wood-cutter! How can he?"

"Why? A wood-cutter can not be a COMMISSARY!"

"I dunno."

"Drop it! Here is something great! Listen: 'Henrietta's godfather, the farmer, was quietly drinking his wine.'"

"Drinking? What, damn them all, are they drinking?"

"It makes me sick!"

"Wonder where this old codger got the wine."

"Home-brew, I calc'late!"

"Nix! You're blind! Reg'lar red wine!"

"Oh, how he's sipping!"

Heavy sighs are heard in the audience. A voice suggests:

"Nothing else, that he requisitioned it."

"A farmer?"

"Sure! He's also a COMMISSARY!"

"Aw, plague upon them! The count, commissary, and the wood-cutter, commissary, and the farmer, commissary! Here one can step without elbowing a commissary, and in the picture the same. I can not stand it, comrades. Let's go!"

In the street:

"Say, comrades, did you see the picture? A good one!"

"Why? Not very! Don't you see, there is a count, a commissary, who drove the nuns from the convent and shoved his own daughter there; then he requisitioned a motor car and began to spin around a girl, the wood-cutter's daughter; but her father, he couldn't stand it; he shot an eatable wolf and requisitioned plenty of dry goods. . . Well, that's about all we saw. Nothing partic'lar!"

Richard "Itchie" Headrick has signed with John Stahl to play in that director's next production for Louis B. Mayer.

Driving Power in Industry

Our hydro-electric companies find the demand for power for industrial purposes greater than their ability to supply it. New installations are required which necessitate an outlay of money.

To pay for this out of earnings would take many years. Public welfare would suffer by such delay.

The procedure is to mortgage present properties as security for a loan in form of a bond issue.

Investors who buy hydro-electric securities supply the driving power for our industries, become a factor in industrial prosperity, make possible created wealth—and get a good rental for their money.

Our role is in the distribution of these safe securities to investors like yourself. Thus we serve you and promote industrial prosperity. Let us give you interesting information about these investments.

Slashed Salaries and the Actors' Equity

Much discussion has lately arisen throughout the profession as a result of the producer's obvious intention to cut the actor's salary. That the matter has already been taken up by the general press, even though it has only received the dishwatery treatment that is apparently considered thoroughly diplomatic by our dailies, emphasizes the fact that interest in the affair is general; and it is also evident that recent important steps taken by various leading organizations of screen artists may be attributed directly to the rise of this problem.

According to statements from the heads of several of Los Angeles' big picture producing plants, it is only reasonable to presume that, along with the rather noticeable drop in prices which is being experienced as we appear to approach the normal in finance once more, the actor should be willing to accept a slight cut in his remuneration for toil. So far as we have been able to discover, that is exactly what he has contemplated without loss of sleep and, in fact, cheerfully. He has even mentioned a ten per cent reduction as not only fair but advisable in the face of the present readjustment. What he does not seem to appreciate, however, is the fact that this attitude of his has already been taken advantage of by some of the "higher ups" who are attempting a free-for-all salary slash for their personal saving. Indeed, one company has gone so far as to declare a forty per cent cut for all its people.

That the men, who after all have the most to do with the entertainment value of any motion picture company's output, are prepared to battle to the end that which they consider an imposition upon good nature is indicated clearly by the very significant fact that, having failed to procure right treatment for their members, the actors' organizations of the West Coast, headed by the Actors' Association of Los Angeles, have extended the Actors' Equity of New York, with its wide reputation for adjusting things for the actor in the east, an invitation to enter the film capital and repeat former successes here.

Moreover, it appears that such will be accomplished with dispatch, since at an unofficial overflow meeting of the Actors' Association Thursday evening, Mr. Shaw, head of the Equity's motion picture division, and his also unofficial proposition for the Association to amalgamate with his organization, were met with unanimous enthusiasm.

Then, since the resentment of the western picture actor against any foreign entrance of this kind has heretofore been marked, we wonder if the producers' recent course has not been a bit badly timed, a little more unpsychological, if you please, than they anticipated?

Further Concerning the "Blue Laws"

The following resolutions were unanimously adopted by the Photo Players' Equity Association at a regular meeting of that body held on January 6, 1921.

Whereas, An organization has been incorporated in the City of New York, known as the "Lord's Day Alliance," which has announced its intention of securing the adoption in every state of the Union of a statute prohibiting all secular activities upon the part of our citizens, including attendance at theatres and all other places of amusement, the publication or sale of newspapers, magazines or books, bathing at beaches, keeping open stores, delicatessen shops, fruit stands, bakeries, the delivery of lectures or addresses upon secular topics or subjects hostile to the church or religion, the playing of golf, croquet, baseball, horse-shoe, or any other game indulged in as a business or for pleasure; also the studying by school children of their lessons for the Monday classes, and any other occupation or amusement not intended for religious edification, propaganda and the advancement of the interests of the church, upon the day commonly known as Sunday, and denominated by some sects of Christians as the "Lord's day;"

And Whereas, The proposed legislation, if adopted, will elevate to a commanding position in our social, political and economic structure one certain class in our midst, namely, the ministers of religion and their coadjutors, at the expense of the liberties of the common people; will discriminate in favor of the rich and against the poor; and will result in an abrogation of the rights of the people and eliminate many of the dearly-bought principles of liberty as laid down by the Magna Charta, the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States of America;

And Whereas, It is reported that a bill aiming to carry out the prohibitions outlined above is about to be introduced in our state legislature at Sacramento;

And Whereas, Such legislation as mentioned herein, contrary to public opinion, has every prospect of becoming the law of the land in more or less modified form;

Now, Therefore, Be it resolved by the Photo Players' Equity Association that we denounce said proposed legislation as unjust, unconstitutional, tyrannical and dogmatic and subversive of our most valued liberties;

Resolved, That every member of this association and every other person in harmony with the views expressed by these resolutions be urged to give his personal services and to use his influence in every proper and lawful manner to prevent the enactment of this vicious legislation, and, if passed by our legislature, to have the constitutionality of the

JACKIE COOGAN RESUMES PRODUCTION

Through the courtesy of Famous Players-Lasky, Sam Wood has been engaged to supervise the direction of the picturization of "Peck's Bad Boy," which is once more under production after a delay due to little Jackie Coogan's accident. The cast has been re-assembled, and A. R. Hamm will assist in the direction.

PRODUCERS PICTURES COMPLETES ARRANGEMENTS FOR MEXICAN TRIP

E. W. Dustin, business manager for the Producers Pictures Corporation, now in Mexico City making preliminary arrangements for the filming of scenes for "The Unfoldment," wired his chief George Kern that arrangements had been practically completed. W. E. Keefe, manager of production, and the technical staff will leave for Mexico City during the coming week. Florence Lawrence, George H. Kern, Murdock MacQuarrie, with the balance of the players, will leave in about three weeks.

DRASCENA PRODUCTIONS ANNOUNCES ORGANIZATION

The Drascena Productions has been organized recently for the purpose of making independent feature productions and two-reel super-comedies. The officers consist of Charles M. Conant, President; Bert St. John (who formerly managed Clune's Auditorium and the California Theatre), Production Manager; Al Nathan (formerly Superba Theatre Manager, and recently Production Manager for the Hallroom Boys Comedies), Supervising Director; Mr. Hal Stephens, Casting Director.

One production has already been completed under the working title of "Get Out and Stay Out." This picture was directed by H. C. Matthews, who was formerly identified with Universal. Hal Stephens has in preparation sixteen 2-reel comedy features upon which work will be started immediately, featuring himself. These pictures will temporarily be made in Boyle Heights at the old Bernstein Studios. Contracts have been signed to start Milburn Morante in a series of single-reel comedies directed by Tom Gibson. These will be made at the Balboa Studios until the Drascena Studios will be completed in Hollywood, when they will all be housed under one roof.

AT METRO

May Allison and twenty members of her company have gone to Truckee to obtain snow scenes for "Big Game," the star's newest Metro starring picture, which Dallas Fitzgerald is directing. Miss Allison and her company will remain in the mountains for a week.

A new portable electric plant has been completed and put into service at the West Coast studios. This power plant was given its trial run at Whittier last week, when it was used to supply electricity for night scenes of "Home Stuff," Viola Dana's new starring vehicle. The plant consists of a 360 horse-power Liberty motor and two 50 kilowatt submarine type of generators. These are mounted on an especially built Mack truck. The plant will supply enough electricity to light a small city.

A few days ago, Co-Directors Buster Keaton and Eddie Cline "shot" final scenes for the sixth two-reeler, "Hard Luck." That same afternoon witnessed the start of comedy number seven, and by twilight ten scenes had been filmed.

MACDONALD PRODUCTION COMPLETED

The final close-up of Katherine MacDonald's latest production, "Stranger Than Fiction," will be shot this week, according to present plans of Director J. A. Barry.

This picture is Miss MacDonald's ninth for Associated First National release.

AT VITAGRAPH

William Duncan and Edith Johnson have progressed so far with their chapter play, "Fighting Fate," that they are assured of completing the production in another month. The serial star has posted a $500 reward in Los Angeles for the apprehension of the thieves who broke into his home and stole furs and jewelry during the holidays. His unit is now working under his direction on locations outside of Los Angeles, including Balboa and Chatsworth.

Larry Semon returned to the studio this week after being confined to his home for two weeks because of a wrenched back and threatened pneumonia from an accident and over-exposure in a water scene for "The Hick," his current special comedy.

Antonio Moreno and his director, Chester Bennett, are assisting in the editing of the feature they just completed, "Three Sevens," from the novel by Perley Poore Sheehan.

Joe Rickson, heavy man with the Joe Ryan western serial company, who broke a leg in a scene for "The Purple Riders," the current production, is recovering nicely and soon will be able to resume his work before the camera. The work was arranged so that his injury would not delay the picture. The company will go to San Francisco on his return from the hospital.

AT GOLDWYN

Reginald Barker finished the photography on "Snow Blind" last week, and will start soon on "The Old Nest," a story by Rupert Hughes. Mr. Hughes is now putting his story into scenario form.

Will Rogers, who is now working in "An Unwilling Hero," under the direction of Clarence Badger, will leave the studios about Jan. 15th for New Orleans to make exterior scenes for this O. Henry story.

The return of Tom Moore and his director, Victor Schertzinger, who are in New York making New York scenes in Moore's next starring vehicle, "Made in Heaven," is expected next week.

E. Mason Hopper, who directed Rupert Hughes' "Dangerous Curve Ahead," will start soon on "The Bridal Path," from the stage play by Thompson Buchanan. Richard Dix and Marcia Manon will have important roles in this production.

Katherine Newlin Burt, author of "Snow Blind" and "The Branding Iron," which were filmed by Goldwyn under the direction of Reginald Barker, is the first of the recent additions to the string of authors writing for Goldwyn, to arrive at the Culver City studio. Mrs. Burt is working on her first original story for the screen. Rita Weiman and Alice Duer Miller are expected at the studio soon. Miss Weiman is working on her first original screen story.

AT UNIVERSAL

Frank Mayo has started "Blood Brother to the Pines," his latest photodrama. Robert Thornby is directing. The story was written by J. C. Hawks, author of many of the William S. Hart pictures, and was adapted to the screen by E. P. Heath, the widely known scenario writer.

Edith Roberts is at work on "Three at the Table," her forthcoming vehicle. William Worthington is directing. The story is by Bennett Cohen and adapted by Wallace Clifton.

"False Colors," Priscilla Dean's forthcoming Universal feature, is in production under the direction of Stuart Paton.

Jack Ford is directing Harry Carey in "Everybody for Himself." The scenario was written by George C. Hull.

Current Reviews

"MIDSUMMER MADNESS"

The William de Mille adaptation of Cosmo Hamilton's story, "His Friend and His Wife," has commenced an indefinite engagement under the title "Midsummer Madness" at Grauman's Rialto.

It is a well handled, perfectly possible and quite human drama of the upper classes. The cast is mostly good and the sub-titles add to the interest of the whole.

Jack Holt plays Bob Meredith, which part was the title role in the original. His work is satisfactory, but we have seen him better cast by far.

Conrad Nagel as Julian Osborn appropriates the picture with another of his delicately shaded performances as the thoroughbred young victim of midsummer madness. He combines with subtleness the weakness and strength of romantic humanity.

Lois Wilson is unusually well cast as Margaret Meredith, the young wife who finds herself, if a bit late. She makes an interesting foil for Mr. Nagel.

Had Lila Lee's conception of her part equalled its possibilities, she would have struck the keynote of the production as Daisy Osborn, the virtuous wife of an erring husband. Intolerance is the foremost characteristic of the role, which is typical, but it is handled as a petulant child might manage it, and the result is nil. As an intelligent married woman Miss Lee just can't be made to fit.

Claire McDowell has several good scenes as Julian Osborn's understanding mother. Her aristocratic ladies are really lovely.

Betty Francisco also has a small role which she interprets very well.

Little Charlotte Jackson, Charles Ogle, Lillian Leighton and George Kuwa all do very good work in their various "bits."

Being a Paramount production, it has a better than standard list of small part people.

"KISMET"

Robertson-Cole presents Otis Skinner in a screen version of "Kismet" at Tally's Broadway. The production holds much of the fascination of the original Knoblock play and has the advantage of many more gorgeous sets. The cast is good, and despite a draggy prologue presentation, the picture is rather well timed.

The star once more is Hajj, the delightful villain for the public's enthusiastic approval. His supreme artistry has with this offering preserved his great characterization for all peoples. Undoubtedly those who remember the stage interpretation will flock to see his screen work, and they will not be disappointed.

Elinor Fair plays Marsinah, the beggar's daughter. She is well cast and will satisfy in the role.

Kut-Ui-Kuluf, the cast-off queen of Mansur's harem, is excellently interpreted by Rosemary Theby. Her superb petulance is an accomplishment in itself.

Hamilton Revelle is well cast as Wazir Mansur, who is assisted in his plotting by Afife, interestingly played by Paul Weigel.

Although the part of the Caliph Abdullah is not large, it is made impressive by the work of Leon Barry. He has the advantage of the production's sympathy and romance.

Herschel Mayall and Emmett King do Juwan and Abu Bakr.

Further included in the cast are Robert Evans, Sam Kaufman, Cornelia Skinner, Matilda Comont, Thomas Kennedy, James Adams, Sidney Smith, Harry Lorraine, Fanny Ferrari and Emily Seville.

Louis Gasnier produced the photoplay personally.

"BREWSTER'S MILLIONS"

The film version of George Barr McCutcheon's sprightly comedy, "Brewster's Millions," starring Roscoe Arbuckle, shows this week at Grauman's Million Dollar Theater. On the whole it is an acceptably entertaining production, made much more so by an almost violently amusing as well as unique introduction.

AUDREY CHAPMAN

Who has just finished a part with
B. B. Hampton

The star has certainly broken all records for original creations in his accomplishment of Monte Brewster at the age of one year. Even as the capricious Monte at five summers he does not succeed in producing anything like the hysteria that the first "interpretation" inspires. The mature Monte is also perfectly satisfactory, but more of the ludicrous "kid stuff" would be appreciated by the picture's surprised audience.

Betty Ross Clarke plays opposite Arbuckle as Peggy, the lady who loves him and would fain protect him. There is really little in the role, but under the circumstances it is well handled.

Fred Huntley and James Corrigan are very good as Monte's grandfathers, Brewster and Ingraham respectively. The variance of their views on how to raise the modern boy starts the story and keeps it going.

Marion Skinner, Jean Acker, Charles Ogle, Neely Edwards, William Boyd and Parker McConnell all have small parts that go to make up entertaining sequences.

Joseph Henaberry is responsible for the picture's direction.

"THE WOMAN IN HIS HOUSE"

(Preview)

A preview of the Louis B. Mayer-First National production, "The Woman in His House," was given the profession and press, January 11th, in the ball room of the Alexandria by Mr. Mayer, after a dinner extended to the newspaper and trade journal representatives.

The picture, produced with an all-star cast headed by Mildred Harris, is a Madge Tyrone adaptation of the Frances Irene Reels story. Its spiritual theme is particularly appropriate at this time, which will render it a big box-office attraction. This production, moreover, will undoubtedly regain for Mildred Harris her position as a film favorite. Perhaps the introduction both of the story and cast might be a bit more lucid, but that is a comparatively small matter.

Miss Harris is at her best as Hilda, a doctor's wife, who, being neglected, misunderstands. She possesses an undeniable quiet charm, and she is set off to advantage in this type of role.

Ramsey Wallace plays Dr. Philip Emerson, her scientifically-inclined husband. As the well meaning yet blind materialist, he is more than satisfactory.

Little Richard Headrick runs away with many honors for himself as their baby, who becomes the crippled victim of infantile paralysis. The kiddie accomplishes heavy work, that would be remarkable from a child twice his age, with absolute ease. His performance is also marked with an exceptional understanding. He has a great future on the screen.

Thomas Holding is well cast as Peter Marvin, the philosopher of the story.

Gareth Hughes interprets the crippled Sigurd very well and might have been given a better finish to advantage.

George Fisher does Bob Livingston, a blase youth, who mixes the plot somewhat.

Winter Hall plays Hilda's father.

Catherine Van Buren and Bob Walker complete the cast.

John M. Stahl personally directed the production.

"DANGEROUS BUSINESS"

The Kinema is showing "Dangerous Business," a John Emerson-Anita Loos production, starring Constance Talmadge. The story is a more than usually entertaining Talmadge farce with a good cast and clever situations.

The role of Nancy Flavell, played by Miss Talmadge, is that of the typical romantically flighty twentieth century flapper. It is the kind of thing that Connie does so delightfully. Moreover, since real feminine characterizations in farce are not ordinary, this one is rendered particularly valuable.

Kenneth Harlan is excellent as Clarence Brooks. In fact, this is the best part in which we have recently seen him. His attitudes as Clarence, the adoring and humble secretary, are a riot, while he rescues romance with a jerk when he returns from France, the self-respected Captain Brooks.

George Fawcett is there, as always, with Mr. Flavell, the modern father of a modern young woman.

Matilda Brundage is Mrs. Flavell, and Florida King does Mrs. Brooks.

Jack Ramond is cast as Mr. Braille, the would-be bridegroom of the star.

Some very clever scenes are accomplished by the actor who plays the Latin singer. He should have been given screen notice.

Nina Cassavant is inexcusably weak in the small role of Nancy's friend, Genevieve.

"BLIND WIVES"

A much-advertised Fox production, made with the cast that appeared in "While New York Sleeps," and entitled "Blind Wives," is running at the California Theatre. The picture is an adaptation of Knoblock's "My Lady's Dress," but it is a poorly-handled, morbid affair as scenarized and altogether is this month's "horrible example" of what the modern photoplay should not be. Briefly, it is a series of disconnected, mean-

Pickups By the Staff

SID GRAUMAN PREPARES FOR THEATER MEN'S BALL

Under the direction of Sid Grauman, preparations are being made for the Los Angeles Theater Association's masque ball and Mardi Gras costume party to which the public is invited to mingle with screen stars at the Ambassador on Saturday night, February 5th. A grand march of film luminaries is a feature of the program.

Associated with Mr. Grauman, chairman of the organization, in completing the plans for the affair is a committee composed of Alexander Pantages, L. E. Behmer, Fred A. Hiller, Sol Lesser, W. T. Wyatt, W. H. Clune, Harry David, H. D. McBride and W. R. Payne.

Francis Woodward is the secretary of the Los Angeles Theater Association.

LOCAL THEATER MAN GOES EAST

Sol Lesser, of the Gore Bros. and Sol Lesser, left Los Angeles last week for Chicago, where he is to attend the meeting of Associated First National franchise holders scheduled for January 10.

Representative franchise holders from every territory in the United States will be present.

Among matters of great local interest that will be arranged by Mr. Lesser during his stay in Chicago will be the Western premiere of "Passion," European production. As an example of its success it is interesting to note that over $110,000 passed through the box office of the Capitol Theater during its two weeks' engagement. It was the first time in the history of the theater that a picture was held over for a second week's showing. Mr. Lesser will arrange for the premiere of "Passion," to be held at the New Ambassador Theater. Following its engagement at that playhouse it will be shown for an extended engagement at the Kinema downtown.

The western premiere of Charles Chaplin's production, "The Kid," will also be arranged.

During the absence of the local theater man, the executive work for Gore Bros.-Sol Lesser organization will be in the hands of Michael and Abe Gore. Details of the preparation of the New Ambassador Theater will be handled by S. Barrett McCormick.

An eight pound baby was born to Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Baker on January 5th at the Methodist Hospital. Both mother and daughter are doing well.

"The Magic Circle" is announced as the title of the newest five-reel feature production to be made by the Drascena Productions, Inc. Work will commence soon at the company's studio on Boyle avenue.

Leo White is appearing this week as the French Count in Douglas MacLean's newest picture, "The Rookie's Return," at Grauman's.

Doris May, former co-star of Douglas MacLean, has admitted her marriage engagement to Wallace MacDonald.

Extensive alterations are under way at the Lois Weber Studio. The whole plant (garden, studio and stage) is to be remodeled and a swimming pool constructed.

Associated First National announces that the third of the Toonerville Trolley Comedy series, "The Skipper's Treasure Garden," has been completed and will soon be ready for distribution.

HAYAKAWA ON LECTURE TOUR

Final arrangements have recently been completed by Sessue Hayakawa for a lecture tour of Eastern colleges. Tsuru Aoki (Mrs. Hayakawa) will accompany him on the tour.

Wilbur McGaugh and his wife are now settled in their new Hollywood home.

Nelson MacDowell

Who Is Supporting Viola Dana in "Home Stuff"

FAY TINCHER WILL TOUR

Fay Tinchler is leaving Los Angeles this week to start a tour of personal appearances at theatres, which will start in Chicago the 17th of this month and continue over a route which will include the country's principal cities.

It is likely that one of the latest Christie two-reel films will be a part of the performance in which Miss Tinchler appears.

During the tour she will be under the personal management of William Bastar, Chicago film man.

Frank Norcross has just finished in "The Bobbed Squab" for Universal.

Tod Browning may be borrowed from Carl Laemmle by Oliver Morosco to produce "Slippy McGee" as a screen drama, according to reports.

A series of Frank F. Greene art titles has just been delivered for the Anita Stewart production, "Sowing the Wind," directed by John M. Stahl.

Louis K. Webb, Vice-President of the Photoplayers' Equity Association, who has had the part of Dr. Judd in Von Stroheim's "Foolish Wives," delivered an address in the Monterey Presbyterian Church last Sunday evening on "The Motion Picture and the Church."

Jimmy Aubrey, who by consistent production has gotten ahead of schedule on his comedies, has been enjoying a motor tour of California, but will soon resume production.

GOLDWYN ENTERTAINS AT PREVIEW

Samuel Goldwyn gave a private showing at the Goldwyn studio of "The Kid," Charlie Chaplin's latest picture, recently. Mr. Goldwyn entertained twenty-five guests at dinner before the picture was screened. It was the first time the picture has been seen.

Among those present at the preview were Gertrude Atherton, Sir Gilbert Parker, Charles Chaplin, Samuel Goldwyn, Madame Elinor Glyn, Leroy Scott, J. G. Hawks, Gouverneur Morris, Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Hughes, Clayton Hamilton, Edward Knoblock, Abraham Lehr, Will Rogers, Mabel Normand, Reginald Barker, and Elsie Ferguson.

ARTISTS PRESENT TOKEN

As a token of appreciation, the commercial artists of Los Angeles, at their last meeting, presented Frank F. Greene with a large palette. On it, the insignia of the organization and the message of appreciation were designed in gold leaf and black enamel. This came as a complete surprise to the recipient, who in 1917 organized the Commercial Artists' Association and was its first president, officiating two terms.

Mr. Green is now devoting his entire time to the artistic and psychological requirements of the motion picture industry in its department of production and advertising.

NEW THEATRE COMPANY

A merger of theatrical interests with holdings in Los Angeles and Southern California, and with plans for expansion along Pacific Coast territory is the just-formed West Coast Theatres Co., according to an announcement emanating from the general offices of Gore Brothers and Sol Lesser. The newly formed consolidation is an incorporation of seventeen individual theatrical industries, including thirty theatres, four motion picture exchanges, real estate holdings and leases for theatres under construction, as well as contracts and plans for several new houses to be built in the near future.

The policy of the West Coast Theatres Company will be the expansion and enlargement of business by erecting and operating picture theatres on the Pacific Coast and in Arizona.

The officers of the West Coast Theatres Company are: Michael Gore, President; Sol Lesser, Vice-President; Adolph Ramish, Treasurer, and A. L. Gore, Secretary.

Allan Dwan has finished "shooting" the last scenes of "The Perfect Crime" and the production is now in the cutting room. Lillian Ducey is editing and titling the picture.

"Don't Flirt on Trains" is the title of the prize-winning comedy written by Herbert S. Marshutz, Los Angeles advertising man, in the scenario contest being held by Film Fun. The winning story will appear in the February issue.

Benjamin B. Hampton, after launching "A Certain Rich Man," his photoplay of William Allen White's novel, has taken a few days off for a vacation in the mountains with Zane Grey, the novelist. "A Man of the Forest," by Zane Grey, will be Mr. Hampton's next production.

James Oliver Curwood's story of the far north country, "The Golden Snare," which will be David Hartford's next contribution for Associated First National release, has the distinction of having been published in seven different languages.

Russell Simpson

Leading Roles in Three Successive Reginald Barker Special Productions: "Godless Men," "Snow Blindness" (tentative title), "Bunty Pulls the Strings."

THIS WEEK, CALIFORNIA

"Russell Simpson has the 'big' role and, with all credit to the others, he 'steals' the picture. Simpson dominates the entire setting. Excepting Lon Chaney's recent achievements, I can't, at the moment, recall a portrayal that gave me more real, honest enjoyment and inspiration. The hackneyed definition that histrionic genius is an infinite capacity for taking pains does not quite cover the case of Simpson, for his work of art not only is great in execution, but underlying it is spiritual principle. With alternate strokes, he touches the heart and stirs the imagination and challenges the intellect."—Guy Price of Los Angeles Evening Herald, on "Godless Men."

Production Notes

Tod Browning is selecting the members of an all star cast for "Fanny Herself," the Edna Ferber story which he will produce.

The scenario department reports the purchase of the screen rights of "Christmas Eve at Pilot Butte," a story from the pen of Courtney Ryley Cooper, for the use of Harry Carey. Universal has also secured from Izola Forrester and Mann Page their newest story, "The Truant," to be used as a stellar vehicle by Frank Mayo as soon as he finishes his present feature.

Edith Roberts has just given a housewarming to celebrate her entrance into her new home, in Laurel Canyon, in the Hollywood foothills.

Two two-reel Western photodrams were put into production this week when Edward Laemmle began directing Jack Perrin in "Trigger Trail," and Hoot Gibson started to direct himself in the starring role of "Rarin' to Go."

"Boot-Legging," a two-reel satire, will be the next picture to be released by Universal with Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran starring.

William Beaudine is directing Dorothea Wolbert in a new comedy by Frank Conklin and Scott Darling, entitled "A Search for Suitors."

Fred Leroy Granville's first production as a Universal director will be "The Girl and the Goose," starring Eva Novak. Granville has just returned from England, where he directed Peggy Hyland for the Samuelson Film company. "The Girl and the Goose" is an original story by Emma Bell Clifton, adapted for the screen by Doris Schroeder.

As soon as Carmel Myers returns from New York, where she has been since Christmas, she will begin work on "The Dangerous Moment," a story by Douglas Doty, under the direction of Marcel de Sano.

NOTES FROM THE CENTURY COMEDIES

William Watson began work on a two-reel lion comedy, called "Leaping Rajahs and Dignified Lions." His cast will include Zip Monberg and Florence Lee.

Harry Swett is playing the principal part in a comedy entitled "Superstition," under the direction of Tom Buckingham.

Fred Fishback just completed his comedy, "The Dog Doctor," his cast including Louise Lorraine, Bud Jamison and Zip Monberg.

CONSTANCE TALMADGE RETURNS TO THE STUDIO

Constance Talmadge and her company have returned to New York from Miami, Fla., where they have been taking exterior scenes for her new First National picture, "The Man from Toronto," Douglas Murray's play, which has been adapted for the screen by Grant Carpenter. The title will probably be changed.

Picturization of the interiors started last Monday, and Connie cut short her honeymoon with her real husband and returned to her studio to receive the attentions of her "reel" Romeo, Kenneth Harlan, who plays opposite her in the present vehicle. Chet Withey, who formerly directed Norma Talmadge, is directing Constance for the first time.

CHAPLIN WORKING

With the disposal of "The Kid" and the return of Charles Chaplin to Los Angeles the way was cleared for the completion of the remaining four of the eight short reel comedies for the production of which that star was under contract to First National. The latter announces that work is now in hand at the Chaplin studio on the fifth of the comedies.

AT REALART

The last week in January will see all three West Coast Realart companies at work on new productions. Wanda Hawley has already started in "Sweet Peach," by Sophie Kerr.

"Jerry," the Billie Burke stage success, will be the next starring vehicle for Mary Miles Minter. She will start work in the production on January 24th. She is now en route back to Los Angeles following a holiday trip to New York. Joseph Henabery will direct "Jerry."

Bebe Daniels is back from two weeks in Dallas, Texas, her birthplace. Miss Daniels is to start at once in a leading role of Cecil B. deMille's production, "Five Kisses." January 24th she will return to the Realart studio for work in her next starring production, "Two Weeks with Pay," adapted by Alice Eytan from a Nina Wilcox Putnam Saturday Evening Post story.

CHRISTIE COMEDIES

Patricia Palmer, new leading lady in the Gayety Comedies, is appearing before the camera in a one-reel farce called "His Bitter Half."

Mr. W. D. Burford and Harry H. Burford, of the La Cross Theatres Company, are making their first tour of filmdom this week at the Christie studios.

Another visitor of the week is J. J. Goodstein, of Arrow Photoplays, of Denver and Philadelphia.

DE HAVEN FINISHES "THE GIRL IN THE TAXI"

Carter de Haven announces that the picturization of "The Girl in the Taxi" has been completed. Sixteen weeks have been consumed in actual shooting on Anthony Mars' comedy.

The production is now in the cutting room, while Director Lloyd Ingraham, Robert McGowan and De Haven are collaborating on the titles.

AT LASKY'S

William D. Taylor is completing Elsie Ferguson's starring vehicle, "Sacred and Profane Love." Immediately on the completion of the production for Paramount, Miss Ferguson will leave for New York to start on a new picture, it is understood, in the New York studios, which are scheduled to reopen the latter part of this month.

George Melford is progressing with his production of "The Money Master," with James Kirkwood, adapted from Sir Gilbert Parker's novel of that name. Very shortly the company will go north to obtain Canadian scenes.

Cecil B. de Mille is still engaged upon his all-star production of "Five Kisses," adapted from Schnitzler's "The Affairs of Anatol."

William de Mille is scheduled to begin work next Monday on an original story by Edward Knoblock, British dramatist, entitled "The Lost Romance." The scenario is by Olga Printzlau.

Next Monday is also the starting date for Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle in his new star picture, "Three Miles Out," directed by James Cruze.

Thomas Meighan will also begin work Monday, according to present plans, on a story called "White and Unmarried," with Tom Forman as director. Jacqueline Logan has been engaged as leading woman for Mr. Meighan.

Gloria Swanson will make her stellar debut in Elinor Glyn's "The Great Moment," the production of which will begin February 7, under the direction of Sam Wood.

Can You Qualify for Screen Authorship?

A NATIONAL educational institution to train photoplaywrights by correspondence during spare time at home has been established in Los Angeles to meet the needs of the motion picture industry.

This institution is directed by experienced writers and sponsored by Cecil B. DeMille, Thos. H. Ince and other prominent producers.

The field for photoplaywrights is lucrative and applicants drawn from every walk of life respond to the call.

Only persons naturally endowed with the gift of creative imagination and dramatic insight, however, can hope for success in this profession, and applicants must be selected accordingly.

All applicants, therefore, are requested to apply by mail to Frederick Palmer, Director of Education, for the Palmer Home-Test Questionnaire to determine their fitness to undertake this course of vocational training.

This questionnaire, scientifically compiled by Professor Malcolm Shaw MacLean, A.M., formerly a Northwestern University instructor of English composition, in collaboration with H. H. Van Loan, noted photoplay author-producer, is the first test of its kind ever adopted by an educational institution.

The purpose of this questionnaire is to help applicants determine the degree of creative imagination possessed by them and consequently their eligibility to enroll in this curriculum.

If successful in making this home test, the Palmer Plan of Instruction in Photoplay Writing is available to you.

Address all inquiries to

Then he celebrated Christmas by going to Big Bear. He got back in time to hear the New Year whistles.

Now he celebrates the New Year by going to Truckee.

They aren't sure at Goldwyn's when the director will be back, but the next legal holiday is Memorial Day.

Charlie McHugh has signed with Max Linder to play Mr. Coralie in his latest comedy, "Love and Lingerie." The working title of the picture is "Coralie and Co."

"Heidi," said to be the first dramatic story presented in colors, has been secured by the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation of New York, who will offer it to state rights buyers.

Current Reviews

ingless tragedies, which are dreamed by a married woman who has committed indiscretions to procure fine raiment, her life. There isn't the shadow of an excuse for the done to death theme in the first place, and the nightmares are by turn silly and repulsive. The same cast appears in the various episodes.

Estelle Taylor heads it. There are very few sincere moments for her in the whole conglomeration. It can never be said, however, that this vehicle failed to provide ample opportunity for a display of versatility.

Marc McDermott does the leading masculine work, but it means very little.

Ed Sothern also appears in the various snatches of exaggerated drama.

The public doesn't like this kind of thing. It belong to the tinsely sensational of another cinema age.

"HER BELOVED VILLAIN"

Another Realart farce, this time featuring Wanda Hawley, and bearing the title, "Her Beloved Villain," plays at Clune's Broadway. The story is unusually weak, and below the average even for Realart comedies, in entertainment value. It deals with a group of thoroughly American looking Frenchmen who participate in incidents that are far from amusing.

Miss Hawley plays Suzanne, a rather meaningless young wife, in a yet more meaningless manner. Many good supporting actresses hereabouts have been injured by dishwatery starring vehicles, and this one is no exception.

Ramsey Wallace is not well cast as Paul Blythe, but then we know of no one else who would be, either, in the part.

Templar Powell plays Louis Martinot, chief complicit of the Blythe matrimonial affairs.

Tully Marshall and Lillian Leighton provide the real comedy of the picture as Doctor and Madame Joseph Poulard. Their characterizations are equally good, the production's best.

Robert Bolder, Margaret McWade and Gertrude Claire play respectively Suzanne's father, mother and aunt.

Harrison Ford is Martinot.

Sam Wood directed.

Harry Myers

Harry Myers, better known as the Connecticut Yankee, because of the fact that he created the title role in the Wm. Fox all-star adaptation of Mark Twain's famous satire, "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," commenced his dramatic career with a two-season stage engagement with Durban and Sheeler of Philadelphia in 1900. There followed two seasons with the Girard Avenue Stock company in the same city, and two seasons with the Forepaugh Stock, also of Philadelphia, after which Myers was engaged by the "A Break for Liberty" company. The next four seasons were equally divided between Mamie Fleming and Maud Hillman Stock.

Meanwhile, the busy young man had experienced the delights of summer work both with the Du Bois Stock company of Du Bois, Pa., and his own outfit, which played New England and Canada.

A season with the very popular stage version of George Barr McCutcheon's "Graustark" immediately preceded his entrance into pictures, which came in the nature of a five-year association with Lubin. A year with Universal and another with Vim were next accomplished by Myers, who was by that time one of the most popular artists on the screen. Then he returned to the legitimate in his own vaudeville sketch. Immediately upon completing one tour, however, Myers returned to pictures to star in "The Masked Rider" serial, after which he was featured in Lone Star and Border Film productions.

He has recently been seen in the two latest Chas. Ray productions, "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway" and "Peaceful Valley," and now he is appearing at Miller's in the before mentioned "Connecticut Yankee."

Besides being an artist of unquestioned accomplishment, the surprising Mr. Myers has recently proven his ability as a business man as well, by taking a hint from the author who has done so much to make him famous. Briefly, he has considered the following observance of Twain and found it wise:

"Yes, a man can keep his trade-mark current in such a country, but he can't sit around and do it. He has got to be on deck and attending to business right along."

Can you picture thirteen thousand New Year's cards, laying in one enormous pile?

Can you imagine what a tremendous task it would be to autograph every single one, and then have them all addressed, stamped and mailed?

That is exactly what Harry Myers did.

If you don't think it is possible, ask every doctor, every lawyer, every dentist, every jeweler, every soft drink or confectionery dealer, every cloak and suit house, every automobile dealer, every barber, every picture actor, every one connected with motion pictures; in fact, everybody, if he didn't receive a New Year's card from Harry Myers, autographed by him. His experiment, which, according to reports, has met with unprecedented success, was in the form of an invitation to witness his performance in the play which commenced its Los Angeles premiere Christmas day.

Isn't that keeping one's trade-mark current? Incidentally, the novel procedure has meant a lot of free press agenting for Messrs. Fox and Twain, which admittedly is not to be resented, at least in the producing business.

We have much to look forward to in the work and further startling campaigns of this "different" picture man.

MOROSCO WILL NOT CHANGE TITLES

The prevailing custom of altering the titles of picture adaptations of stage plays, stories or books will not be followed by Oliver Morosco. He will label them with the original name, beginning with "The Half Breed" and right on down through the list of twenty or more manuscripts that he now has under preparation in the scenario department.

It is the Morosco belief that while more "attractive" titles may be found for some of the stage successes, a change brings about a definite loss in the advertising value that the play already has gained.

CLAYTON HAMILTON PUBLISHES NEW BOOK

Clayton Hamilton, of the Goldwyn editorial department, is the author of a new book which has just been issued by Henry Holt & Co. It is called "Seen on the Stage" and is the fourth volume of a series, the other three being "The Theory of the Theatre," "Studies in Stagecraft," and "Problems of the Playwright." The new volume is dedicated to Henry Arthur Jones, the English playwright now visiting this country. Mr. Hamilton was professor of dramatic literature at Columbia University until he resigned the position to go to the Goldwyn studio.

HAYAKAWA'S FIRST R. C. PICTURE TO HAVE PREMIER

"The First Born," starring Sessue Hayakawa, and being released as a Robertson-Cole super-special, will have its premier showing at the Strand Theatre, New York City, during the week of January 30, according to an announcement from Robertson-Cole.

The production is the first of a new series of Hayakawa pictures made under a recent contract with Robertson-Cole, whereby not more than four productions a year are being released. "The First Born" is based on a stage play by Francis Powers (produced in San Francisco by Fred Belasco).

EDUCATIONAL COMBINES NEWS REELS

President E. W. Hammons, of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., this week announced that his company had signed contracts for the product of three distinct news weeklies and that these would be consolidated into a single reel to be released twice weekly.

Included in the product acquired are Kinograms, Gaumont Weekly and a third that is under present contract and which will not be included in the product until March 1. The consolidated weekly will be known as the Super Kinograms and the first release will be January 30th.

Every cameraman and practically the complete staffs of the three organizations are to be maintained, and the entire product will be available for Educational's selection of material. According to the plans announced by the New York office, the field forces will continue to send in all of the material that they are now supplying for the three weeklies, and only the best of it will be incorporated in the new Kinograms.

Kinograms has been retained as the title of the new weekly because it is not identified with any other releasing organization through its name. The Gaumont title and the title of the third weekly to be acquired will be entirely dropped.

Cameramen are to be maintained in some fifty of the principal centers of the world, especially including those countries where events of the greatest news importance are transpiring. In addition, there will be special forces that will be available for dispatch to scenes of picture importance, without disturbing the resident staffs.

With the announcement of this release also came the news from Educational that the new Kinograms had been booked to every Keith-U.B. O. theatre in the country. This will not interfere with the release of the semi-weekly service to other theatres.

Educational reports that strong demands are coming from all sections of the country for the two-reel comedy dramas, with the industrial life of the nation as their background.

What the Sinking Fund Means to this Bond

The Sinking Fund is one of the big features in The Steel & Tube Company General Mortgage Sinking Fund 7% Gold Bonds, due January 1, 1951.

Its attractiveness is shown when you consider the high regard in which bonds of similar class and with similar sinking funds are held by the investing public. Such bonds are Bethlehem Steel 5s of 1942; U. S. Steel 5s of 1963; Lackawanna Steel 5s of 1950, and Republic Iron & Steel 5s of 1940. These bonds sold at an average price, in 1920, to yield 6% when United States Government Bonds were yielding only slightly less and railroad bonds were yielding around 7%.

Of course, excellent security has much to do with it, but the sinking fund is also of importance.

The sinking fund payments amount to $333,000 annually, sufficient to retire the entire issue by maturity. We represent these bonds as yielding 7.40%, whereas actually the minimum yield when retired before maturity is 7.65%.

The long maturity of these bonds is also a point to be carefully considered. A bond that assures you a yield of 7.40% for thirty years, or a profitable premium if called sooner, should be very attractive.

These facts do not take into account the strong position of the issuing company as regards management, supply of raw materials, market for products, transportation, capitalization, earning record and other important details which may be learned by calling on us in person, writing or phoning today. There is no obligation—we want you to investigate thoroughly before you place your funds in any prospective investment.

Juvenile Delinquency and the Motion Picture

The latest censorship agitation has called forth some thoroughly logical replies from authorities, both professional and otherwise. We wish it were possible to publish all of the good arguments against its adoption that we have read during the past week. However, here are a few that may prove a bit enlightening to some of the half-hypocritical, self-righteous individuals with whom the world has always been cursed. They have been directly occasioned by the much-repeated statement that moving pictures often have an immoral effect upon the youth of the land. From Photoplay magazine we quote:

"See what little Willie's doing—and tell him not to do it."

"A great many people think that the photoplay is the Little Willie of the arts. 'Laying it onto the movies' is a new stock in trade for the professional reformer, the subterfuge of the merely sensational minister, the sloppy excuse of the lazy reporter, the cheapest form of weak-minded gossip.

"Every form of art has been misused. To the prurient the noblest canvasses are filthy daubs, and the most glorious sculpture is vile. Even the Bible has been twisted to the devil's purpose, and the very law is, every day, malformed in expert hands.

"It is so weak and evasive to 'lay it onto the movies.' If Mary's elopement from Marshalltown with the Chicago drummer were quite properly diagnosed it would not be the 'sex pictures' which we would discover as the real cause, but the fact that Mary entered the mystic gates of womanhood all unknowing, with a mother too busy or too prudish to guide her little girl into the confidences of eternity.

"Fathers—mothers—Americans—let us look deeper into the causes of our occasional juvenile delinquency. No picture play, nor any other art or perverted art, ever wrecked a young soul which sailed out into the sea of life with the compass of loving understanding and the chart of home."

In the Rockford Republic we read further:

"Judge Hugo Friend of Chicago sentenced three 17-year-old high school boys to long terms of imprisonment for stealing an automobile and embarking on a career of crime.

"The boys and their mothers sought to evade responsibility by attributing their downfall to seeing bandits at work in the movies.

"This growing tendency to blame moving pictures for everything that happens is not more reasonable than the fashion of another day to blame all juvenile error upon story books and harmless play. As a matter of fact there have been books in which wrong-doing was rewarded, and life itself, which appears impervious to censorship, is not entirely lacking in glaring examples.

"But who ever saw a moving picture where the offender escaped punishment, or where virtue, however modest, failed of reward?

"All high pressure factors of modern civilization have contributed to the education of today's youth—school, theatre, newspaper and life itself. He is not blind, deaf nor dumb. He sees some men crippled, others enriched by the war. He reads of murderers acquitted, or pardoned; of graft even under the shadow of the capitol dome; and he sees honor in want and bluster bediamonded.

"Youths of today know too much and believe too little for their own good. Life itself is to blame and not the screen, the mission of which is to relieve us from our worries by immersing us in other people's troubles and 'kidding' us into the belief that justice and right always triumph.

"Perhaps if Chicago courts were to return a few more convictions and Chicago police were to bring in a few more thugs—perhaps if the national government were to punish slackers, grafters and profiteers about whom so much is said and so little done, youth would find less allurements in a career of crime.

"The juvenile offender enters that line of effort because his education and experience in life causes him to believe that he can get away with it—but he never gets that idea from pictures. He gets it from the facts of the day and he's altogether too nearly correct about it for his own good or for the country's good."

In a recent interview, Mack Sennett gave his slant on the subject interestingly:

"Since law-enforcing agencies are apparently incapable of handling the criminal element, it is natural, I suppose, for a legislature to look for a goat, so the motion picture is elected to carry the burden of responsibility for everything from the latest bigamy scandal to a drop in the stock market. The spectacle of crime on the stage is as old as the stage itself. Plays are made of such material. The picture play does its duty by civilization and becomes a moral force when it punishes crime and rewards virtue, as all good pictures do."

Equity Not a Closed Shop

By Frazier Shaw

Misinterpretation of a word or of an act makes countless thousands wrong.

It seems that a great many people knowingly misinterpret the phrase, "Equity Shop;" others do not understand what it means. The latter apparently are not acquainted with the definition of the word, "Shop." Turning to the Standard Dictionary we find "Shop, a place where anything is produced or made." A Shop, in short, is a place where work is done; work is done in the theatre and in the studio.

The Equity Shop means simply that Equity members refuse to work in a company with non-Equity members who enjoy exactly the same privileges as themselves, and who reap all the benefits of the Equity contract without contributing one ounce of effort or one penny to sustain the organization which secures and holds fast for them those privileges through that contract.

CHAPLIN TAKES OVER HIS PLANT..

Charlie Chaplin resumed his place in the production field of the motion picture industry this week by taking exclusive control of his studios at De Longpre and La Brea avenues, Hollywood.

A full working organization, including many of the persons who for numerous years have been identified with the comedian, began activities in preparation for the immediate resumption.

All but a few of the executive positions in the Chaplin organization have been filled and the players who will support the star in his screen efforts during the coming year are being assembled.

Chaplin expects to be at work before the camera by the latter part of the week. He has already prepared his story, which is an original by himself. The title has not as yet been made public. The picture will be a two-reeler and will be turned over to First National.

Within the next five months Chaplin will produce three two-reel subjects, this being the required number to terminate his contract with that organization.

After the completion of these three productions the star will become an active member of the "Big Four."

Edna Purviance will continue as head of the star's supporting company.

The business end of the Chaplin organization will continue under the supervision of Alf Reeves, who has served as studio manager for more than two years. Carlyle R. Robinson, who supervised Chaplin's personal and production exploitation during the comedian's Lone Star and early First National days, has returned to the company as director of publicity, and Charles Levin and Joseph Van Meter will continue as heads of the laboratory and purchasing departments respectively.

Although the studios had been leased to Carter De Haven for a lengthy period beginning last October, an agreement was reached whereby Chaplin is given the exclusive use of the plant again, due to the completion by De Haven of his five-reel production, "The Girl in the Taxi," and his requirements for merely cutting and assembling space. In the meantime, it is understood, De Haven is planning to build his own studio.

Antonio Moreno's feature, "Three Sevens," was shipped to Eastern Vitagraph this week for final editing. The star is taking a brief vacation while his next story is being prepared.

Director David Smith has progressed through more than half of Earle Williams' "Loot of the Night," and will finish in three more weeks.

William Duncan and Edith Johnson are finishing the twelfth and thirteenth chapters of their new production, "Fighting Fate," on locations around Los Angeles. Only a few scenes remain to complete the full fifteen episodes, timing the picture perfectly with the first runs, now starting.

Larry Semon is back at the studio after two weeks in bed with injuries, and is finishing the last few shots of "The Hick," his first comedy of 1921. The picture will be shipped east next week.

Jess Robbins is preparing the next Jimmy Aubrey comedy, "Babe" Hardy, the heavy, who was loaned to another studio for one picture, has returned.

AT THE REALART STUDIO

Within the next two weeks Realart's West Coast organization will be busy with three new productions. Wanda Hawley has already started work in "Sweetie Peach," by Sophie Kerr. Mary Miles Minter and Bebe Daniels are scheduled to begin on new photoplays Monday, January 24th. Miss Minter is now on her way back from New York. Her forthcoming vehicle will be an adaptation of "Jerry," the Billie Burke stage success.

Miss Daniels' new story will be from a Nina Wilcox Putnam tale, adapted by Douglas Bronston, the former editor of Century Magazine, who recently joined the studio staff under Elmer Harris.

Edith Kennedy is adapting the play, "Jerry," which will be directed by Joseph Henabery.

AT THE BALBOA STUDIO

"Politics" is announced as the title of a new one-reel situation comedy starring Milburn Morante, which entered production last week at the Balboa studios, Long Beach.

Al Nathan, until recently associated with the Hallroom Boys comedies in a managerial capacity, has joined the Morante organization as business manager.

Helen Williams has signed a contract whereby she will act as leading woman.

Miles Burns is cameraman and "Shorty" Everett has been made head of the property department at the Balboa studios, Long Beach.

PREPARING "SALVATION NELL" FOR SCREEN

Whitman Bennett announces that his second special production for release by Associated First National will be a picturization of "Salvation Nell."

It is said to be the most pretentious production that has been planned by Bennett up to date. It will follow, on the releasing schedule, his initial special production, "The Truth About Husbands," which was an adaptation of Pinero's "The Profligate."

Dorothy Farnum is now preparing the scenario for the new picture and will hereafter prepare all continuities and scenarios for the Bennett productions, including those starring Lionel Barrymore.

Actual production on "Salvation Nell" will begin in the latter part of January.

AT UNIVERSAL

Production began this week on Emma Bell Clifton's "The Girl and the Goose," a comedy drama in which Eva Novak will star under the direction of Fred Leroy Granville.

Jacques Jaccard, who has just finished directing Harry Carey in "If Only Jim," is filling in time between features with a two-reel western photodrama featuring Leonard Clapham. It is called "Hit the Trail, Harkness."

Harry Carey is well into the theme of "Everybody for Himself," the western feature which he is doing under the direction of Jack Ford.

Progress is being made on the filming of "False Colors," Priscilla Dean's forthcoming feature in which she is being directed by Stuart Paton.

Frank Mayo and the company, which is filming "Blood Brother to the Pines," is in the Yosemite where the scenery is furnishing a French-Canadian background for the action.

A two-reel western comedy is occupying Hoot Gibson. The star is directing himself. The story, upon which he has just begun

"BUNTY PULLS THE STRINGS"

Reginald Barker's film version of Graham Moffat's "Buntty Pulls the Strings" is running at the California Theatre. This Goldwyn release is an entertaining, well handled little tale of Scotland. Its message is one of tolerance, that will please the fancy of old and young alike. The picture is unusually well cast for this type of thing.

Russell Simpson heads the players as Tommas Biggar, the strictest Elder of the Kirk. Stern, obstinate, unrelenting old churchman, he is the embodiment of all that is hard and intolerant in religion. The story has mostly to do with a lesson he learns.

Beatrice Joy employs all of her naive personality in the interpretation of Buntty Biggar, a young lady, who despite the iron-clad Scottish conventions, manages a whole family and more.

Cullen Landis plays Rob Biggar, the fun loving, sometimes rebellious, youngest of the family. Both he and Casson Ferguson, who does Jamie, the remaining brother, are appropriately cast.

Raymond Hatton is immense as Weelum Sprunt, the awkward and always self-conscious fiancée of Buntty. Hatton's work is forever a delight.

Josephine Crowell is good as Susie Simpson, the hypocritical old aunt of the well meaning Weelum. Edythe Chapman, in striking contrast to Miss Crowell's part, portrays Ellen Dunlap, the "lovely lady" from Glasgow.

The story's setting is quaint and it is artistically photographed.

"BLACKBIRDS"

An eastern-made Realart picture entitled "Blackbirds" and featuring Justine Johnstone may be seen at Clune's Broadway. The story has to do with a gang of international crooks, self termed the "Blackbirds." It is the regular old plot of the adventurous young girl who is made a dupe of the arch villain only to be rescued by the detective lover, who "knew it all the time." Some of the angles are a little different, however. It is, as a result, fairly entertaining.

Miss Johnstone has a rather graceful screen bearing and shows possibilities. If she is provided with good vehicles she is liable to prove valuable. In the present play she is seen as Countess Leonie D'Orville, tool of the "Blackbirds."

William Boyd appears opposite her as Nevil Trask, detective. How Mr. Boyd came to be classified as a leading man may remain a mystery, but that the classification is a mistake is obvious. He walks through what might have been a fairly interesting part as stiffly as possible.

Charles Gerard reminds us of old times as Duval, the sinister heavy. His work is the picture's most professional note.

Jessie Arnold, Walter Walker, Marie Shotwell and Grace Parker complete the cast.

Jack Dillon directed the production.

"THE ROOKIE'S RETURN"

The Thomas H. Ince production, "The Rookie's Return," starring Douglas MacLean, is playing at Grauman's Million Dollar Theatre. A great deal cannot be said for the story proper, but assisted as it is by several well thought out laugh situations it makes a more than interesting evening's entertainment. We are rather inclined to credit the star himself with several of the clever turns. In any event, the whole is amusing and portions are quite novel, which is the vital point.

MacLean is truly delightful as James Stewart Lee, soldier, book agent and millionaire. His refreshing personality has made him one of our foremost comedians.

Doris May plays Alicia, the leading feminine role. She has very little action, but accomplishes it daintily and satisfactorily.

Leo White amusingly characterizes Henri, voice culturist and near villain. He makes an excellent foil for the aggressive Douglas.

Frank Currier creates a very lovable role, Dad, the old man with little boy tendencies.

BEATRICE LA PLANTE

Appearing in "Hush"

Wallace Beery has a few excellent scenes as Francois, self termed ex-champion of France and entertaining blusterer.

Kathleen Key, Elinor Hancock, Frank Clark, and Aggie Herring all do bits.

"HUSH"

Harry Garson's production, "Hush," starring Clara Kimball Young, is being held over another week at the Symphony. It is a problem play by Sada Cowan, dealing with the advisability of a woman "confessing" to her husband. The viewpoints of the ordinary man and woman are interestingly handled and the production makes an excellent vehicle for Miss Young. In spots, however, the story drags.

The star is well cast and does some of her characteristic work in the role of Vera Stanford, a woman with a sensitive conscience. Some of her scenes are unusually well played.

Frank Glendon makes an exceptional opposite for her and succeeds in creating a very typical modern husband as Jack Stanford. His work is always consistently good.

Kathlyn Williams gets the philosophy of the whole over beautifully as Isabel Dane. Her type contrasts pleasingly with that of Miss Young.

Jack Pratt plays Hugh Graham and Bertram Grassby does Herbert Brooks. Both parts are important to the plot although not very large. Both are also well interpreted.

Gerard Alexander adds a bit of much needed comedy to the rather heavy drama in the role of Grace Brooks, a kittenish matron with more money than fascination.

Beatrice La Plante does the maid's "bit" cleverly.

Garson directed the picture personally.

"NINETEEN AND PHYLLIS"

Charles Ray appears this week at the Kinema in his third independent release through Associated First National. It is a small town comedy of the human Ray variety, having to do with the stupendous problems of the boy who loves Phyllis. On the whole, the story is very entertaining and will prove more than acceptable to the Ray fans.

The star upon this occasion plays Andrew Jackson Cavanaugh, a "dressy" rural youth, who in his own eyes even approaches the sophisticated. As the youngster who finds living up to the expectations of his careless little lady love rather difficult on eighteen a week, and consequently takes to capturing burglars as a paying side line, Mr. Ray is once more the lovable and ingenuous lad who won the heart of the public several years ago in "The Clodhopper."

Clara Horton gives one of her eager little ingenue performances as Phyllis, who proves both a worry and stimulation to her worshipping Andrew. She has acquired for herself a decided following.

Lincoln Stedman plays Jimmie Long, the inevitable rich man's son, to every one's satisfaction.

George Nichols has some amusing scenes with young Andrew, whose uncle he does.

Frank Norcross and Cora Drew complete the good cast as Phyllis' grandfather and Andrew's aunt, respectively.

Joseph De Grasse directed the production.

A SMALL TOWN IDOL

The Mission changes its program this week with the presentation of "A Small Town Idol," a five-reel Mack Sennett comedy. It will undoubtedly prove an extraordinary success, since it is by far the most amusing recent production of its kind. In fact, we have never seen slapstick that surpasses it. This is due largely to the facts that the picture incorporates a real story, which, by the way, is a delightful travesty upon the motion picture profession, and that no comedy "gag" is obvious (i. e., they are all the logical result of the preceding action). Erle Kenton is also to be congratulated upon the clever direction.

Ben Turpin heads the cast as Sam Smith, later Samuel X. Smythe, a handsome picture hero. He takes complete advantage of his unusually funny situations and proves himself an artist at the "old hokum" which he exaggerates to the audible delight of the audience.

Phyllis Haver plays Mary Brown, the hero's little country cousin. On the whole her work is satisfactory.

Marie Prevost creates plot complications as Marcella Mansfield, a motion picture star.

James Finlayson is very good as J. Wellington Jones, the dirtiest of villains.

Dot Farley, as Sam's loving mother, has some amusing work, and Charlie Murray as Sheriff Sparks, Bert Roach as Martin Brown, and Billy Bevan as a "picture director de luxe," add to the general mirth.

"The Small Town Idol" may claim to be "the funniest comedy," unchallenged.

Drascena Productions has just completed arrangements with the National Exchanges, Inc., of New York City, for the United States and Canadian distribution of its six-reel dramatic production, "Get Out and Stay Out." This feature was directed by H. C. Matthews, and was eight weeks in the making.

A few remaining scenes are yet to be filmed, and the Neilan technical staff have everything in readiness for the director's return.

Upon the completion of "Bob Hampton of Placer," Neilan will hasten the production of Ben Ames Williams' story, "Not a Drum Was Heard."

Dwight Crittenden is portraying the part of General Custer in Marshall Neilan's picturization of "Bob Hampton of Placer."

Alice Hollister is playing the leading feminine role in "The Money Master," which is now being filmed under the direction of George Melford.

Earl Montgomery and Dorothy Wood have been engaged by Producer Jack White for prominent comedy roles in White's newest comedy.

Cecil Holland, the master make-up artist, has been engaged by James Kirkwood to supervise his make-up in the title role of George Melford's screen version of "The Money Master."

Charlotte Merriam commenced work this week on the sixth of the comicclassic series in which she is being starred by Special Pictures under the direction of Reggie Morris.

Frank C. Badgeley has been signed to play a prominent role in "Scrambled Wives," the Broadway stage play of last season which is now being picturized for Associated First National release with Marguerite Clark in the stellar role.

Lois Zellner returned to Hollywood this week from New York, where she has been writing adaptation continuities for Metro for the past six months. Miss Zellner will again devote her attention to writing original stories direct for the screen.

King Baggot is enjoying a brief vacation before starting work on his next picture. He has just finished playing the leading role in a special feature for the John Gorman Productions, in which he was supported by Marjorie Daw and Fritzi Brunette.

GETTING ACQUAINTED WITH INTERESTING PEOPLE

Frank Glendon

Frank Glendon, after a varied career of about nine years on the speaking stage, first gained prominence on the screen through his great exhibition of versatility in interpreting the varied characters of O. Henry's short stories in a manner faithful to the O. Henry ideal and truly human at all times. In fact Mr. Glendon's acting under the direction of Tom Mills was in a very great measure responsible for the success of the first series of O. Henry pictures which enjoyed much popularity in the first class theatres throughout the country.

For two years following he was under contract with Vitagraph, co-starring principally with Gladys Leslie and Hedda Nova.

Since that time he has been a free lancer. During the past year he has done some splendid work, notably in support of Clara Kimball Young, appearing opposite her in "For the Soul of Rafael," "Mid Channel" and "Hush," which is running this week at the Symphony. He was featured in "Roman Candles," which had a special run in the Philharmonic Auditorium.

He will be seen in the near future in the Lois Weber-Paramount production, "What Do Men Want?"

Mr. Glendon's latest completed picture is the Frank Lloyd Goldwyn production, "The Water Lily."

Glendon is one of the screen's earnest and optimistic workers. He believes in his profession and in its people, and will go to bat like lightning with anyone who chooses to maintain that the theatrical profession is less worthy or less elevating than any other. He maintains that the screen is positively the greatest existing medium for the dissemination of good or evil influences, and by virtue of this fact fully realizes the tremendous responsibility which rests upon the profession to choose most carefully and produce most thoughtfully the materials which it gives to the world.

He is a man of ideals, and a far-seeing student of his profession, and as he is recognized as one of the screen's foremost leading men, gives great promise for the future.

Equity

An actor's best friend is his work, and to his profession he should be more grateful than to anything else; therefore, is it not incumbent upon him to uphold the honor and dignity of that profession by endeavoring to purge it of all abuse, rid it of malpractice, clear it of scandal, and stand hand in hand with his brother and sister artists for the good of all. In this, his association is valiantly supporting him.

When one becomes an Equity member he should do so with a sense of tribute to a common cause, for the good of all and especially for the weak. These last hitherto have never had anyone to help them secure their rights, with the result that they have submitted helplessly and hopelessly to deplorable conditions.

But how about those who have become members of Equity? For years they have been profiting by the association's reforms, and a great many of them are indebted to the Actors' Equity for thousands of dollars paid to them in recent years through its effort.

The Actors' Equity Association is an organization of actors for actors, and all the men and women whom we respect most in the profession are members of it; it is our pride to stand shoulder to shoulder with them.

Joe Miller has been engaged by Irvin V. Willat to play Carl Swenson in "Partners of the Tide."

THE INVESTOR

"should not put his money into any promotion proposition unless he is willing to take the speculative risks which go with the best of them. Investigation through independent sources, such as the investor's local bank, is always a good safeguard. But the best safeguard for one's savings is to invest them through an investment banking house of established reputation, the past record of whose securities is a good guaranty of the quality of those it is now offering. Through such a demand he will not get many, if any, promotion propositions."

—The World's Work, January, 1921.

During the past few months our clients have had reason to appreciate the service we have rendered by refusing to recommend securities of companies which were in the construction or promotion stage. We do not pretend to be able to foretell the future value of securities based on companies which are in the construction or promotion stage. We have confined our recommendations to companies which were going concerns with adequate assets, and where we were assured after complete investigation that the earning record of the company was such as would justify prompt payment of interest when due.

Morbid Pictures

For some unaccountable reason, even in the face of the present general popularity of the spiritual theme for the photoplay, some of our foremost producers are still offering us, in the way of entertainment, the morbid that belongs to another cinema age.

True, this type of thing has had its day, and a very flourishing one, but, with the war over, humanity, or at least American humanity, has firmly settled itself to the pursuit of happiness in peaceful progress, and the elimination of those forces that can only retard advance. As a result, war tragedies, heavy sex plays, tales of the supernatural when they are weird and unreasonable, etc., are not desired by the public, which is expressing its dissatisfaction with such entertainment quite significantly at the box office.

Once in a while, as has recently been the case, however, a universally popular star or producer passes something of this kind upon a loyal and unsuspecting fan world, and it is, of course, his privilege to do so if he is not fearful of the reaction. For many reasons his work is assured a good market. Even at that this might seem to be a poor policy.

Another observation which has obviously not been made in various quarters is the fact that the best production and most finished performances in the world will not redeem an unwholesome story in the eyes of the people. They are simply sick unto death of the types of pictures that at one time seemed heroic or sensational, as the case might be, and the producer will do well not to cram such material down their throats. If he finds a market for it in Europe sufficient to justify him in its handling, well and good. He will not find it here! The great pendulum, public favor, in its slowly steady swing is indicating as its choice in entertainment, happiness seriously considered, and if history repeats itself, it will receive what it orders.

With the foregoing we do not mean to give the impression that the depiction of sin and tragedy in their various forms are offensive to the aesthetic spirit of the present-day picture goer. Few worth while dramas are without them; but the spectacle of sin for sin's sake has been declared taboo.

It occurs to us that when more original screen stories by reputable authors are produced, making it unnecessary to film so many half century old novels for the box office attraction of one-time big names, this problem will settle itself. Meanwhile it might be kept in mind to advantage. F. R.

Methodists Use Pictures

Another interesting milestone in the development of the church is related in a recent article in Variety. Incidentally it proves to be a further victory for the cinema.

"Pictures and electric signs as means to salvation are a part of the plan of the Methodist Episcopal Church in its centenary evangelistic campaign. That the church is going into the picture business in earnest is evidenced by the following facts:

"Headquarters of the church's picture enterprises are to be moved from New York to Chicago.

"The church is taking over a four-story factory structure on W. Erie street for the manufacture of religious and missionary films for church, Sunday school and community center work.

"An expert picture man is to be placed in charge of the work. Photographers already have been sent all over the world for the making of films.

"All the producing firms in the picture industry have been invited to submit films for the church's approval. From the films submitted a 'white list' is being compiled of films which are recommended for church use.

"The first 'white list' to be compiled was made public today.

"Indecent dressing on the part of film actresses is one of the things on which closest watch is kept by the censors. Dancing scenes, if not otherwise objectionable, are not cut. Pictures with plots centering about divorcees are taboo.

"It was explained that one or two Pickford pictures have been viewed and approved by the censors, but that they have not yet been incorporated in the list.

"Among the actors and actresses who do appear are William S. Hart, Lillian Gish, Charles Ray, Robert Harron (now dead), Gloria Swanson, Elliot Dexter, Wallace Reid, Mary Miles Minter, Shirley Mason, Robert Warwick, Marguerite Clark, Bryant Washburn, Roscoe ("Fatty") Arbuckle, Forbes Robertson, Dorothy Gish and others.

"Among the pictures which receive whole or partial indorsement are: 'The Greatest Thing in Life,' 'Alarm Clock Andy,' 'Something to Think About,' 'Homer Comes Home,' 'The Toll Gate,' 'The Love Flower,' 'Shepherd of the Hills,' 'Excuse My Dust,' 'Over the Hill,' 'Old-Fashioned Boy,' 'Sweet Lavender,' 'Girl of My Heart,' 'Eyes of the Heart,' 'Jack Straw,' 'Easy to Get,' 'Behold My Wife,' 'Always Audacious,' 'All of a Sudden Peggy,' 'It Pays to Advertise,' 'The Life of the Party' (Arbuckle), 'Red Hot Dollars,' 'Paris Green,' 'Heliotrope,' 'Guile and Women,' 'The Courtship of Miles Standish,' 'The Sin That Was His.'

"Film companies whose productions are among those approved by the censors are the Famous Players, D. W. Griffith, Lea-Bel, the Fox, Goldwyn, Argonaut, Associated Producers, Harry Levey Film Service Corporation, Realart, Pioneer, Charles Urban, etc.

"D. W. Griffith, it is stated, is preparing a special production for the use of the church."

GEORGE RANDOLPH CHESTER TO PRODUCE

George Randolph Chester, creator of J. Rufus Wallingford, popular hero of American fiction, will arrive in Los Angeles about February 1st to stage a special production at the Vitagraph studios. The picture will be a film version of Mr. Chester's "The Son of Wallingford," now about to start in Collier's magazine. Mrs. Chester, who collaborates with her husband on all his stories, will accompany him west and assist with the production. The writer has for some years past been production editor of Vitagraph, with headquarters at the Brooklyn studios.

SCHLANK BACK FROM EASTERN JAUNT

Morris R. Schlank, producer of the Hank Mann and Billy Fletcher comedies, arrived from New York this week, where he spent a number of days in conference with several film chiefs regarding plans for his future activity in the producing field.

Mr. Schlank stated upon his arrival here that he expected to have two or three different units working under his banner at his new studios on Beachwood Drive by the middle of next month, and that an interesting announcement concerning these units would be forthcoming from him soon.

Frank Cavender, until recently casting director for the Schlank forces, is now acting as general manager for the studios, succeeding Harry Ellis Dean, who has accepted an offer as general manager of the Producers Pictures Corporation at the Hollywood studios.

MILDRED HARRIS FORMING COMPANY

Mildred Harris intends to form her own producing company and make five features with an all-star cast. If plans develop, Chester Franklyn will direct, Jack Evans will guide the productions as manager and publicity will be supervised by Darryl Zanuck.

John W. Gray, associate of Arthur B. Reeve, is planning to write original stories for Miss Harris, to be used in her own productions.

HARTFORD COMPLETING INTERIORS

David Hartford has chosen the leading players who will appear in his picturization of James Oliver Curwood's thrilling Northwoods story, "The Golden Snare," for First National release. Filming of the interiors is going rapidly forward and should be completed this week, as the story is confined mostly to exterior Northern scenes.

Hartford expects to leave Los Angeles with his company next week.

AT THE REALART STUDIO

Monday, January 24th, found the studio at the height of activity with three companies under way.

Wanda Hawley has finished the first week of her new production, while the Bebe Daniels and Mary Miles Minter troupes are beginning work on scheduled photoplays.

Bebe Daniels has already started work on "Two Weeks with Pay," her next starring picture. This is from a Saturday Evening Post story by Nina Wilcox Putnam, scenario by Alice Eyton. Maurice Campbell is again directing Miss Daniels.

Mary Miles Minter has returned from a month's trip to New York. Without delay she started at once on "Jerry," her forthcoming vehicle. Joseph Henabery is directing the star.

UNIQUE TO BUILD STUDIO

The Unique Films, Inc., have acquired a tract of land at Bell, Cal., where they will build a studio for the production of two-reel comedy dramas featuring Braco, the great Dane, with children and good leads.

Braco is at present with the Mary Pickford company, having completed his work with Frothingham.

HORNER STARTS NEW SERIES

Ernest R. Smith and F. H. Nickel have absorbed the Beau Arts Film Company. Bob Horner, formerly connected with Universal and Lasky, will continue as writer and director of their series of western dramas.

AT GOLDWYN

Another story by Rupert Hughes went into production last week. It is "The Old Nest," which is being directed by Reginald Barker. The author wrote the continuity.

Director E. Mason Hopper is at work on "The Bridal Path."

Leroy Scott's first original story, "The Night Rose," is being filmed under the direction of Wallace Worsley.

"The Alibi," a Frank Lloyd Production being made by Goldwyn from the story by Charles Kenyon, is making fine progress.

An original photoplay by Elmer L. Rice has been purchased as the next starring vehicle for Will Rogers. Bernard McConville, who wrote the screen version of "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," is now adapting the Rice story. Rogers, Director Clarence Badger and other members of his company are now in New Orleans taking the final scenes for "An Unwilling Hero."

AT VITAGRAPH

William Duncan and Edith Johnson are producing the last episodes of "Fighting Fate," and have returned to the studios after two weeks at Long Beach, where ocean scenes were taken.

"Three Sevens," Antonio Moreno's first feature in two years, was shipped to eastern Vitagraph this week for final editing. Chester Bennett directed.

Larry Semon has finished "The Hick," and after a few days of cutting, this comedy will be shipped east. Larry wrote his next one during his recent illness and the sets are ready for him to start shooting as soon as "The Hick" leaves the studio.

Joe Ryan and his western troupe, filming "The Purple Riders," have returned from San Francisco, where a location trip was made for Chinatown scenes. The eighth, ninth and tenth episodes will be finished simultaneously this week.

Earle Williams will complete "Loot of the Night" in two more weeks under the direction of David Smith.

AT UNIVERSAL

Erich Von Stroheim has returned from Monterey, where for ten weeks he has been filming scenes for "Foolish Wives," his forthcoming production.

Production will start soon on "Fanny Herself," the Edna Ferber story which Tod Browning is going to direct with an all-star cast. The director is assembling his people now.

"The Dangerous Moment," a Greenwich Village story, will be Carmel Myers' next. Marcel de Sano, who will direct the star, is now casting the picture.

Eva Novak is in the middle of her current picture, "The Girl and the Goose," under the direction of Fred Leroy Granville.

The theatre at Universal City is being used for the theatrical scenes of "False Colors," Priscilla Dean's forthcoming photodrama of stage life. Stuart Paton is directing.

Rollin Sturgeon is editing "The Bobbed Squab," Gladys Walton's latest.

Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran are rushing their newest two-reel comedy to the screen to catch the high tide of the Blue Sunday agitation. The picture, which is called "Bootlegging," is a burlesque on fanatical reform.

The mountain scenery near Newhall is being used by Jacques Jaccard as a background for a two-reel western picture which he is making with Leonard Clapham in the featured role.

"SQUANDERED LIVES"

The Stoll Film Corporation presents an English-made picture entitled "Squandered Lives" at the New Pantages. It is an adaptation of Cosmo Hamilton's story, "Duke's Son," and features Guy Newall and Ivy Duke. There are rather too many characters and too little connection between them for satisfaction in the scenario, and the theme of the whole is scarcely beautiful. Still there are some entertaining moments. The lighting of the sets is miserably done, but we understand that they do not have the facilities for really good lighting in English studios.

Guy Newall, a very clever young actor, plays Lord Delamere quite typically. As the younger son of the Duke of Cheshire, who, cut off with nothing, finds it necessary to "cheat at cards" to make a living, he is scarcely an American's idea of a hero. However, his work, particularly his comedy touches, are put over with ease. We would like to see him in something that would give his personality more opportunity.

Ivy Duke is rather pleasing when natural. Some of her scenes are stiffly staged.

Edward O'Neill plays the Duke of Cheshire. His work is fair.

We cannot say as much for Philip Hewland, who does Lord Tarporley, the elder brother.

Hugh C. Buckler is very well cast as Sheen, a gambler.

Mary Merrill plays his wife, a mixed-up bit that means nothing whatsoever to the story.

Chas. Denbigh Smith is very amateurishly accomplished by C. Lawford Davidson. He is apparently meant for the heavy.

Tonie E. Bruce, Winifred Sadler, Sadie Jerome and Douglas Munro all do minor parts.

"THE LOVE LIGHT"

Mary Pickford plays at the California in her latest production, "The Love Light," which was written and directed by Frances Marion. The picture on the whole is well cast and the performances are excellent. They fail, however, to redeem the untimely and inconsistent story. It is a series of heart rending incidents flavored, it is true, with a bit of typical Pickford comedy, but dwelling in great part upon war sorrows which the American public is striving to forget as speedily as possible. The theme is scarcely old enough to be considered as history, and yet fortunately not of the present day.

The charming little star is at her best as Angela, and her wonderful performance entirely eliminates a question as to her type suitability in the Italian part. In fact, we have never seen her do anything to compare with this work, dramatically. For this reason the picture will prove a great box office attraction.

Raymond Bloomer may be said to play the male lead. He is an excellent type for his role of Giovanni, and several of his blind scenes are unusual. Cecil Holland may be credited with the very effective "blind" make-up.

Fred Thompson plays Joseph, the German spy. He has little action and makes little of it.

Albert Prisco and Edward Phillips are very good as Angela's brothers, Pietro and Mario.

George Rigas' comparatively few scenes as Tony stand out effectively. Besides being beautifully cast, his work is striking.

Evelyn Durno and Jean De Briac play Maria and Antonio.

The production's setting and photography are a continual source of delight.

"THE JUCKLINS"

George Melford's production, "The Jucklins," is playing at Grauman's Million Dollar Theatre. As will be remembered by those who have read the Opie Read novel, from which it was adapted, it is a story of the South and deals with both the planters and mountaineers. It makes a fairly entertaining screen play, although it cannot lay claim to any new angles, and due to rather slow movement and several anti-climaxes, it is somewhat draggy. Moreover, an overly long list of principal characters divides the interest rather confusingly.

The beautiful locations, however, provide a treat in themselves.

Monte Blue heads the cast as Bill Hawes, farmer and school teacher. He will give the youngsters a thrill with his courageous management of the roughneck element in his district school. Generally his mountain characterization is very good.

Mabel Julienne Scott plays Guinea Jucklin, the young lady who wins the heart of Mr. Hawes. We have seen her much more interesting, but the part as cut really has few possibilities.

Lem and Susan Jucklin are well played by Charles Ogle and Fannie Midgely. Mr. Ogle's comedy is particularly good and his pathos is real.

Zell Covington does Alf Jucklin. His work is not very convincing.

Winter Hall plays General Lundsford, a wealthy planter, characteristically. His aristocratic men are always commanding.

J. M. Dumont as his son Chyd and the snobbish fiancée of Guinea means absolutely nothing, while Ruth Renick, as his sister Millie, fails to measure up to her reputation for intelligent ingenues.

William Boyd in the role of Don Stuart and Clarence Burton as the boy's unpleasant uncle, Dr. Etheredge, contribute to the rather wishy-washy opposition.

Guy Oliver, Robert Brower, Jack Herbert, Jack Hull, William Scott, Frank Weatherwax, Jack Byron, Charles Wildish and George Curry all do bits.

"The Jucklins" will probably prove a fair box office attraction, everything considered.

"THE DEVIL'S GARDEN"

Whitman Bennett presents Lionel Barrymore in "The Devil's Garden," at the Kinema. It is an appropriately titled story by W. B. Maxwell that includes probably more unadulterated sex morbidity than has ever been collected in one screen offering. Even its excellent characterizations fail to raise it above a level that is far too low to assist in this spiritually progressive cinema age. Sin has often been depicted for very great good, but this affair is merely a lurid tale of an "earthy" soul which accomplishes, singularly enough upon its own petition, only death.

The victim of a miserable disposition, an uncontrollable temper and the possessor of a wife with a set of values nearly as twisted as his own, William Dale is consistently interpreted by the star. Never does his characterization drop; and every movement is a convincing addition to work that is truly an artist's. Few truer pieces of drama have been accomplished before the camera.

Doris Rankin is an unusually good type for the role of Dale's wife, Mavis. Her work is rather uneven, and she fails to take advantage of several opportunities for dramatic action, but her absolute "appearance" for the part carries it.

Mae McAvoy is charming as the little gypsy nursemaid who is much desired by Dale. She has nothing to do, but, nevertheless, gives much promise.

H. Cooper Cliffe plays Lord Barradine, the seducer of Dale's wife, whom he murders.

"THE SINS OF ROSANNE"

Clune's Broadway is showing Ethel Clayton's latest Paramount release, "The Sins of Rosanne," a rather different story by Cynthia Stockley. It deals with the weird gifts of the Malay psychic and the power of suggestion over a child. Of course, the picture is inexcusably exaggerated, but it is also entertaining and will appeal to natures that enjoy its type.

The star is very interesting as Rosanne, the girl who worships diamonds for themselves alone, and has the power to injure whomsoever displeases her. Her struggle to overcome a force in herself that she cannot understand is the story.

Jack Holt plays opposite her as Sir Denis Harlenden, her fiancé. He is well cast.

Fontaine La Rue cleverly characterizes Rachel Bangat, the native woman who heals or hurts at will.

Fred Malatesta also accomplishes some good work as Syke Ravenal, diamond dealer and characteristic fiend.

Mabel Van Buren does Mrs. Ozanne and Grace Morse, C. H. Gledart and little Dorothy Messenger complete the cast.

TUCKER'S "LADIES MUST LIVE" READY FOR RELEASE

Arrangements have been concluded for the forthcoming presentation of George Loane Tucker's first production since "The Miracle Man." Mr. Tucker's latest photograph, upon which he has been working since the fall of 1919, will be shown to the public under the title "Ladies Must Live." The picture was adapted by Mr. Tucker from the Saturday Evening Post novel by Alice Duer Miller, and will be exhibited first to New York audiences. Work on the final editing of the picture was recently completed.

The release of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" is promised for February.

AMBASSADOR THEATER UNIQUE

The Ambassador Theater, which will open its doors to the public soon, is the only cinema theater which, though located in a hotel, caters to the outside public, and in which reserved seats only will be sold.

World premiers will be shown with the exception of a few photo classics recently released, which are of great enough general interest to warrant the breaking of this rule. The policy of a weekly change in program will be carried out consistently, and the pre-releases will be far enough in advance of other showing to give exhibitors throughout the country a chance to gauge the possibilities of a feature by the criticisms it receives.

In the intermissions of the afternoon and evening performances, interpolated bits of entertainment will be given from time to time in the lounging room which adjoins the main body of the theater.

METRO WRITER IN SERIOUS ACCIDENT

Frank Dazey was recently the victim of an accident that cost him the index finger of his right hand. Mr. Dazey, who is co-author with his wife, Agnes Johnston, in the writing of "Home Stuff," a forthcoming production starring Viola Dana, was driving to the Metro studios in Hollywood when he collided with a truck. The finger was all but amputated by the ends of pipes that crashed through the windshield of his car and struck his hand as he clutched the steering wheel.

"DAD" MORANTE, OLDEST MOTION PICTURE TECHNICAL DIRECTOR

The oldest technical director in the motion picture field is said to be Frank Morante, who has just celebrated his seventieth birthday. "Dad," as he is known by many in the local film colony, is the father of Milburn Morante, who is star and producer of his own comedies, and he is actively engaged as the company's technical director.

"Dad" served as technical director also for the Gale Henry company when his son was leading man for the comedienne.

A surprise birthday party was given in honor of Tom Gibson, director, last week by the members of the Milburn Morante company. Mr. Gibson celebrated his twentieth anniversary.

"Passion" comes to the New Ambassador Theatre Saturday night, February 5th.

James Corrigan will undergo an operation next week for stomach ailment which has bothered him for some time. Mr. Corrigan has but a few scenes left to enact in the "Peck's Bad Boy" film, and Director Sam Wood is rushing these with all possible speed.

Herbert Standing, who was originally cast for the role which Corrigan is now playing, had to retire from the "Peck's Bad Boy" cast with a similar ailment.

Scott McKee has just finished three consecutive pictures with Fox. He did the Mole in "Wing Toy," directed by Howard Mitchell; the Weasel in "The Unbelievers," directed by George Hill, and the Artful Dodger in "Oliver Twist," directed by Mil-lard Webb.

William De Mille's "Midsummer Madness" enters into its fourth week at Grauman's Rialto Sunday.

GOLDWYN GIVES LUNCHEON TO AUTHORS

TALMADGE COMPANY IN FLORIDA

Accompanied by her director, Norma Talmadge and her husband, and some of the principals in the cast of her latest production, Constance Talmadge will leave next week for Palm Beach to film scenes. The trip will serve as a vacation for sister Norma, who will have completed her latest picture, "The Passion Flower," by that time.

Constance Talmadge's new husband, John Piaglolou, will remain in New York City, where business requires his presence. He expects to join his bride within a fortnight, however.

REELCRAFT TO DISTRIBUTE UNION PRODUCT

The Union Film Company of Sherman made arrangements with the Reelcraft Pictures Corporation to distribute their series of Alt and Howell comedies. The first two, "Liquorish Lips" and "Marked Women," were completed before the holidays, and the latter is scheduled for release February 12th. The third comedy was completed this last week.

WES BARRY IN NEW ORLEANS

Wesley Barry left Los Angeles for New Orleans last Sunday morning to head a drive of 25,000 school children from Louisiana and Mississippi in behalf of the Hoover campaign for the starving children of Europe. He carried with him a message from the people of Los Angeles, written by Mayor Meredith P. Snyder, which wishes good luck for the drive.

CLARK PRODUCTION FINISHED

Filming of "Scrambled Wives," the first production from the studios of Marguerite Clark, and the vehicle chosen by the star for her return to the screen, has been completed and the finished picture will be delivered to Associated First National officials by February 1st.

Edwin H. Griffith directed the picture.

BARRYMORE DOING ENGLISH PLAY

Lionel Barrymore, under the Whitman Bennett banner, is now appearing in a picturization of the English melodrama, "Jim, the Penman," his fourth release under the First National banner.

Mr. Barrymore is spending his evenings rehearsing for the stage presentation of "Macbeth," which Arthur Hopkins will place in the Apollo Theater, New York, February 17th. Miss Julia Arthur will play Lady Macbeth.

While the film future of the star is being decided on, Barrymore will return for a short season to the speaking stage.

TO GIVE CAMILLE

Rose Dione, the French actress, who is at present with Max Linder, is soon to stage "Camille" under the auspices of Lucien Brunswig, for the benefit of the war orphans of France.

MEIGHAN AT GRAUMAN'S

Thomas Meighan, the Paramount star, will be seen in his latest photoplay, "The Frontier of the Stars," which starts at Grauman's Million Dollar Theater Monday. The story is said to be a thriller, and in it Mr. Meighan plays the role of a gunman of the underworld.

Otto Lederer has returned from San Francisco, where he has been in the hospital undergoing an operation on his wrist, necessitated by injuries sustained while working in a picture.

He is now with Tom Santschi playing a character part under the direction of William Bradbury.

Gladys Walton, who has just finished "The Bobbed Squab" under the direction of Rollin Sturgeon, has gone to Coronado to spend a week before returning to Universal City to start work on "A Kentucky Cinderella," F. Hopkinson Smith's well known romance of the mountain country.

Elmer Harris is exceedingly happy these days over a recent addition to his scenario staff at the Realart studio. As the 8½-pound arrival is just two weeks old, however, it is expected that at least 20 years will elapse before he is allotted his first script.

Tom Santschi is completely recovered from the effects of his operation for appendicitis and is at work again on his two-reel "westerns."

Your profession treated as a business proposition. One of the most successful producers in the business, a man who rose from the ranks, put away 10% for publicity. He made a plan; then carried it out.

What about you?

Come and see me and we'll talk it over.

Production Notes

Hoot Gibson is turning out another two-reel western under his own direction. It is entitled "The Cactus Kid." Gertrude Olmstead is his leading woman.

Edward Laemmle is concluding "The Range Rider," a two-reel western starring Jack Perrin.

"Heart of Arizona" is the title of a short reel western now being produced with Edward Kull directing and Eileen Sedgwick in the stellar role.

AT METRO

Malcolm St. Clair has been signed by the Comique Film Company, producers of the Buster Keaton comedies, released through Metro, according to an announcement made last week by Lou Anger, production manager of the firm.

St. Clair will alternate with Eddie Cline in directing the Keaton pictures, and the trio will collaborate in preparing the stories.

St. Clair's first picture, working in conjunction with the serio-comic, will be "The Goat."

Rex Ingram, who directed the Metro special production of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," and June Mathis, who prepared the screen version of Vicente Blasco Ibanez' story, have departed for New York, where this great picture will have its first showing.

Gareth Hughes, who was loaned by Metro to Famous Players to appear in the leading role of "Sentimental Tommy," is in Hollywood again, preparing for his forthcoming special Metro production. Bayard Veiller, chief of productions at the company's West Coast studios, has not yet announced the title of the new picture.

"Dated," a story from the pen of Maxwell Smith, will be produced with May Allison in the star role. This story recently was published in the Saturday Evening Post and was adapted for the screen by Molly Parro.

Viola Dana has departed for New York for a month's visit. Miss Dana has signed a new Metro starring contract, and is making the trip to the metropolis to purchase gowns. She will start work on "Coming Home," her next starring picture.

T. Daniel Frawley has become a member of the Metro West Coast directorial staff.

Three changes of titles of Metro productions have been announced by Bayard Veiller. "The Little Lady of the Big House," one of Jack London's novels, recently completed, will be called "The Little Fool." Alice Lake's most recently completed picture, which was filmed under the title "Mother Love," has been re-titled "The Greater Claim," while "Are Wives to Blame?" a Ben Ames Williams' story, in which May Allison is starred, will be released under the title of "Extravagance."

Alice Lake and twenty members of her company working on "Uncharted Seas," have gone to Flagstaff, Arizona, where many scenes for this John Fleming Wilson story are to be filmed.

BREWSTER-KEMBLE PRODUCTIONS CASTING

The Brewster-Kemble Productions have finished their first two-reel comedy, and wish to inform the profession that they are ready to receive registrations, preparatory to casting for their next picture.

It is the wish of this company to get a large roster of names, so that they may deal directly with the actor, instead of through the medium of the agencies.

ATLAS AT BALBOA STUDIO

The Atlas Film Company of America has leased the Balboa studio, and has started production on a series of twenty-six comedies featuring Jimmy Thompson.

AT THE BALBOA STUDIOS

Plans are being made by the Milburn Comedy company to move into new studios in Los Angeles. The company is presently occupying space at the Balboa studios, Long Beach, but its productions call for quarters nearer the center of the film colony.

NEW COMPANY IN BOSTON

The Metropolitan Pictures Corporation has been organized in Boston and plans are already nearing completion for the filming of Dr. George W. Galvin's novel, "A Thousand Faces," now running in serial form in the Boston Evening Record.

A two-year contract with Carl Morgan, formerly co-director with Maurice Tourneur at the World Film studio, New York, has been signed by the new company whereby Mr. Morgan has been made vice-president and director general of the company. Director Morgan was formerly casting-director of the Edison studios, New York.

CASTING SANTSCHI PICTURE

Casting is in progress at the Williams' (Brentwood) studio in Hollywood by Director Robert Bradbury of the Cyrus J. Williams company for "The Sheriff of Mojave," which is to be the eighth of the Tom Santschi series for Pathe.

INDEPENDENT FILMS ASSOCIATION TO OPEN NEW YORK OFFICE

Chicago, Jan. 25th.—Harry Rice, business manager of the Independent Films Association, will leave for New York within the next week to consummate an arrangement that will give the Independent Films Association an Eastern office. The United States will be handled in three sections. Eddy Eckels, President, will take complete charge of the West; Harry Rice, the Middle West, and the New York office, the Eastern territory and foreign sales. It is intended to put an exploitation department in the Eastern office under the supervision of the Chicago main office.

CENTURY COMEDIES

William Watson is still engaged on his two reel comedy, "Leaping Rajah and Dignified Lions."

"Superstition," under the direction of Tom Buckingham, and featuring Harry Swett, has been completed.

EMINENT COMEDIES TO HAVE PLANT

The Eminent Productions, a series of one reel comedies, are at present producing at Francis Ford studios while awaiting the completion of their permanent quarters now being built by the Chester Productions on Gower street, near Sunset boulevard. Director Geo. Jeske has just finished his third picture with Roscoe Karns and Alma Bennett and the Eminent girls, from the story by Frederick Bennett, who will write their stuff hereafter. J. Q. Tabor, a Hollywood capitalist, and E. E. Reynolds, exchange man, are the officers of the concern.

LESTER CUNEO COMPANY PREPARING

Locations are being selected for the Indian series of Lester Cuneo Westerns being made at the Doubleday Studio.

Robert Kelly, who directed "The Ranger and the Law," will again direct. He will be assisted by Frank Fanning.

The story and continuity were written by Henry McCarty and Leo Meehan, who also wrote the story for the first picture. The title for this picture is as yet unannounced. Production will start next week.

G. AND J. PHOTOPLAY CO. PREPARES FOR PRODUCTION

The G. and J. Photoplay Company has added another office to their suite on the fourth floor of the Chamber of Commerce Building. The continuity of the "ROAD TO NOWHERE" has been accepted and the production will start immediately after the first.

Will Jeffries will be the featured player and the remaining cast and the director will be selected next week.

CAREWE DIRECTING STEWART PICTURES

Under the direction of Edwin Carewe, "The Invisible Fear," Anita Stewart's new Louis B. Mayer-First National vehicle, has gone into production at the Mayer Studio. Walter McGrail and Allen Forrest head an all-star cast in support of the star. Hampton Del Ruth is author of the story and Madge Tyrone wrote the scenario. Robert Kurrle is in charge of the photography and effects. This is Mr. Carewe's second consecutive picture with Anita Stewart, the first being a Jane Murfin story filmed under the working title of "The Tornado."

Irvin Willat has secured Carlo Fessia as his company musician.

CHARLOTTE MERRIAM MAKES PERSONAL APPEARANCE

Charlotte Merriam made a personal appearance at the new Glendale Theatre last Saturday night in connection with the showing there of one of the series of Comicclassic Comedies in which she is being starred by Special Pictures. The entire series of Comicclassics in which Miss Merriam is to star has been booked by William A. Howe, lessee and manager of the Glendale Theatre for showing in that house.

NEW THEATRE IN GLENDALE

The Glendale Theatre which was recently opened in Glendale by William A. Howe, lessee and manager, is attracting much favorable comment on the part of those who have inspected the house. The theatre has a seating capacity of over 1,200, all on one floor, and is well equipped.

Mr. Howe, the lessee, has long been identified with theatrical enterprises in Chicago, and he has reserved a large loge in the new theatre for the convenience of the motion picture people, all of whom are cordially invited by him to inspect his new show-house.

George H. Kern has sent James Caldwell, his scenario editor, to Costa Rico to make preliminary arrangements for filming "The Unfoldment."

Claire DuBrey has finished her role with Louise Glaum at the Ince studios and is now enjoying a short vacation at Coronado before resuming work.

An original story by Lois Zellner has been selected for dramatization by Margaret Mayo, who is now at work upon the script in New York.

Screen TitlingA department devoted to the subject of photoplay titles in their literary, artistic and technical phases.

Conducted by Frank F. Greene

Without pretending to be a court of last appeal on the subject, this department is intended to be of service to the industry.
Letters directed to Mr. Greene at his studio, at 1128 Central Building, will receive his personal attention.FUNDAMENTALSIt is unnecessary here to dwell upon the importance of titles in motion pictures, but as to the preparing of the original title card
—the elements that enter into its legibility, attractiveness, photographic possibilities, etc.—we are concerned.The first need, after titles have been written in their accepted form, is a working medium that will photograph to the best advantage—a good black surface that will absorb all possible light, upon which is hand-lettered or printed the copy in a white that will reflect the greatest possible amount of light. And right here is an important item: A white which reflects yellow or pink rays of light will not copy as light as the original appears to be. Likewise a black that has a blue quality will result in disappointment. Oils and pastels have been used with more or less success. There is now a medium of black and white evolved by commercial artists with which some of the most successful plain and art titles are being made.For the message of the title it is obviously the better plan to use the plainest, most legible letterface. Some have argued that exception may be made in such productions as are peculiarly fitted to less readable letters—productions which will likely appear only before better class audiences—such as an old English letter for a Shakespearean play. Great care must then, as always, be taken with letter spacing, word spacing and line spacing. Letterface is elastic, especially in hand work, and to a greater degree than commonly recognized in type.
This fact works to the advantage of the compositor and there is seldom excuse for anything but excellent results.It is sometimes difficult to avoid an overloaded appearance, especially on main titles where display is desired. Each letter, word or line of reading is, in effect, a unit of detail and the result is disorder. This may usually be remedied by combining some of these units into larger units of composition so that several unit-lines may form a geometrical shape making a single unit and assisting materially to impart the title message.AN OPINIONI am moved to comment concerning the Paramount production, "The Fourteenth Man." The interiors showed the result of infinite care in lighting and the work of the principals was rendered more convincing through the subduing of unessential detail of the sets.Such an achievement is especially interesting to one concerned with the varied lighting problems of art title designing. The art principle of this success may be analyzed thus: One highlight on a black field demands complete attention, two divide the attention, a few can be followed and the brain be cognizant of the identity of the object from which each is reflected, but a multiplicity may be compared with the noises of a New Year's advent—no single one can gain prominence save by excessive effort.People Open for Engagement

Hackneyed Plots

Editor's Note: Here, Mr. Producer! Tack this page up in your scenario department—under the general head of "What not to write." It is a list of timeworn situations compiled by Wycliffe A. Hill, President of the Photoplaywrights' League of America, who challenges the scenario writing profession to let THESE rest for just one season. Other writers are invited to add to the list.

1. Where the villain has a mortgage on the home of the hero or heroine.
2. Where the little gypsy girl turns out to be an heiress.
3. Where the devoted wife decides to sell her honor to the villain to get money to enable an artist husband to achieve success.
4. Where twin brothers or sisters play the hero and villain, respectively, and are constantly taken for one another.
5. Where the hero and villain decide to gamble with cards or dice for the possession of the girl. Think of some new form of chance.
6. Where the Governor is prevailed upon by the girl to pardon her lover who has been convicted and imprisoned.
7. Where the hero or heroine is unexpectedly saved by the dying confession of the real criminal.
8. Where the major portion of the drama depends on court room scenes.
9. Where there is a rivalry between a rich young man and a poor country boy for the hand and heart of the girl.
10. Where a fool will is left that specifies that the hero or heroine shall, or shall not, get married by a certain time, or be disinherited.
11. Where a girl throws discretion to the winds to be able to dress in style.
12. Where the hero or heroine is beat at cards or other gaming by the villain and threatened with exposure.
13. Where the villain knows of the past life of the hero or heroine and uses threats of exposure to gain his ends.
14. Where the villain plots to cause a clash between capital and labor and is outwitted by the brave hero.
15. Where a district attorney or other official is persecuted because of his opposition to a vicious element.
16. Where mistaken jealousy is caused by a wife or husband seeing her or his helpmate embracing an unknown brother or sister.
17. Where the villain or villainess causes an estrangement between lovers by intercepting their letters to one another.
18. Where lovers about to become married learn that they are brother and sister.
19. Where a man renounces God because a villain has seduced his wife.
20. Where a husband neglects his wife and spends his money on other women, while she makes baby clothes at home.
21. Where the villain drugs the girl in order to accomplish his wicked purpose.
22. Where a rogue about to seduce a young girl learns that she is his own daughter.
23. Where the husband or father of the heroine suddenly loses his fortune gambling on the stock exchange and her pride does not permit her to accept the attentions of her wealthy young lover or friends.
24. Where the hero is wrongfully accused of embezzlement, cattle rustling, theft, or other commonplace offenses.
25. Where the young revenue officer who is hunting for a wicked moonshiner accidentally meets and falls in love with said moonshiner's pretty daughter.
26. Where a man who has served a term in prison is persecuted by officers of the law when he is liberated.

Do You Know This Girls Name?

PERSONAL
WANTED—The name and address of the blonde girl in dark, fur-trimmed suit who was at Frank's cafe, Hollywood, noon Friday, at front corner table. Have important information to her advantage. Phone 148-30.

I don't know whether you saw this ad in the dailies or not. Anyhow, if you were in Frank's Friday you must have seen her. I'd like to get in touch with her at the earliest possible moment.

I was lunching with a director from Lasky's and called his attention to the girl, being struck by her unusually attractive face. She wore her clothes with an air of distinction, and I suggested to my friend she probably photographed well.

"Who is she?" I asked him, as he knows 'most everybody in the film world.

"Couldn't say," he answered indifferently. "She's one of a thousand unknowns."

Then Fatty Arbuckle bulked in, and while the surrounding scenery was obscured, she vanished.

I will consider it a favor if anyone having information concerning her will advise me.

Inexorable Laws of Nature

Hydro-electricity as a power can compete with oil as a fuel when oil sells as low as sixty-five cents a barrel. It is doubtful in the face of the rapidly increasing demand and rapidly decreasing supply that oil can ever again sell at this price. Inexorable economic laws are establishing the supremacy of hydro-electricity.

As rapidly as can be, our industries are being transformed from an oil basis to a hydro-electricity basis. The day is not far distant when steam trains will be unknown, and when the harnessed snows of the mountains will furnish the driving power of industry.

You will benefit by this transformation—and you can have a profitable part in it.

Decide right now to inform yourself on this important subject by sending for "California Hydro-Electric Securities"—an interesting story of the new era of electricity.

Put your funds to work in sound investment securities that will pay you a sure rental and repay you the principal when due. Let us tell you about these opportunities. Call, write or phone for full information today.

The People Speak

Following close upon the heels of our last week's treatment of the morbid picture, came an incident that, in our estimation, was significant in more ways than one. If developments prove that the principles behind it were representative, and we believe that they will so prove, the problem of the entertainment of tomorrow's public is fast on its way to solution.

In conjunction with a pre release showing of Irvin V. Willat's "Down Home" at Miller's theater Wednesday morning, the Willat publicity department headed by Don Hix challenged the city's religious organizations and then the people themselves to make known their desires in the line of cleaner and happier cinema entertainment. Hundreds of every class were notified that an hour preceding the showing of the picture and such time afterward as they chose to utilize would be given to the promotion of a "get together" meeting of the public and the producer. Unusual as it may seem the affair, due to clever manipulation and an earnest desire to accomplish satisfaction for all, was a huge success. Its results may only be surmised. However, the mere fact that this step is bound to react to the great benefit of one production and its director means little when it is considered that just such a procedure was necessary to break the ice which for years has spread bleakly between some of our churches and the theatrical profession. In other words, the friendly signs now appear to be out on the doors of former adversaries which can only mean good for all concerned.

On behalf of the religious element of the community, there were present at the preview, Dr. Brougher of Temple Baptist church and Dr. Patton of the First Congregational. They both addressed the audience using as their main topic "Cleaner Pictures." They explained that they had personally recognized the inevitability and real value of the photoplay, long since, and that they employ the motion picture in their services despite the scarcity of such material as they would like to use. Dr. Brougher particularly emphasized the idea that a clean picture is not valuable to either the church or the public unless it is also a happy and an interesting picture. Both ministers declared that they were present to commend the wholesome film whether of a religious trend or not and to encourage its further production.

Later, the general audience was permitted to express its viewpoint on cards printed for that purpose. Its remarks followed in line with those expressed by the speakers.

That the public is now demanding all of the screen play that it can give in the way of the spiritually progressive, bright and wholesome theme has again been made obvious.

Business is going to be good for the fellow who fills the bill!

F. R.

Politics and Censorship

A recent Billboard sets forth two viewpoints on the censorship question. Politics appears to be playing a rather amusing part in this problem that should be exclusively the people's.

"Motion picture censorship, as now constituted in Ohio, may undergo a big change before the present legislature, which is now in session, gets through. Rumors are current that the present board, as now constituted, will be either abolished or some radical move made that will change the law all around.

"Not that censorship is unpopular with the members of the legislature, but the whole matter revolves itself around political patronage. The board, as at present constituted, was appointed by the retiring Governor Cox, and, as the terms of the members run for several years yet, the incoming Republican administration would like to have something to say about who is going to serve on the board, and this cannot be done unless there is a radical change in the law.

"The membership of the board is subject to the State Industrial Commission, and the majority of this board are Democrats and have several years to serve, and they will not listen to the removal of any of the present members, so the only recourse left with the incoming administration is to abolish the present board altogether and enact a new law that will place the patronage in the hands of the incoming Governor Davis.

"Locally much opposition is being framed against any change in the law as now constituted. Many women's clubs and many welfare organizations are opposing the change on the ground that censorship may be abolished altogether, and, while the present board has probably made some mistakes, taken as a whole it has done remarkably well.

"Representative Edward B. Strom of Grand Rapids has introduced in the lower house of the Michigan legislature a bill authorizing the creation of a movie censorship board, which would control the entrance of every film into this state.

"The board would comprise three members to be appointed by the governor, one of whom is to be a woman. Headquarters with offices and exhibition room would be located in Detroit in charge of the chairman, who would receive $2,000 annually, the other two members $1,500 each. The board would receive a fee of $2 for each 1,000 feet or less of film reviewed, although this could be lowered. The motion picture corporations desiring to lease films in Michigan would bear most of the expenses.

"The bill is nearly the same as the one introduced in the senate at the last session, and which met defeat. However, additional support is claimed for this bill this year, and a hot fight against the measure by the motion picture interests is expected.

"It is understood that Senator Eva M. Hamilton, also of Kent County, is working on a motion picture censorship bill which she will introduce in the senate."

WHEELER OAKMAN TO STAR

Announcement has come from Irving M. Lesser that he will immediately make arrangements whereby Wheeler Oakman will be featured in a series of five-reel Western photoplays. Mr. Oakman is to have his own studio which will be situated adjoining the Louis B. Mayer studios and work on the first production will begin immediately.

The Oakman features will be known as the "Bronco-Kid" series. This is the character that Mr. Oakman created in "The Spoilers." Lesser is now engaged in selecting a cast to support the star.

RAY FINISHES FIRST YEAR AS INDEPENDENT PRODUCER

Charles Ray is making rapid progress on the picturization of the Charles Hoyt farce, "The Midnight Bell," his sixth product for First National release.

According to Production Manager Richard Willis, Ray will take a vacation upon the completion of the Hoyt play.

Mr. Ray plans to spend a little more than a year on the remaining six pictures yet to be made on his present First National contract. It has not yet been decided what stories will be produced, but more than thirty likely ones have been chosen from an assortment of over a hundred novels, stage plays and original stories.

HARTFORD LEAVES FOR NORTHWEST

David Hartford, director and producer of James Oliver Curwood's North-wood stories and his staff embarked last week on a special car which carried them to Seattle, from whence they travel by train into Canada, and thence by horse-back, pack-mule and dog-sleds to the wilderness location chosen by Walter Marshall for the picturization of "The Golden Snare."

Two special baggage cars were necessary to carry the sledges, fur blankets, traps, snow shoes, cooking utensils, provisions and other impedimenta incidental to an explorer's outfit.

The animals which will be used in the production have been assembled at Seattle, excepting twenty-seven Siberian wolf dogs which Hartford has had in training in Los Angeles for several weeks under the supervision of Thomas E. Younger, chief "animal man" for the Hartford Productions. The entire retinue of animals will include 105 dogs, a double team of Alaskan reindeer, 11 polar bears and 37 wolves.

Among the players in the company are Lewis S. Stone, Wallace Beery, Francis T. MacDonald, Melbourne MacDowell, Ruth Renick and De Witt Jennings. The staff includes: Joseph Montrose, business manager; Gavin Young, assistant director; Thomas E. Younger, animal man; Walter Marshall, location man, and Walter L. Griffin, camera-man.

Hartford expects to complete the northern location scenes in six working weeks, but it is expected that much time will be lost en route, and that it will be nearly three months before the company returns to Los Angeles.

"CHUCK" REISNER TO DIRECT HAMILTON

The Ham-White forces have engaged "Chuck" Reisner, song writer and comedy director, to pilot Hamilton in future Mermaid Comedies to be released through Educational. Reisner was formerly co-director with Chaplin, helping the latter to produce "A Dog's Life," "Shoulder Arms," and "The Kid."

DWAN STARTS PRODUCTION

Allan Dwan has purchased the rights to "Johnny Cucabod," the Saturday Evening Post story by Wilbur Hall, and work upon the picture will be started immediately at the Hollywood studios.

He just completed "A Perfect Crime," his second picture for Associated Producers.

"BOB HAMPTON OF PLACER" FINISHED

Marshall Neilan yesterday completed the camera work on "Bob Hampton of Placer," an adaptation of the Randall Parrish book of the same title.

Marion Fairfax, who has handled all the Neilan scripts during the past year, adapted the book for screen presentation. In the cast are James Kirkwood, Wesley Barry, Marjorie Daw, Pat O'Malley, Noah Beery and Dwight Crittenden. The film will be released in early March.

LIGHTON COMPANY ON LOCATION

Wm. R. Lighton Productions, Inc., engaged upon the filmization of Mr. Lighton's "Billy Fortune" stories which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post some time ago, is completing the first of the western series, all of which are to be short reel features. It is tentatively called "Billy Fortune and the Limit Game."

The company is at present on location in the mountains back of Calabasas taking ranch exteriors.

Al McKinnon is directing and the author and producer, Mr. Lighton, is personally supervising production.

If weather conditions improve in that locality the outfit will return the first of the week.

MOROSCO STUDIO PLANS READY

The completed plans of the latest film addition to Los Angeles' picture plants were received this week by Oliver Morosco from Architect Aleck L. Curlett.

"The utilization of all the available space is in keeping with our policy to make even the walls work," explained Mr. Morosco.

"The interior of the studio will have four stages, so arranged that we will eliminate all lost space. Mr. Curlett has been working with illumination engineers for the last week and we are so designing the stages that we may have plenty of camera room to get all the possible angles.

"With the studio plans being completed, we expect to begin work very soon. But, of course, we will not have the structure completed in time for our first picture, "The Half Breed," which will be made in leased studio space here. We have practically completed the formation of the all-star cast for the picture and expect to make the announcement of the personnel within a few days."

AT VITAGRAPH

The studio is preparing for the arrival in Los Angeles on Feb. 8th of President Albert E. Smith and George Randolph Chester. The former has been in New York on a two months' business trip, a large part of it connected with the premiere of "Black Beauty." The latter is coming West to produce for the screen his latest piece of fiction, "The Son of Wallingford," which will be made in seven reels. The story is about to start in a national magazine. Mr. Smith, who has taken up his residence in Los Angeles, will remain here until summer.

Two pictures finished this week and two started with hardly an interval between, in keeping with the new production schedule inaugurated by W. S. Smith, general manager. Earle Williams finished "Loot of the Night," by Frederick J. Jackson, and under the direction of David Smith. He will start "The Secret of the Silver Car," with the same director soon. Larry Semon completed his first special comedy, "The Hick," and

"DOWN HOME" (Preview)

A preview was given Wednesday morning at Miller's Theatre of Irvin V. Willat's first independent production, "Down Home." It is a W. W. Hodkinson release. The story, an adaptation of the book, "Dabney Todd," is a rural one with a real punch, well placed and handled. It also has much human interest to fall back upon and the cast is unusually strong. The photography is somewhat uneven, but on the whole "Down Home" will prove more than satisfactory entertainment.

Leatrice Joy is seen in the leading feminine role, which happens to be the misjudged daughter of New Caanan's notorious village drunkard. The part is a simple one, but Miss Joy gains for it much sympathy and with careful handling saves it from becoming inane.

Edward Hurn plays opposite her in the role of Chet, the blacksmith son of New Caanan's philosopher, Dabney Todd. His work as the fearless yet tender-hearted lad, is a delight. He is excellently cast and further proves himself an artist at this sort of thing.

Frank Braidwood also gives the best performance that we have seen him do as young Shayne, the unscrupulous son of Redburn's saloon and cafe proprietor. His characterization is always consistent.

Perhaps the most exquisite touches of the piece, however, are accomplished by William Robert Daley, who interprets Joe Pelot, the pitiful old man whose good intentions forever lose in the face of drink, the monster that possesses him. His is the ability to command a tear from any audience at will, and he does so again and again with this performance. His subtleness has created a masterpiece.

Aggie Herring, James Barrows, Eddie Nolan and J. P. Lockney all do minor parts convincingly.

"MY LADY'S LATCHKEY"

The most interesting production that has recently been turned out of the Katherine MacDonald studio is "My Lady's Latchkey," a Finis Fox adaptation of "The Second Latchkey," by C. N. and A. M. Williamson, which is showing at the Kinema. The First National production is a carefully handled, well cast mystery drama that commands the attention every instant. Inconsistencies may be found in the story, but its point together with the above-mentioned qualities completely redeem it.

Katherine MacDonald fits nicely into her role of Miss Smith, a lonely girl who finds refuge in the love of an absolute stranger whom she saves from the world and herself with her faith. The part, on the whole, is a fairly quiet one, but even its tensest moments are well done.

Nelson Morgan, a master thief and incidentally a true gentleman and fascinating lover, is interpreted by Edmund Lowe. His performance is more than appealing and we may expect much from him in the future.

Claire Du Brey is also very good as the Countess De Santiago, an adventuress and business associate of Morgan.

Thomas Jefferson gets a couple of good laughs and offers a thoroughly satisfactory performance as Ruthven Smith, an agent for a London jewelry firm.

Hellena Phillips cleverly "puts over" Mrs. Ellsworth, a crabbed, messy and withal luxury-loving female, who creates a rather foggy atmosphere for the introduction.

Howard Gaye and Lenore Lynard are excellently cast as Lord and Lady Seton.

Edwin Carewe directed the picture.

"THE FRONTIER OF THE STARS"

Thomas Meighan is being featured in Albert Payson Terhune's "The Frontier of the Stars," a Paramount production showing at Grauman's Million Dollar Theatre. The story deals not very convincingly with crook life in New York and takes in the love affair of the boldest bandit on the East Side and a little invalid who apparently has spent her entire life upon a tenement roof. The setting and many of the incidents are inconsistent rendering the whole only fairly good entertainment.

IRENE HUNT

Playing the Dance Hall Girl in "The Big Punch"

Meighan has really very little opportunity in the role of Buck Leslie who, despite his introduction as a two-fisted gang leader, mostly occupies himself entertaining the girl of his choice among the chimneys. Only towards the climax is he given real action in a police chase and fire sequence which he manages very well.

Faire Binney plays Hilda Shea, the imaginative child of the housetops who attracts and reforms Buck. Probably due to the fact that her scope is confined to a wheel chair, Miss Binney's work is more interesting than usual.

Edward Ellis accomplishes Gregory satisfactorily, which is more than can be said of Gus Weinberg, who is cast as Ganz, a pawnbroker.

Alphonz Ethier and Florence Johns do Phil and Mary Hoyt.

Charles Maigne directed the production.

WORLD PREMIERE OF HOLUBAR PICTURE HELD

The world premiere of Albert Kaufman's presentation of Allen Holubar's "Man, Woman, Marriage," starring Dorothy Phillips, took place Monday, Jan. 24th, at the Regent Theatre in Patterson, N. J.

Both Miss Phillips and Mr. Holubar were present at the premiere.

It is expected that they will return to the west coast to be present at the western premier of this production at the New Ambassador in the near future.

"EYES OF THE HEART"

Realart presents Mary Miles Minter's latest release, "Eyes of the Heart," the film version of Dana Burnett's "Blindness" at Clune's Broadway. It seems that this is an underworld week, for here is another story of a dainty flower growing amid the sordid surroundings of the slums and thriving upon the love of pickpockets and sate crackers. However, taken comparatively, this picture has considerable value for a program offering.

The star gets along fairly well as Laura, the little blind girl, who believes that her tenement home is a palace and that her light-fingered friends are ladies and gentlemen of wealth and refinement. When, however, her sight is restored and her illusions shattered, making it necessary, evidently, for her to lose her mind her work can scarcely be termed effective.

Edward Burns plays the male lead, or Mike, who is rather scared out of his profession, thievery.

Florence Midgley does Sal, his shoplifting sister, quite typically, and Lucien Littlefield is well cast as "Whitey," her "steady."

Burton Law, however, walks off with the comedy and no inconsiderable amount of pathos as Simon, a Hebrew, who remains "within the law." His work is excellent.

Wm. E. Parson plays the real heavy, Dennis Sullivan.

John Cook, Fred Turner and Loyola O'Connor complete the cast.

Paul Powell handled the direction.

GETTING ACQUAINTED WITH INTERESTING PEOPLE

GEORGE RIGAS

George Rigas was born and educated in Greece. His father, who during his youth, managed a repertoire company to which the boy belonged, was a Greek. His mother was French. Before he was twenty-one Rigas had appeared in many dramatic parts which had given him sufficient experience to warrant his interpretation of Romeo, which he did at that age.

Later he joined another company to play the title role in "Son of a Shadow." With that outfit he successfully toured Constantinople, Salonica, Smyrna and Egypt, before coming to the United States.

For some time he appeared in World and Tourneur pictures and then he returned to the speaking stage to play Romeo once more. Later he did Oswald in "Ghosts," Figia in Tolstoy's "Redemption," and the title roles in both "Severo Tovel" and "Son of a Shadow," Renos in "Pygmalion and Galatea."

Mary Pickford witnessed his work in New York and engaged him to play Tony in "The Lovelight" now running at the California.

At present Mr. Rigas is doing the heavy in "Dangerous Moments," a Carmel Myers feature being produced by Universal and directed by Marcel De Sano.

The young actor is an authority on Greek drama and has had several works published on the subject.

He will make his home in California.

Screen TitlingA department devoted to the subject of photoplay titles in their literary, artistic and technical phases.

Conducted by Frank F. Greene

Without pretending to be a court of last appeal on the subject, this department is intended to be of service to the industry.
Letters directed to Mr. Greene at his studio,
at 1128 Central Building, will receive his personal attention.COMPOSITION

Mechanical and Artistic

Composition (the assembling of parts) in printing signifies the setting of type—the arrangement of letterface to facilitate reading, a more or less mechanical process. Composition in art signifies the placing of detail to produce a pleasing effect. Both are necessary in the making of good title cards.Some have overlooked the fact that the letterface part, as a unit, requires an artistic relation to the illustrated part, and they have super-imposed one over the other. Possibly each of itself is above criticism, yet by this procedure its legibility is impaired and the plot suffers as the observer attempts to identify the picture lost behind the letters.
As a parallel, a chef might say, "Feed 'em soup and pie in one dish, it all goes to the same spot." His theory may be logical, but what a jolt it would give our sense of taste!Composition may focus the attention, giving strong interest value on some one feature, or in opposite effect, may diffuse it with little attention value on any one point.
Each is useful when appropriately introduced. A case in point of the former is the main title of Louis B. Mayer's recent John M. Stahl production, "Sowing the Wind." A strong wind effect is secured by a sweep of light, strengthened by leaning grass and a wind-blown, leafless tree, all in a left-to-right sweep of graceful accord. Forging into the storm is a robed figure of dejected, hopeless mein, that makes a curve opposing the other trends, thus focusing attention at the point of interest. The lettered composition harmonizes as a balancing mass and its horizontal lines are neutral in their effect upon the pictured allegory.Good composition—experienced assembly work—means much in the production of a film or flivver.PHRASINGA title may be rendered more lucid if advantage be taken of every opportunity to group its phrasing in lines. Where the material permits such phrasing, the idea is completed and registered at the right end of the line and the mind is receptive for the next idea. The jump back to the left and down to the next line is less disturbing between ideas than between parts of an idea.
Notice the grouping of the following phrases:

KAZAN, the Wild Dog.

—a giant among his kind, as fearless as the men who drove him thru the perils of a frozen world.Where a title designer has worked lettering and illustration together to give "line phrasing," it is usually the result of careful calculation.Albert Capellani produced "The Inside of the Cup," the Paramount-Cosmopolitan picture which will be shown at Grauman's Rialto Theatre beginning Sunday.Lionel Barrymore has completed his picturization of "Jim, the Penman," the fourth and last production for release through Associated First National.People Open for Engagement

HAMILTON-WHITE RESUME PRO- DUCTION

After a three weeks' vacation Jack White and Lloyd Hamilton, producers of Mermaid Comedies, at Astra studios, have resumed production on the ninth comedy to be released through Educational Film Corporation of New York.

President E. W. Hammons, of the Educational Film Corporation of New York, will leave the metropolis in February for Los Angeles, to confer with Lloyd Hamilton and Jack White on the production and exploitation of future comedies and also to visit the various studios where Educational productions are made.

Production Notes

commenced his second, "The Rent Collector."

William Duncan and Edith Johnson have returned from Arizona where they were guests of Governor Thomas E. Campbell at "William Duncan Day," arranged for the European relief fund. The stars appeared personally in every theater in Phoenix. On his return to the studio he immediately started for Victorville, where final scenes for "Fighting Fate" will be taken on the desert.

Antonio Moreno is still enjoying a rest while his next production is being selected and arranged for the screen. Director Chester Bennett has just completed the editing of "Three Sevens," and the production has been shipped East.

The Joe Ryan troupe is progressing with "The Purple Riders," and has advanced to the tenth episode.

AT GOLDWYN

The company making Thomson Buchanan's "The Bridal Path," under the direction of E. Mason Hopper, will leave this week for Santa Barbara. The cast was completed last week with the addition of Andrew Robson.

Wallace Worsley, who is directing Leroy Scott's first original screen story, will take the company to San Francisco this week for exteriors. The author, who has been on the set every day, will accompany the company on location.

Reginald Barker is making progress on Rupert Hughes' "The Old Nest." Mr.
Hughes, who also wrote the continuity for the story, spends most of his time on the set.

Frank Lloyd, who is directing "The Alibi," by Charles Kenyon, has been leaving the "lot" every day for location in the vicinity of Los Angeles.

After spending a week at the Culver City studio in conference with Samuel Goldwyn and other officials, Mary Roberts Rinehart returned to her home in Pittsburg, Pa., last week, accompanied by Frank Dazey and Agnes Johnson, who will collaborate with her on her first original screen story.

AT THE ROBERTSON-COLE STUDIO

Ralph Lewis and Milton Sills play leading parts with Pauline Frederick in her latest Robertson-Cole feature, under the direction of Henry King. The Frederick company has been working alone for the past week on the new lot as Hayakawa recently finished his production and L. J. Gasnier is as yet preparing to start his next all-star special. Miss Frederick will remain idle but a few days upon finishing her feature, as plans are already under way for her next story.

AT UNIVERSAL

Under the supervision of Irving C. Thalberg, Carl Laemmle's personal representative, twenty-three directors are either starting, in the middle of, or cutting as many screen stories which will go to the theatres as two Jewel features, eight special productions, two serials, four western photodramas, three comedies and three other features of an educational nature.

Carl Laemmle will arrive at his west coast studios within the week to outline to Mr.
Thalberg a new schedule.

A new comedy unit has been added. It is being directed by Ward Hayes and the scenarios are from the pen of Scott Darling.
Billy Fletcher is to be featured with Ena

SAM WOOD TAKES FINAL SCENE OF "PECK'S BAD BOY"

The last episode in "Peck's Bad Boy" was filmed at Glendale this week. After the long delay on the production caused by the accident to Jackie Coogan, star of the picture, everybody from Director Wood down the list of players to "Queenie," the little dog in the film, seemed happy that their work was completed without a second interruption.

Irving M. Lesser, producer of the feature, Louis E. Loeb, production manager of the Peck company, and Director Sam Wood will spend the next few days looking over the film prior to its going to the cutting room. Mr. Lesser is mapping out a distribution campaign, details of which will be announced at a later date. The completed production will be in five-reel feature comedy length.

E. H. Griffith has signed a contract to direct for Famous Players-Lasky.

Barbara La Marr, who supported Douglas Fairbanks in his last production, "The Nut," is to be starred by J. L. Frothingham, according to a recent report.

Do You Know This Girls Name?

PERSONAL

WANTED—The name and address of the blonde girl in dark, fur-trimmed suit who was at Frank's cafe, Hollywood, noon Friday, at front corner table. Have important information to her advantage. Phone 148-30.

I don't know whether you saw this ad in the dailies or not. Anyhow, if you were in Frank's Friday you must have seen her. I'd like to get in touch with her at the earliest possible moment.

I was lunching with a director from Lasky's and called his attention to the girl, being struck by her unusually attractive face. She wore her clothes with an air of distinction, and I suggested to my friend she probably photographed well.

"Who is she?" I asked him, as he knows 'most everybody in the film world.

"Couldn't say," he answered indifferently. "She's one of a thousand unknowns."

Then Fatty Arbuckle bulked in, and while the surrounding scenery was obscured, she vanished.

I will consider it a favor if anyone having information concerning her will advise me.

Is The Exhibitor Blameless?

An expression by Benjamin B. Hampton upon the sex play in the February Pictorial Review has called forth published comments of various natures from those who represent both the fan world and the profession. To us, one of the most interesting angles of the entire affair was set forth in a letter to Mr. Hampton from Sydney Cohen, the president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners' Association. Extracts of the communication, which was recently printed in its entirety in the Billboard, appear below:

"Your article claims that the exhibitor (retailer) dominates the producer (wholesaler). Your conclusion is that the theater owner is responsible for the kind of pictures he exhibits to the public. Surely this is not logic. Aside from this lack of logic, the facts speak very loudly against your theory.

"You must know that the exhibitor has a very limited choice in his pictures, if he does not want to put a lot of them on the shelf and run his business at a loss. Most pictures are never seen by exhibitors until run at their theaters. They are sold to the exhibitor six months or longer in advance of the actual showing.

"Now as to the exploitation of the picture, you must know that the manufacturers, through their publicity exploitation bureaus so-called, furnish to the exhibitor the most risque and often the most ridiculous plans for advertising and exploiting the picture. If the exhibitor were not restrained by his common sense, and if he were to take literally the tons of printed advice that are hurled on him through the publicity mills of the producers, he would be in constant conflict with the penal law and spend much of his time either in jail or arranging for his bail.

"The exaggerated sex appeal as a sin against the common decency of the American people must be laid at the door of the producer. Taking your own method of reasoning, it is quite evident that the producers have misjudged the tastes and demands of the public, otherwise why would there be this universal outcry against the low-pitched appeal of the motion picture and against the exaggeration and degradation of sex?

"We cannot understand how you fail to remember that the motion picture manufacturer is the man who makes the pictures, and, after having made them, deluges the exhibitor with plans of exploitation. The exhibitor is the man who shows the picture, and I can assure you from my own experience that time and time again we had to cut pictures rather severely in order to insure our good standing with our audiences.

"You seem to forget that we exhibitors have absolutely nothing whatever to do with the titles selected for objectionable pictures, and, as you know, some of those titles are more objectionable than the pictures themselves."

No matter what view one takes upon the subject, it is easy to observe that all departments of the industry are inclined to dodge responsibility for this type of suddenly unpopular diversion, a fact which at least proves a promising recognition of conditions.

Stereoscopic (?) Motion Photography

By John Leezer

In view of the fact that there has been considerable comment of late on stereoscopic motion photography, a few more observations relative thereto may not be amiss.

Twenty-five or thirty years ago stereoscopic views were more common than now. Nearly every home had one or more sets, made up of scenes from all over the world. The two photographs, side by side, were viewed through an instrument called a stereoscope, the definition of which is: "An optical instrument for uniting into one image two plane representations as seen by each eye separately and giving to them the appearance of relief and solidity." In fact, the relief and solidity is a trifle exaggerated, nevertheless the characters are so lifelike that one feels he is himself a part of the scene. Now, if this effect could be attained on the motion picture screen, how much more interesting the scenes depicted there would be! As far back as 1858 stereoscopic pictures were projected by means of the stereopticon or magic lantern. Instead of the pictures being side by side, they were thrown one on the other. One through red glass, the other through green glass. When viewed through glasses of the same colors the picture stood out in relief in black and white. Since then other inventors have secured stereoscopic pictures, but in each case the final result was observed through prisms, mirrors, shutters, etc., and therefore could not be considered direct projection. About five years ago a photographer in New York stated that he had secured stereoscopic motion pictures. But it was necessary to provide glasses or stereoscopes for each spectator, and as long as auxiliary apparatus is necessary stereoscopic projection will be commercially impracticable. We are led to observe, therefore, that true stereoscopic results will never be attained by any direct method of projection; inasmuch as it seems necessary for the eyes to have the assistance of a stereoscope or separator, to properly sense relief and solidity on a screen. Even if this can not be made commercially practicable, some method will no doubt be evolved whereby an appreciable amount of relief will be attained which will so nearly approximate that of stereoscopic photography that we shall be content. We frequently see examples of this sort of relief photography in panoramic shots, where the camera has been operated from a moving automobile or boat. There was an interior scene in the picture called Cabiria, which showed distinct relief, due to the camera being operated from a moving platform. The reason for this is that about sixteen separate pictures are being made per second and if the camera is being moved horizontally some of the pictures will be

AT THE REALART STUDIO

Two Realart companies are working on location. Director Maurice Campbell has been spending much of his time at the Hotel Huntington, where resort scenes are being taken in the newest Bebe Daniels starring picture.

Director Henabery has likewise been using Pasadena as the locale for scenes in "Jerry," Mary Miles Minter's latest offering.

Chester Franklin, who directed Mary Miles Minter in "All Soul's Eve," is preparing to start on another story. Constance Binney has started work in New York on her newest picture, which is tentatively called "The Magic Cup." Vincent Coleman plays the male lead.

AT VITAGRAPH

William Duncan and Edith Johnson have just returned from Victorville, where the fourteenth episode of "Fighting Fate," their chapter play, was completed. Mr. Duncan will finish the fifteenth within the next two weeks.

Antonio Moreno has returned from a two weeks visit with friends in San Francisco, during the interval between pictures.

Larry Semon plunged right into "The Rent Collector" after finishing "The Hick," his latest special comedy, and is already well along with the forthcoming release.

Joe Ryan has completed the tenth episode of his western serial, "The Purple Riders," and will soon go to the Benton ranch on the Mexican border for more horse scenes.

Earle Williams is starting another feature this week after completing "Loot of the Night." The new picture is from Wyndham Martyn's novel, "The Secret of the Silver Car." David Smith is directing.

AT GOLDWYN

Wallace Worsley and "The Night Rose" company left the Goldwyn studios last week for San Francisco to take exteriors for Leroy Scott's story of the underworld. The author accompanied them.

E. Mason Hopper left last week with his company for Santa Barbara, where they will make exteriors for Thompson Buchanan's "The Bridal Path."

The photography on Charles Kenyon's "The Alibi," which is being made at the Goldwyn Culver City studios under the direction of Frank Lloyd, is being held up on account of the illness of the director.

Will Rogers returned from his home town in Oklahoma Sunday. He stopped off for a short vacation following the completion of his latest picture, "An Unwilling Hero," in New Orleans. Clarence Badger, the director, and the rest of the company returned last week.

AT LASKY'S

General Manager Charles Eyton has received word from the George Melford Company which went north recently on a location for Canadian scenes in "The Money Master," that the troupe ran into a heavy snow storm, which delayed work to some extent. In any event they are now obtaining the necessary scenes for the picture, which is by Sir Gilbert Parker.

Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle is working on an island this week somewhere out in the Pacific Ocean under the direction of James Cruze on Frank Condon's story, "Crazy to Marry."

Gloria Swanson started work this week on Elinor Glyn's original story, "The Great Moment," scenarized by Monte M. Katterjohn, and directed by Sam Wood.

Tom Forman expects to complete work this week on Thomas Meighan's star picture, "White and Unmarried," adapted by Will M. Ritchey from John D. Swain's story in Munsey magazine.

Wm. D. Taylor will begin work next Monday upon Cosmo Hamilton's story, "The Almighty Dollar," in which Ethel Clayton will star. Julia Crawford Ivers has adapted the story to the screen.

Cecil B. de Mille is still engaged in cutting his all-star production, "The Affairs of Anatol." It is understood that somewhere along about March 21 he will begin work on a new picture, but no details are as yet forthcoming.

It is announced by General Manager Chas. Eyton that a new room is in the course of construction at the Lasky studio for housing the electrical equipment, which has been extensively augmented as a result of the increased production activities. The Lasky studio at the present time is as busy as it has ever been in its history, according to a recent assertion.

AT UNIVERSAL

Current Reviews

"THE INSIDE OF THE CUP"

Cosmopolitan's version of Winston Churchill's "The Inside of the Cup" has opened at Grauman's Rialto. It is a consistent adaptation and will please the many who found interest in the original. Albert Capellani's direction of the George Proctor scenario is to be commended.

William P. Carleton heads the cast as John Hodder, the country rector who accepts the call to St. John's, where he meets pride and hypocrisy with their allies en masse. He is well cast and renders his role convincingly.

Eldon Parr, the man whose wealth and influence rule all that comes within his reach, is excellently done by David Torrence.

Edith Hallor seems to fit into the part of Alison Parr, his daughter, with unusual ease. The author presents his point through this character.

Jack Bohn is also true to type as Preston Parr, the old man's sensitive son.

Marguerite Clayton plays his sweetheart, Kate. Her work is a bit uneven, but she accomplishes a few scenes that are very good.

Excellent types do Richard Garvin and his wife. They are Richard Carlyle and Margaret Sedden. The former's work is unusually strong.

Albert Roccardi and Frank A. Lyon provide atmosphere and amusement as Wallis Plimpton and Ferguson, millionaire gentlemen with uncertain business principles and pious Sunday expressions.

Henry Morey, Irene Delroy and George Storey all do "bits."

"HOLD YOUR HORSES"

An exceptionally amusing Tom Moore comedy, bearing the illuminating title, "Hold Your Horses," is released this week at the California by Goldwyn.

E. Mason Hopper has handled the delightful Rupert Hughes farce (an adaptation, by the way, of "Canavan") in such a manner that its somewhat exaggerated slapstick touches call forth no adverse criticism, but rather blend the whole into a rollicking hour's entertainment that anyone would do well to see if only for the benefits of relaxation and mirth. The sub-titles, which are always clever and mostly Irish, add general joy to the story of Canavan and his pugnacious rise from street sweeper to political boss.

The role as done by Moore could not be improved. Both the original personality of this versatile son of Erin and the one developed by necessity and circumstances are immense. Here is one of the most interesting one-man comedies that we have seen.

Sylvia Ashton's performance as Honora, or Mrs. Canavan, the first, is characteristically good.

Naomi Childers does the aristocratic Miss Newness, who becomes Mrs. Cadbury, who becomes Mrs. Canavan, the second. Mr. Hughes cheerfully and with alacrity kills off the first or fighting feminine with dyspepsia that a place may be prepared for this lady of strategy. Ease in the accomplishment of anything should be admired.

Bertram Grassby is the unfortunate Rodman Cadbury III, who having audaciously married the leading lady and then further established himself as a heavy by forcing her to extricate him from a legal tangle brought on by his irregular business methods, is also carried effectively into the beyond to make way for true romance.

Sidney Ainsworth in a minor role completes the cast.

"PASSION."

On last Friday evening, one day prior to the opening of the Ambassador Theatre, the Los Angeles premiere of the First National release, "Passion," was held for the profession, press, and few favored society members. There was a large turnout which assisted in making the affair more than successful.

FLORENCE LAWRENCE

Who re-enters stellar circles in "The Unfoldment," a George D. Kern production

The much-press-agented European production naturally formed the big feature of the entertainment, which included an impressive presentation, and it is, from many viewpoints, indeed remarkable. Possibly the great number of technical flaws in this new version of Mme. Du Barry render it a bit disappointing, but more could scarcely be expected of a foreign-made film, due to the slow development of the industry on the other side. At that, it may truly be said to far exceed in every way any continental attempt to date. The sets and mobs are particularly effective.

The entire story is unusually well cast, although the star, Pola Negri, alone receives screen credit. Her interpretation of Du Barry is clever and absolutely finished. Her personality is compelling, and although she plays her role heavily, she gives it a human touch that far removes it from the work of other well-remembered vampires. Negri is an artist.

Louis XV is beautifully cast and played. This character is consistently and gracefully rendered by Ernst Subitsch, who directed the production. Unfortunately we are unable to give the names of the remaining support.

The Duke of Choiseul is done subtly and also with the grace that marks so many of the picture's performances.

Armand de Foix, the notorious Du Barry's first love, is quite convincingly played.

The man who does Count Jean Du Barry "mugs" it somewhat after the old fashion of American screen performers.

The other characters are handled satisfactorily.

Taken altogether, "Passion" is a real historical spectacle.

"PAYING THE PIPER"

Grauman's is showing "Paying the Piper," a George Fitzmaurice production, written by Ouida Bergere. It is another example of the modern drama which, although it has all the opportunities for a great punch, misses both through its handling and scenario, and results in a series of draggy incidents. Frankly we were disappointed in the production, for much is expected from Fitzmaurice. The picture's details are well cared for; in fact, they are too much considered, since they detract from the main action. The climax is blurred and in several instances expensive scenes and even whole sequences that mean nothing whatsoever to them are employed.

Dorothy Dickson plays Barbara Wyndham, one of the two leading feminine roles. Her characterization, that of a selfish, loose-moraled daughter of wealth, whose whims are indulged without regard for the ultimate cost, is excellent. Not for a moment does she drop it, and succeeds in accomplishing the best work in the piece.

Rod La Roque is seen in the role of Larry Grahame, an equally heedless and questionably principled heir to millions. His work varies, but on the whole he is satisfactory.

Alma Tell plays Marcia Marillo and rather overdoes the part. She has some good scenes, however.

Reginald Denny doesn't entirely convince as Keith Larne, but his action affords comparatively little opportunity for the unusual.

George Faucett and Robert Schable afford a great background as the wealthy fathers, Grahame and Wyndham. The former is always clever and the latter provides an amusing touch.

The photography and general setting of the production is beyond reproach.

"THE TRUTH ABOUT HUSBANDS"

Whitman Bennett presents the screen version of Pinero's "The Truth About Husbands," another story of a man's folly and a woman's intolerance, at the Kinema this week. The very fair cast fails to redeem an old viewpoint handled in a way that, although it might have once been considered startling, has since been shelved with other meaningless sentiment. Such themes are no longer popular.

May McAvoy appears in the feminine lead and her grace and personality make of little Leslie Brownell, who unknowingly marries Dunstan Renshaw, a fascinating bachelor with a none too savory past, a charming role. Again we say that a real future faces Miss McAvoy.

H. E. Herbert is also very interesting as Renshaw, the man whose love for his wife overcomes all that is base in his nature.

Anna Lehr is satisfactory as Janet Preece, but the action given her is absurd, and Ivo Dawson has a good "bit" as Lord Randolph.

Elizabeth Garrison, Richard Gordon, Arthur Rankin and Lorraine Frost number in the cast.

Kenneth Webb directed the production.

"THE LAW OF THE YUKON"

Realart presents its picturized version of "The Law of the Yukon," a Robert W. Service poem, at Clune's Broadway. Quite naturally much of the rhythm of the original is lost upon the celluloid, and without it the story falls back upon the old, old "hokum" of the Northern film. Gold strikes and dance halls, impossible villains and the improbable hero, a curly-headed ingenue and an unfortunate "fallen" female—you all know the rest.

OLD GRIFFITH STUDIOS AGAIN HUMMING WITH ACTIVITY

The old studio quarters of D. W. Griffith, which were recently taken over by the Independent Films Association of Chicago and are now known as the Independence City studios, started humming with activity this week with four different companies engaged in the actual filming of stories for the screen. According to Eddy Eckles, general manager of the plant, negotiations are being made whereby additional units will soon establish quarters at the studios and an expenditure of several thousand dollars is to be made on improvements, new stages, dressing rooms and other equipment necessary for the production of their stories. All pictures made at the studios are to be distributed by the Independent Films Association.

Pick-ups

GETTING ACQUAINTED WITH INTERESTING PEOPLE

Richard Headrick

The entrance of little Richard Headrick into pictures last year was directly due to the notoriety which he had received as the world's youngest swimmer. Since his first appearance before the camera, when he gave an exhibition of his almost unbelievable accomplishments in this line, for the Pathe Weekly, he has proven himself one of the screen's cleverest child actors. His first dramatic work was the baby in "Should a Woman Tell?" a metro picture. Later he was chosen by Bill Hart to play in the big western's features largely on account of his extreme naturalness and impressionability which rendered him a remarkable subject for direction. "The Testing Block," "The Toll Gate," "Sierra," and "The Whistle," the latter as yet not released, are among the Hart pictures in which "Itchie," as he terms himself, has proven his art.

The little fellow has also won distinction at the Louis B. Mayer studios, where he played in "The Tornado" with Anita Stewart, and ran off with many of the honors in Mayer's all-star production of "The Woman in His House." The last named is at present running at the new Ambassador theatre.

Richard is again with the Mayer forces playing a big role in the John Stahl production, "Muffled Drums." Besides being a swimming expert the child who is barely three years of age rides a bicycle and plays the violin. It will be of great interest to follow the career of this talented kiddie.

PARTY FOR JACK DONOVAN

Jack Donovan was guest of honor at a party given last week by Paul Getty at his Hollywood Mountain Park home. The affair celebrated both Donovan's twenty-fourth birthday and his return from a recent trip south.

Among those present were: May Allison, Eddie Polo, Mildred Considine, Maud Wayne and Mr. and Mrs. Hal Cooley.

Managing Director S. Barret McCormick of the Ambassador theatre has arranged for Marion Morgan of the Morgan dancers to stage a series of tableaux entitled, "Adam and Eve," some time in the near future.

THE HALLROOM BOYS PERFORM

Above are scenes from the newest Hallroom Boys Comedy. The series is being released by the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation of New York. These two-reelers are based upon the cartoons by H. A. McGill and are released at the rate of two a month.

Screen Titling

A department devoted to the subject of photoplay titles in their literary, artistic and technical phases.

Conducted by Frank F. Greene

Without pretending to be a court of last appeal on the subject, this department is intended to be of service to the industry. Letters directed to Mr. Greene at his studio, at 907 Central Building, will receive his personal attention.

ART TITLES

Their Psychological Value

The visual narration of a photoplay upon a screen may be considerably facilitated by appropriate art work on the titles. Such a design should be the acme of simplicity (the mark of real art is simplicity).

As a mere decoration the art title seldom has place in a film production, for the plot progresses with each turn of the crank and such irrelevant cross currents serve only to confuse it. The majority have been of this class and have brought some producers to look with disfavor upon all. Yet with an analysis of their purpose, possibilities and relation to other elements of the production, it will be seen that they have their place.

I am reminded of a good example, a title in Drascena's initial production where Elsie Albert as the lead is left dependent with the care of several younger children. The illustration in simple design pictures a mother bird feeding her little ones, which are yet mere nestlings. Instantly it begets an atmosphere of parental watchfulness and loving care and the audience reads with sympathetic appreciation, "Mary Ellen, eldest of the motherless children, fought bravely to preserve the little home."

An entirely different—a predatory type—of character in W. N. Selig's "Kazan" was introduced with an illustration showing a night-prowling leopard, and though it probably will not occur to us that "the leopard cannot change his spots," still we feel it instinctively and we read with a feeling of wariness, "Black" McCready, a throw-back from the primitive, whose sudden nature has absorbed all of the worst and none of the best."

To produce worth while art titles requires ability and care. The problems of an artist in this line are least apparent when best solved. Art work serves as a psychological background clarifying the lettered portions of the plot in much the same way as a set is the material background for the action. Each should achieve its purpose or it had better be eliminated, for it is a detraction.

LIKE SUSIE'S DRESS

When mother buys a dress for Susie she expects to find it necessary to take up and let out, to shorten or lengthen, in order that it will conform to the peculiarities of Susie's make-up. The result is that Susie's beauty is enhanced and she is a pleasing subject to look upon.

Just so with titles, art or plain, it is utter carelessness to endow a beautiful production with titles of a haphazard appearance—short lines and long lines, extended letters and condensed letters, and a zig-zag broken margin at the right.

It is possible, practicable and highly desirable, as with Susie's dress, to make the composition conform to the peculiarities of the subject matter in a way that delights the eye and does not detract.

J. Lander Stevens is creating the role of Socrates Potter in the Rockett Film Corporation's production of Irving Bacheller's story, "Keeping Up With Lizzie."

The Man of Today

By Kay De Kay

One hundred and twelve years ago today the sun rose bright and smilingly, as if something of unusual importance was happening—but just what it was nobody knew.

In an old shack in Boone County, at the foot of a Kentucky mountain, a happiness whose cause was unknown to the world had come to reign.

Seventeen years afterwards we meet the being who had caused this happiness, still obscure and unknown, but who contains the seeds of greatness.

But the world soon realized that he was the man of the hour, and the only one who had the moral courage to stand by the strength of his convictions.

This was the first and only man who stood up and declared that all government should be "Government of the people, by the people, and for the people."

So let not America only, but the whole world, hold this day sacred in his memory.

Lincoln died long ago, but his spirit is still with us.

JACKIE COOGAN TO APPEAR IN SAN FRANCISCO WITH "THE KID" SHOWING

Jackie Coogan will go to San Francisco this week. Mayor Rolph will meet him at the depot and he will be escorted (a la George Beban) to the City Hall, where the key of the city will be presented to him.

Jackie states he will not lose the key such as it is said a certain freckled-face boy film celebrity did on his recent trip to New Orleans. The Tivoli Theatre in San Francisco will have Jackie appear on the stage at the conclusion of the showing of "The Kid."

Plans are being laid for an outdoor reception headed by Mrs. Temple Crocker. The reception will be held in Golden Gate Park, where, it is planned, Master Coogan will meet the school children of San Francisco. The child will also make a personal appearance at a reception at the Fairmont Hotel.

BENEFIT PERFORMANCE WILL MARK CLOSE OF HOOVER FOOD DRIVE HERE

A benefit performance will take place Thursday, February the 17th, at the Philharmonic Auditorium. Every dollar taken in will be turned over to the Hoover fund for the starving children of Europe. The executive offices of the Hoover drive are located at 219 H. W. Hellman Bldg.

The benefit will begin at twelve o'clock noon and continue throughout the entire day until midnight. Many stage and screen stars have promised their aid and will personally appear on the Auditorium stage. Each motion picture theatre will contribute an act as well as the Orpheum, Pantages, and other local variety houses.

A committee of 100 society and business people will sell these tickets. Its members plan to make a canvas of the entire city.

Sol Lesser has been appointed Chairman of the entertainment committee.

LOIS WEBER TO ATTEND NEW YORK PREMIER OF LATEST PRODUCTION

Lois Weber has arrived at the Great Northern Hotel, New York. While in New York Miss Weber will attend the Paramount metropolitan presentation of "What's Worth While," her latest feature picture, which will be shown in New York late in February.

NEILAN SUED

Suit for $150,000 damages has been brought by Mrs. Martha Hutchinson of Los Angeles against Marshall Neilan, the producer of "Dinty." Mrs. Hutchinson claims that this picture, which has already earned over $300,000, was written by her and submitted to Mr. Neilan under another name.

Walter W. Emerson is now playing with the Alcazar Stock Company in San Francisco.

Franklin K. Lane, ex-secretary of the Interior, was the guest of Major Rupert Hughes at the Goldwyn studios last week.

The scenario for the last Chester Conklin comedy, "His Model Day," which showed at the New Pantages last week, was written by E. C. Maxwell from a story by Frank Terry.

A series of two-reel satire comedies by Everett C. Maxwell, written for the late Wm. (Smiling Bill) Parsons, and known as "The Americanisms of Thaddeus Phipps," are soon to be produced for First National program.

Current Reviews

The snow scenes and their photography, however, are very attractive and the youngsters will be thrilled.

Edward Earle plays the male lead, or Morgan Kleath, a journalist with a past. He accomplishes the part consistently and does as much as possible with it.

Nancy Deevers is Goldie, a rather exaggerated little ingenue. Her characterization can scarcely be said to incorporate the requirements of a heroine, but there are probably women of this type even in Alaska.

June Elvidge does the female heavy, Mrs. Meredith, while Tom Velmar and Warburton Gamble rather divide corresponding masculine honors.

Joseph Smiley plays Tim Meadows, dance hall proprietor and foster father of Goldie.

Charles Miller directed the picture.

Stereoscopic (?)

of one side and front of the object and the others of the front and other side, and as our eyes see things so slowly, the illusion of roundness or solidity is easily created. We do not think that this kind of photography would be desirable at all times, yet if it is available and can be used when desired, it will be a wonderful advance for motion photography. If the gentlemen in Chicago have attained commercially practicable relief photography, more power to 'em!

STURGEON PREPARING STORY

Another special production for the Universal program is in preparation at the office of Director Rollin S. Sturgeon.

The subject under treatment was selected by Laemmle, and several weeks of preparation are necessary to get the big feature in shape for "shooting."

Otto C. Kottka is doing his second picture with Atlas. He recently finished with Jimmie Thompson, and is now playing the heavy supporting Charlie Conklin.

"What's Worth While," Lois Weber's third original special Paramount production, opens at the Grauman Million Dollar theatre on Monday.

Charles L. Hertzman, director of publicity at Universal, is rapidly recovering from the illness which has confined him to the Clara Barton Hospital. In the absence of the chief of the publicity department is being run by Malcolm S. Boylan, his first assistant.

The Time to Invest in Industrials

You have heard the remark, "Now is no time to invest in industrials," but reason the situation out in this light:

In times of prosperity all companies are prosperous, and there is little to differentiate the sound from the unsound. But in periods of industrial depression, in testing times, such as those occasioned by shrinking inventories, from which we are now emerging, only the sound, the strong, the efficient, make money.

This is a time when an investor can put his money into industrial concerns of this character and know that he has made a safe choice.

The Portland Flouring Mills Company is a sound, strong, efficiently managed company. Its property value is more than ample to secure the $3,000,000 First Mortgage 8% 15-Year Gold Bonds which we offer and recommend as a safe investment for your funds.

The company is as old and established one. It has been in continuous and successful operation since 1884, and is firmly rooted in the territory which it serves.

The earnings are large and steady, and the ownership is the very strongest and most experienced in this line. The character of the business is exceedingly stable. You should invest your funds in bonds of this character.

Call at our office today for a personal conference, write or phone for full information.
The price of these bonds is 100 and interest, yielding you 8% on your investment.

Another Benefit Victory

Any time that Los Angeles thinks it can put over a project, whether it be an official drive or a charity entertainment for some old ladies' home, without the aid of the moving picture people, we hope to be the first on the list of those notified. That is because we love long, hearty laughs of the sort that such an attempt would provoke. But even hard-boiled, super-critical Los Angeles isn't likely to try that which precedent has proven impossible—not in a million years! The most attractive and most press-agented society leaders, church dignitaries, and even the most popular of political representatives, cannot be depended upon to entice time and money from the public of 1921, or 19 any other number, with anything like the success that has accompanied the activities in this line of our cinema players.

It is not so much to further impress the above recognized fact, but rather to announce another overwhelming victory in the benefit performance line, that we rehearse it here. For Thursday afternoon and evening brought the triumphant climax of one of the most commendable of recent charity drives. The affair proved the big feature of the local campaign for the starving children of Europe, generally known as the Hoover Fund.

Exhibitors the country over have been doing all in their power to raise money for this cause during the past few weeks, but this show, staged in the Philharmonic Auditorium, sounded a valuable personal note with its informal introduction of picture favorites to audiences which appeared to be more than pleased with the vaudeville talents of the people who regularly entertain the masses with their screen work.

Besides the paid admissions (and by early evening the house was packed to the doors), much was realized for the project in hand from auctions and collections which were interspersed between the acts.

The Sol Lesser offices, being the headquarters of the drive in this city, managed the details, and much credit is due the Lesser organization for the wholly satisfactory results.

Charlie Murray acted as master of ceremonies, and as usual kept the audience in an uproar. Right here let us say that Mr. Murray has probably done more for humanity, motion picture and plain garden variety, than any other one man that we know. His seemingly limitless energy is ever employed in behalf of the world's less fortunates, and he deserves as much commendation as he will ever receive and then twice as much again. He introduced the long list of artists who generously donated themselves and their accomplishments for the occasion.

Included in the number were: Ben Turpin, little Jackie Coogan, Johnny Jones, Mildred Harris, Bebe Daniels, Bill Desmond, Carter De Haven, Harold Lloyd, Wallie Reid, Billie Rhodes, Shannon Day, Ora Carewe, Jack Conway, Clara Horton, Chuck Reisner and Harry McCoy. Many other stars contributed articles for the auction.

We are waiting for some one to call our attention to a circle anywhere that has proven itself more loyal, industrious and unselfish than has the Los Angeles picture colony. We're proud of our people.

The Play and Its Personality

A rather interesting article entitled "What's Wrong With Your Play?" appears in the last issue of Theatre Magazine. It sets forth the viewpoint of the theatrical manager with regard to the near professional playwright, and it is possible that the following explanatory paragraphs selected from it may prove as enlightening to the scenario writer as to his brother, the stage author.

"Almost everyone attracted to literature at all, has tried some time or other to write a play.. Ask these would-be dramatists why their work has never reached the footlights and they'll put the blame on the theatre manager, declaring that he failed to see any merit in their brain-children.

"The principal fault to be found with the majority of plays which come to the producer is that there is no appeal in the subject matter. This fault is due to lack of craftsmanship. In other words, the embryo playwright doesn't know his business.

"Appeal in a play is just as elusive as that quality in an actor or actress, which for want of a better term, we call personality. The usual run of plays have no appeal—no personality.

"There are, of course, dozens of other reasons why producers decline to consider a certain play, as, for instance, the absence of an interesting plot; poor character drawing; the too-oft-told triangle sans a new angle; abundance of narrative and paucity of drama; too little humor and lack of comedy or farce; weakness of what should be the nemesis, or propelling factor in farce; and hackneyed situations of melodrama. But the principal factor lacking in plays submitted is appeal."

"Life" Recognizes the Film

We notice that Life has introduced a photoplay review section which promises to adhere to the policy of that journal by being at least entertaining. Robert E. Sherwood is conducting the new department, the installation of which but further proves the inevitability of the film—everywhere. Taking another angle, it is altogether likely that a few outside criticisms, with their necessarily different presentations, may prove of some benefit to the industry.

Film Capital Production Notes

KING VIDOR JOINS ASSOCIATED PRODUCERS

King Vidor will make a series of special productions under a contract with the Associated Producers.

He is the ninth director to align himself with that organization, which includes Thomas H. Ince, Marshall Neilan, Maurice Tourneur, George Loane Tucker, Allan Dwan, Mack Sennett, C. Gardner Sullivan and J. Parker Read, Jr.

Vidor will make four special productions, with all-star casts, during 1921. The first of these stories will be known as "Love Never Dies." It is an adaptation of Will N. Harben's novel, "The Cottage of Delight." King Vidor has completed the scenario, and production will begin almost immediately. Carol Owen, who titled "The Jack-Knife Man" and "The Sky Pilot," has been engaged to write the subtitles.

In connection with the filming of "Love Never Dies," the company will soon journey to New York. However, Vidor Village and adjacent California "locations" will suffice for a great deal of the story, wherein the locale is Tennessee and North Carolina.

NEILAN TO DO ONE PICTURE IN NEW YORK

Marshall Neilan left Los Angeles last Saturday for New York, where he will produce his next picture for Associated First National release. The story upon which Mr. Neilan has decided has not as yet been titled, but it will have New York as a locale.

Colleen Moore has been engaged to play an important role in the new production. Others who accompanied Neilan East were David Kesson, the Neilan cameraman; Leeds Baxter, business manager; Lucita Squier, continuity writer; and Daniel Grey, film editor.

Pete Smith, Neilan's press representative, preceded the party by several days. Smith will confer with Associated First National officials regarding exploitation plans for "Bob Hampton of Placer," which will be released within a short time, and also make preliminary arrangements for a studio where the next picture will be filmed.

According to present plans Neilan will return to the West Coast upon the completion of the one picture in the East.

PACIFIC FILM COMPANY PROGRAM OUTLINED

A production program has been outlined by Manager John J. Hayes following the removal of the Pacific Film Company to its new studios at Culver City.

Work for the present is confined to one-reel George Ovey comedies. His schedule calls for one release each week. As spring advances five-reel features will be filmed.

About ready for release is the scenic drama, "The Call from the Wild," recently filmed in the High Sierras. In this production Frankie Lee and "Highland Laddie," the collie dog, are the stars.

"The Fatal 30" is ready for the screen.

AT THE ROBERTSON-COLE STUDIO

Louis J. Gasnier, who produced and directed "Kismet" for Robertson-Cole, will start his third all-star feature for that company early next week. Gerald Duffy is at present working on the continuity. Mark Strong, Gasnier's assistant, is getting ready to shoot a few exteriors this week. Arthur Edeson will handle the camera.

Christy Cabanne will have the cast for his next feature selected shortly and will start shooting next week.

NEW WESTERN COMPANY

P. K. Magenheim, ex-cattle king of Arizona, has formed the Harmony production, to make two and five reel westerns.

He has already engaged Pauline Curley, Jack Livingston and Harry Von Meter.

AT GOLDWYN

Will Rogers, who recently returned from a vacation in his home town, started work last week on "The Romeo," his latest starring vehicle under the direction of Clarence Badger. Rogers plays the part of a cowpuncher who leaves the range for the movies.

A huge ball room set has been erected for the staging of the final scenes in "The Night Rose," the Leroy Scott story. Five hundred couples will be used in this set this week. Wallace Worsley is directing.

E. Mason Hopper and company making "The Bridal Path" returned from Santa Barbara last week. The exteriors of some of the city's millionaire homes were photographed for this story by Thompson Buchanan.

Twelve productions to be filmed in the near future have been announced by Mr. Goldwyn who has returned to New York. They are "The Purple Flask," by Gouverneur Morris; "The Ace of Hearts" also by Gouverneur Morris; "From the Ground Up," by Rupert Hughes; "Hungry Hearts" by Anzia Yezierska; "The Romeo," starring Will Rogers; "The Poor Relation," also starring Rogers; "The Mother," by Leroy Scott; "Jane," by Mary Roberts Rinehart; "The Grim Comedian," by Rita Weiman; "The Christian," Hal Caine's novel, and "Honest Tom," by Charles Kenyon.

AT THE INDEPENDENT STUDIOS

The fifth of a series of 24 two-reel situation comedies to be made in a year, starring Max Roberts, was completed this week, under the direction of James Clements. The story bears the title "The Ting Tong Man," and will be released through the exchanges of the Independent Films Association. The Roberts comedies are being produced by the Pinnacle Comedies, Inc., of which Sam Kline is president.

Webster Cullison is planning to take his company, headed by Neal Hart, on location to San Francisco this week to film nautical scenes for "God's Gold."

Announcement was made this week that the Independent Film Association had contracted for the entire series of two-reel outdoor dramas starring Ray Gallagher. Production on the first story, "Go-Get-Em," is now under way, under the direction of Charlie Roberts.

Pete Morrison is nearing the completion of his initial two-reel western special for the Tattenham Productions, Inc. The story bears the title "The Long, Long Trail."

The personnel of the Independent Films Association is announced as follows:

Eddy Eckles, president and general manager; Harry Rice, vice-president and business manager; N. A. Woody, treasurer; Howard Robertson, sales manager. Other officers include Sam Kline, Hugh Woody, Daniel F. Tattenham and Arthur Henry Gooden.

AT THE HAMILTON-WHITE STUDIO

The tenth Hamilton-White Mermaid comedy, "West Is West," produced by Jack White and featuring Jimmy Adams, Lige Conley and Earl Montgomery, was finished this week and the film shipped to Educational in New York.

E. W. Hammons, president of the Educational Film Corporation was a visitor to the studio this week, where he conferred with Jack White and Lloyd Hamilton.

Hamilton and White have only one more comedy to produce on their old contract. They will, in all probability, sign again with Educational.

Current Reviews

"WHAT'S WORTH WHILE"

If we ever hated to write a review, it is this one. In the first place, we are a woman, and being of the species we hate to hit any other woman of any profession, who is either doing or attempting to do real things. Perhaps our intense belief in our own sex is somewhat singular, but it is none the less sincere; so a sigh accompanies the following:

Lois Weber's latest Paramount release, "What's Worth While," is at Grauman's. Its production was, judging from the very effective sets and gowns, accomplished at great expense. Neither the story nor the cast may be said to justify any expenditure at all. If this picture had been turned out by a cheap concern from which little is expected, it would be poor; coming from Lois Weber, the pride of motion picture femininity, it is inexpressably awful!

We grant that there is a germ of an idea in the story's theme, but its treatment leaves it undeveloped, and the performances make it ridiculous. Even the sub-titles fall down, robbing the whole of a last hope. In some instances, they predigest the action; in others it is not satisfactorily explained, while those remaining are squandered on foolish references to the extreme "worth whileness" of the western moon, the western sagebrush—in fact, the western anything. They succeed, however, in provoking considerable mirth. In spots, the scenario drags fearfully.

Claire Windsor's role, the Aristocrat, although there is little about it to gain sympathy, heads the cast. As much can not be said for her performance, which appears to be the work of an absolute amateur. Inexperience in itself is a stage that has been, at some time, endured and overcome by every artist in the world. Consequently, if we forget the seeming lack of judgment displayed in giving the featured part of any play into such unqualified hands, that trait in itself is not hopeless. But Miss Windsor has combined with its awkwardness and lack of technique, an affected manner that results in a ludicrous unease. It is positively annoying. She fails to express any emotion whatsoever, and it may be safely and fairly said that her entire role is a mistake.

Louis Calhern plays the Commoner, or the male lead. As an illiterate cowboy he is out of place; but later on he is more convincing as the rather quickly-created social leader.

Mona Lisa, as the Aristocrat's cousin, walks in circles around the latter when it comes to poise. We should enjoy seeing her really well cast. We believe that she will "hit" one of these days.

Edwin Stevens as usual takes all possible advantage of his part, the Commoner's cousin.

Arthur Stuart Hull has a few satisfactory scenes as the girl's father.

"RICH GIRL, POOR GIRL"

An interesting little comedy drama entitled "Rich Girl, Poor Girl" plays at the Superba. It features Gladys Walton and is by far the best picture with which she has been provided in her comparatively short cinema career. The story, although quite a steal from "The Prince and the Pauper," has some original twists that make it more than entertaining. Its box office value might be surmised to equal the latest Dorothy Gish comedies. It is above the standard of the average program picture. Technically it is only fair.

The little star is a good bet for Universal, if that company continues to give her fair pictures and good direction. She plays the dual roles, Nora of Fish Alley and Miss Vanderfleet, "the millionaire kid," and characterizes both consistently. Evidently a great deal of care was also taken by Harry Harris with her parts, and they are a credit to both the director and the actress.

Antrim Short plays Mugsy, the youth whom we find in Fish Alley. He overlooks a few points in his characterization, but nevertheless makes a lovable lad of the role.

PAULINE CURLEY

Being Featured by Harmony Films

Harold Austin is cast as Reginald, the wealthy juvenile. His work is also a trifle uneven, and there are opportunities not taken advantage of, but he make a very desirable boyish impression. Thank fortune for a story in which girl children love really young boys!

Gordon McGregor is seen as Terry McShane, Nora's drunken father. Much of his business is overacted.

Wadsworth Harris forms an effective contrast with his work as Vanderfleet, millionaire and gentleman.

Joe Neary and C. W. Herzinger complete the cast.

"THE DAUGHTER PAYS"

Elaine Hammerstein plays at Clune's Broadway in "The Daughter Pays," a Selznick release. The story, which is by Mrs. Baillie Reynolds, is more entertaining than Miss Hammerstein's recent offerings have been, even though the theme and its handling are not particularly new. Technically the production is fair.

Miss Hammerstein herself is quite interesting as Virginia Mynors, the girl whose elderly husband practically purchases her. There is nothing really unusual, however, about either the role or its rendition.

Norman Trevor plays opposite her and is quite well cast as Osber Gaunt, the man whom love teaches a lesson.

Robert Ellis appears in the role of Gerald Roseborough, the not so very wicked heavy.

Theresa Maxwell, Bryson Russell and Dore Davidson are also in the picture, which was directed by Robert Reynolds.

"GIRLS DON'T GAMBLE"

Following a week at the New Pantages, David Butler's latest, "Girls Don't Gamble," runs at the Broadway house. While the production is not so good as was "Sitting on the World," a former Butler offering which showed recently, it is a human little story, containing real folk and many good laughs. It may not appeal to the highbrows, but the highbrows never yet alone ruled the success of a film.

Dave, himself, accomplishes another refreshing, progressive boy hero in James Fisher, whose "go-get-'em" and at the same time diffident qualities render him a continual delight. His introduction might have been greatly improved upon, however.

Eleanor Field is more than satisfactory as Madge, the Cinderella of the Rathbone family. Possibly her movements still suggest Mutual-Strand technique, but a few years of that would be hard to cover, no doubt.

Harry Todd is a riot in the role of Wilbur Rathbone, father and husband to an assortment of varying female viewpoints. The way in which he builds up his comedy situation is an art in itself.

Wilbur Higby and Elsie Bishop lend background to Butler's work as his nagging father and indulgent mother.

Elmer Dewey is the heavy, Stanley Marr. His introduction isn't played up enough to permit his classification by the audience.

Rhea Haines, Alice Knowlton, William Du Val, and Rex Zane are included in the cast.

Fred J. Butler directed the production.

"ROADS OF DESTINY"

What appears to be a rather old production featuring Pauline Frederick has just been released by Goldwyn at the California. It is "Roads of Destiny," a Channing Pollock adaptation of the O. Henry story. It is largely composed of a series of irrelative dreams that Fate forces at the same time upon two brothers for the accomplishment of her will. The picture has only a fair amount of entertainment value. The photography varies.

The star's work is impressive as always. She plays Rose, a woman who has been "wronged." She takes a place in each of the dreams, keeping her characterization consistent amid varying surroundings, as do the other characters in the main play.

Richard Tucker is good as Lewis Marsh, the brother whose peculiarly lucid dreams cure him.

John Bowers plays the juvenile, or David Marsh, a bit more convincingly than Jane Novak does the ingenue. They control the youthful romance.

Hardee Kirkland, Willard Louis, Maude George and M. B. Flynn complete the cast.

Frank Lloyd is responsible for the direction.

ARMSTRONG SELLS PICTURE

Director R. Dale Armstrong's picture produced under the title "The Crucifix of Destiny" has been sold and will be released on the state rights plan under the title "Forbidden Love."

Wheeler Dryden, the featured lead, is now appearing in "Penrod" at the Little Theatre; Audrey Chapman, leading lady, is playing opposite Neal Hart, and Louis K. Webb, character actor, is "Dr. Judd" in Von Stroheim's "Foolish Wives."

Lenore Lynard has been signed to play the heavy in the all-star cast of Oliver Morosco's productions, "The Half Breed."

GETTING ACQUAINTED WITH INTERESTING PEOPLE

Leonard Clapham

Leonard Clapham, he of western stunt fame, was born in Kentucky, the land of the moonshiners. His early life was linked up with the drama, so it was but natural that he should drift about the country with road companies.

Playing cowboy roles, he landed eventually in Texas, and then in Arizona. It was later that the young actor came to Los Angeles, met and signed to make pictures with Carl Laemmle. After completing this, his first Universal engagement, he covered several years filling others with Fox and Goldwyn.

Later he was re-engaged by Universal to star in a series of two-reel northwest mounted police stories. In addition to these productions, which have been filmed under the direction of Jacques Jaccard, Clapham has recently made a five-reeler for the Western Star Production Company.

This popular depicter of virile roles also pursues outdoor activities in his private life. In partnership with Mr. Jaccard he owns a stock ranch near Newhall, where his spare time is spent riding the range and originating new stunts with Jaccard. The illustrious couple possess a number of race horses, and claim that their pet diversion is killing their own fresh meat.

It is rumored that a new starring contract for Mr. Clapham is looming on the horizon.

Murdock McQuarrie is co-directing "The Unfoldment" with George H. Kern.

T. Roy Barnes has been engaged for the leading role of the next Wanda Hawley picture for Realart.

Beatrice Dominguez will have a prominent part in the last of Tom Santzchl's two-reel "western" productions.

Virginia Brown Faire is now playing the ingenue with Will Rogers in "Romeo," his latest picture at the Goldwyn studio.

Jessie De Jaiette has been added to the cast of "The Alibi," Charles Kenyon's story being made by the Goldwyn under the direction of Frank Lloyd.

Marjorie Daw will play the role of Love in the film production of "Experience" which Paramount will make from the stage play by George V. Hobart.

Pete Gerald, assistant to George H. Kern in the production of the Kern features, states that he stands unique among assistant directors, because never yet has he seen his name in print. May he never again so state.

Le Roy Stone has been engaged as head cutter for the Willat Productions, Inc.

Mr. Stone was for many years with the Thos. Ince organization and was the man who was responsible for the cutting of "Civilization."

Dwight Cleveland, for many years a writer for the Vitagraph company, has been added to the working staff of the Willat Productions, Inc., and is working hand in hand with Director Irvin V. Willat in writing the adaptation of the novel, "Face of the World," which will be the third independent production offered by Mr. Willat through the W. W. Hodkinson Corp. exchanges.

DIRECTORS ELECT OFFICERS

For the third time William D. Taylor was elected director of the Motion Picture Directors' Association when the Los Angeles lodge elected officers February 10 for its sixth year of existence.

The other officers of 1921 are: Henry King, assistant director; Wallace Worsley, technical director; Roy Clements, scenarist, and Norval MacGregor, treasurer.

Ground will be broken for the $200,000 club house before March, the building committee reported in conjunction with the receipt of a charter for the Motion Picture Directors' Building Corporation, of which Ben Wilson, Joseph De Grasse, Frank Lloyd, Roy Clements, Reginald Barker and Wallace Worsley comprise the board of directors. The latter two fill vacancies left by retirement of William Duncan and Thomas Ricketts.

SHIPMAN TAKES ADDITIONAL SPACE

Ernest Shipman has leased a suite of offices at 17 West 44th street, New York City, from which headquarters the activities of the Renco Film Corporation, the Edward Hemmer Productions, the San Gabriel Producing Company, the James Oliver Curwood Productions, Inc., and the Winnipeg Productions, Ltd., will be cared for.

The other productions controlled or represented by Mr. Shipman will continue to be managed from their present established headquarters. A number of lesser interests have been disposed of so that Shipman and his associates will be in a position to take on new enterprises, and Mr. S. T. King will continue in the capacity of general office manager.

THE BAD BOY COMES HOME

Jackie Coogan and his mother have returned from San Francisco, where they attended the West Coast premiere of "The Kid."

While there Jackie made several personal appearances in conjunction with the showing of the Chaplin picture, and attended receptions in Oakland, Piedmont and San Francisco. A party was given the boy by Mrs. Robert Treet of Piedmont at which over two hundred children were present.

Now that Jackie is home again and has completed his work as star of "Peck's Bad Boy," he will probably commence work in a third feature. A story written purposely for the little fellow by a Seattle newspaperman is under consideration.

Ben Bail is the cinematographer for Frank Mayo.

The comedian, Buster Keaton, will be unable to work for several weeks as a result of torn ligaments sustained in a scene.

Tom Moore and his leading lady, Rene Adoree, were married on St. Valentine's Day in California and will probably take a honeymoon trip to Honolulu.

Helene Chadwick has recovered from her recent attack of pneumonia and has returned to work at the Goldwyn studios, where she is playing opposite Tom Moore in "Made in Heaven."

For the fourth time Gertrude Bambrick has brought suit for divorce against her husband, Marshall Neilan. Each of the previous suits was withdrawn. Miss Bambrick began her screen career with the Biograph company along with Mary Pickford and the Gish sisters.

DOC WILLAT IN NEW YORK

C. A. (Doc) Willat, president and general manager of the Willat Productions, Inc., is on his way to the W. W. Hodkinson office in New York with the first print of "Partners of the Tide," Irvin V. Willat's second independent production.

Ruth Stonehouse has sued her husband, Joseph A. Roach, the magazine and scenario writer, for divorce.

McHUGH INJURED.

Charlie McHugh sustained painful injuries while working in a scene with Max Linder last week, when he slipped and fell from a tree. The accident was the cause of much concern, but after careful examination by physicians, it was stated that he will be able to return to work within a few days.

Mr. McHugh is appearing in one of the important roles of Mr. Linder's new comedy which has been in the making for several weeks.

King Vidor and his wife, Florence Vidor, are responsible for the statement that "Passion" excels any photoplay ever before screened in the history of motion pictures.

Three American companies, Famous Players-Lasky, First National and Goldwyn, have made offers to Pola Negri, but she has thus far failed to accept any of them. She is coming to America in May.

Mildred Harris, it is reported, will soon attach her signature to a contract with the Famous Players-Lasky company. She has already been engaged for a prominent part in Cecil B. de Mille's next picture.

Ben Turpin is leaving Los Angeles next week for a vacation which promises him six weeks of leisure and rest. Mrs. Turpin goes with him, and their trip contemplates a visit in Chicago, Washington, D. C., and New York. Returning to Los Angeles, Ben will resume his comedy impersonations with Mack Sennett.

MURRAY TO ENTER VAUDEVILLE

At the conclusion of his work in Mack Sennett's romantic comedy, "Heartbalm," Charlie Murray plans a vacation, the first he has had in seven years. Accompanied by Mrs. Murray, he will leave San Francisco for Honolulu within a month and will spend about two weeks in the island metropolis.

Returning then to Los Angeles, it is expected he will appear in a prominent role in "Molly-O," for which production Mabel Normand has been engaged for stellar honors. On the completion of this picture, Charlie Murray says he will retire from the screen for perhaps a year, during which time he plans a vaudeville tour, accepting one of several standing offers over the "big time."

JACKMAN INJURED

Fred W. Jackman, Mack Sennett's chief cameraman, has returned from Tahoe and Truckee with his right arm in a sling and an acute knowledge of what constitutes blood-poisoning. He was badly bitten by a motion picture wolf while attempting to correct the deportment of a bunch of wolfish beasts whose genealogy runs from German police dog to just plain coyote.

The infuriated beast struck his fangs deep into the cameraman's arm. "And held on," says Jackman, "as though inspired by the thought 'till death do us part.'"

PHOTOPLAYERS JOIN EQUITY

At a recent meeting, the Photoplayers' Equity Association completed arrangements for its amalgamation with the Actors' Equity of New York.

The local organization will take five hundred members into the new fold.

Pauline Frederick has completed her latest feature under Henry King's direction and expects to take a week's rest in the mountains.

Alec B. Francis has been confined to his room at a downtown hotel for the past week, having narrowly escaped pneumonia. He is at present showing great improvement.

Samuel Merwin's "The Passionate Pilgrim," a Cosmopolitan production, will be shown at Grauman's Million Dollar Theatre during the week of February 21.

Albert Prisco, who plays an important part in the George H. Kern production, "The Unfoldment," and Mrs. Prisco, his wife, have returned from a few days' vacation trip to San Francisco.

Associated First National Pictures, Inc., announces March 7 as the date when Marguerite Clark's independent production from her own studios, "Scrambled Wives," will be released.

Constance Talmadge's next release to follow "Mama's Affair," will be "Lessons in Love." It is an adaptation of Douglas Murry's stage play, "The Man From Toronto." It was directed by Chet Withey and appearing opposite Constance is Kenneth Harlan.

Frank Braidwood has just returned from San Diego, where he has been filling a theatrical engagement.

Isidor Grodzins, president of the G. & J. Photoplay company, states that the company is now on location, working on their new production, "The Road to Nowhere," a western story featuring Will Jefferis under the direction of John Halloway, with Al Thompson as cameraman.

Production Notes

AT THE REALART STUDIO

Walter Hiers and Polly Moran have been added to the cast of "Two Weeks with Pay," the new Bebe Daniels vehicle.

Word comes from the New York Realart studios to the effect that Constance Binney is engaged on her newest picture, "The Magic Cup," by E. Lloyd Sheldon.

Frances Harmer, veteran author and scenario writer, has written a comedy-drama for Bebe Daniels. It is entitled "One Wild Week."

Hector Turnbull, playwright and scenario writer, has arrived at the studio to personally supervise the filming of two stories.

Percy Heath, dramatic critic and former press agent for David Belasco, is the latest addition to the Realart scenario staff. Elmer Harris, supervising director, announces that Mr. Heath will write continuity for Wanda Hawley and Bebe Daniels productions.

Chester Franklin is making preparations to direct a new production.

AT UNIVERSAL

Preliminary production on "Fanny Herself," Tod Browning's next feature, will start with the arrival of William Fildew, Browning's chief cameraman, from Chicago. Fildew left Universal City to register atmospheric scenes which will be introduced into the story to establish locale.

"The Dangerous Moment," with Carmel Myers is nearing completion under the direction of Marcel de Sano.

Harry Carey is at work on "The Homeward Trail," his forthcoming photodrama by Eugene Manlove Rhodes. Jack Ford is directing.

Stuart Paton is expected to film the concluding scenes this week for "False Colors," Priscilla Dean's next.

J. P. McGowan, directing Eddie Polo in "The Seal of Satan," is making rapid progress at Universal City. He has just returned from Cuba.

Frank Mayo's next feature will be "The Truant," a story of the north by Mann Page and Izolla Forrester. Robert Thornby has been named director.

Gladys Walton has finished "Li'l Miss Merridew," a screen version of "A Kentucky Cinderella," the F. Hopkinson Smith story, and is preparing to start on "The Man Tamer," through which she will again be piloted by Harry B. Harris.

"The Terror Trail," a mystery serial, has been started with Eileen Sedgwick in the starring role. Edward Kull is directing.

"The Guilty Trail," a two-reel western by Malcolm Stuart Boylan is being filmed as a starring vehicle for Jack Perrin. Edward Laemmle is directing and Louise Lorraine is playing in the star's support.

"The Bug House" will be the title of the next one reel comedy in which "Dotty" Wolbert will star. The eccentric comedienne is being directed by William Beaudine.

Julius Laemmle, the little son of Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, is starring in a production which will never reach the public screen. The one reel comedy is being directed by Leo McCarey and will be added to Mr. Laemmle's personal collection of films. It shows the little fellow in amusing antics around the studio and at his studies.

Work was suspended at Universal City in the hour that Rudolphe Christians was buried. The late Mr. Christians was in the cast of "Foolish Wives."

Robert Bradbury of the Cyrus J. Williams company, has re-engaged Violet Schram to play opposite Santschi in the current picture, "The Sheriff of Mojave."

AT VITAGRAPH

Activity increases with the arrival of President Albert E. Smith, who has outlined a strong schedule for the spring and summer months. George Randolph Chester, the fictionist, who also recently arrived from New York to stage his latest story for the screen, is busy selecting locations for his picture, "The Son of Wallingford." Casting will be started in another week and production commenced immediately thereafter. Frank Heath, of eastern Vitagraph, will be assistant director to Mr. Chester. Bert Enslinger, assistant director at the western studios, will also be associated with the company.

Earle Williams this week started production of "The Secret of the Silver Car," by Wynham Martyn. It is from a published novel. David Smith will direct. Kathryn Adams has just been cast opposite the star. The selection of the remaining principals will be completed soon.

William Duncan and Edith Johnson, with a troupe of fifty players, have gone to Kern River, California, to film final scenes in their current chapter play, "Fighting Fate." On their return a few days of photographing in the studio will finish this picture. Duncan will start another soon.

Larry Semon is already half through with his latest comedy, being made under the title of "The Rent Collector."

Joe Ryan and his western troupe, making "The Purple Riders," have returned from Catalina Island, where scenes for episodes twelve and thirteen were made.

CENTURY COMEDIES

William Watson has completed work on his two reel comedy, "Haunted," featuring Harry Swett, and is contemplating starting production on another two-reel comedy within a few days.

Director Tom Buckingham has finished a two-reel comedy entitled "A Fresh Heir."

TALMADGE COMPLETES ONE PRODUCTION—STARTS ANOTHER

Norma Talmadge has returned to New York from Palm Beach, where she spent a fortnight with her husband, Joseph M. Schenck.

The whole period was not spent at play, however, for Herbert Brenon and his cameramen accompanied the couple and managed to "shoot" the remaining scenes for "The Passion Flower," which will be Norma's next release through Associated First National.

Production has been started by Director Brenon on the vehicle, which will be Channing Pollock's stage melodrama, "The Sign on the Door."

PHOTOPLAYERS OF THE EQUITY ASSOCIATION:

Permit me to call your attention to the importance of nominating for our member of the advisory board persons having the following qualifications:

1. Who will work earnestly for the common interests of producers and employees, and to secure the abatement of every injustice on the part of either, as is the established policy of the Actors' Equity Association of New York, as explained to us by Mr. Shaw, its representative.

2. One who will seek those ends, as that association has done, by public opinion and an appeal to justice, rather than by hatred and strife.

4. Who are large-minded enough to work harmoniously with those who differ with them.

HAYAKAWA TO DO UNDERWORLD STORY

A story of the underworld has been selected by Sessue Hayakawa as his next story for Robertson-Cole. J. Grubb Alexander, who is now at work on the story, states it is a departure from the melodramatic roles in which Hayakawa has been seen of late. "The Swamp" is the name of the story, and Hayakawa will be the only Oriental character in the story, depicting a young peddler.

FILMING STEWART PICTURE

The work of filming Hampton Del Ruth's story, "The Invisible Fear," as an Anita Stewart starring vehicle, has gone along with almost ominous placidity, according to reports from the Louis B. Mayer studio. Director Edwin Carewe, still retaining some of the old stage superstitions, is almost afraid of the way the sun, location, sets and studio lights have been getting along in perfect co-operation. Already most of the interior scenes have been filmed, and the company is now preparing to leave for one of the location sequences.

TO TOUR THE WORLD

Paul Hosier, formerly casting director and assistant director at the Drascena Productions, for Hal Stephens, has left Los Angeles with Elid Productions for a tour of the world. The company will be gone for about three years, spending six months in this country and then journeying to Europe, Asia, Africa and on around the world. A series of five-reel pictures will be produced on this tour in foreign countries.

Other persons engaged for this tour include Charlotte Forbes, formerly with Mack Sennett; Ben Lewis and Elid Stanley.

AT LASKY'S

Word has just been received from Jesse Lasky that Betty Compson has signed a five-year contract to star for Paramount. Miss Compson has already left for Hollywood and will begin work April 1st on her initial Paramount picture.

George Melford, accompanied by Sir Gilbert Parker and the cast of players headed by James Kirkwood, engaged in making "The Money Master," is still on location. He expects to be back at the studio sometime next week, when the completion of the photoplay will be accomplished.

It is understood that Mr. Melford's next production will be of an original story by Sir Gilbert Parker.

Trick stuff has been occupying Roscoe Arbuckle, star of "Crazy to Marry," Frank Condon's story, which James Cruze is directing.

The choice of a final title for Wallace Reid's new picture is yet in abeyance. It has the working title of "Watch My Smoke," and is an original story by Byron Morgan.

Gloria Swanson has embarked upon her initial star picture for Paramount, "The Great Moment," written by Elinor Glyn and scenarized by Monte Katterjohn. Sam Wood is the director. The first scenes were taken in San Francisco and its environs, but the company is now at work in the studio.

"Wealth has been chosen as the title for Ethel Clayton's new picture from "The Almighty Dollar," written by Cosmo Hamilton, with a scenario by Julia Crawford Ivers. Wm. D. Taylor is making the picture.

Cecil B. DeMille is still busily engaged in cutting and titling "The Affairs of Anatol."

Having completed "White and Unmarried" under the direction of Tom Forman, Thomas Meighan will leave for the East very shortly to make pictures there. Tom Forman is to follow shortly afterward.

"THE FIRE-CAT" HAS MANY EFFECTIVE VOLCANO SCENES

Norman Dawn's latest Universal feature—"The Fire-Cat"—promises to present to movie-goers some scenes of more than usual interest.

Chief among these are views of an enormous South American volcano in eruption—with lava flowing from the crater and smoke and flames rising thousands of feet into the air while a genuine city filled with thousands of terror-stricken people flee from the earthquake shocks that follow in rapid succession.

About this natural catastrophe Norman Dawn, the director, has written a romantic melodrama of old Peru. It embodies the pathetic story of a Spanish girl who seeks vengeance, and the two lovers who follow her struggles and vicissitudes through a lawless country and the great upheavals of nature.

The story contains many thrilling incidents including a landslide of rock destroying great mining buildings, flooded mines, falling houses, burning forests, and streets that crack open and swallow the unfortunate people.

The detail is remarkably true, for Mr. Dawn, himself a South American, has given each item minute attention and selected a cast that not only is true to physical type but feel their parts with fine artistic skill.

Edith Roberts appears in the star role as Dulce, the young Spanish gentlewoman whose mother is brutally beaten to death by lawless bandits of the Andean plateau. It is easily her finest performance and gives her every opportunity that an actress could wish in the highly dramatic situations which the fast-moving plot contains.

Wallace MacDonald plays the American tramp who is regenerated by love—and a finished and easy performance he gives.

Walter Long appears as "Gringo Burke," an ex-convict who has found his way into the Andes at the head of a band of criminals. It is a fine piece of character work different from anything he has done.

Arthur Jasmine will long be remembered for his work as Pancho, the pathetic Indian youth whose cowardly nature and forlorn love have a tender appeal.

Olga de Mojean is the true Spanish mother in every move and look.

Beatriz Dominguez is Juanita, the lady of easy virtue, and she is convincing and finished in a difficult part.

Eagle Eye will long be hated as "Cholo Vasquez" the bad Indian who meets his death by a tarantula bite.

Steve Murphy, Art Lee, Jose de la Cruz, Nick de Ruiz, Tote du Crow, H. Kirby, and many other well-known players, play smaller but well-finished bits throughout the picture, which helps the general results a great deal.

The photography, by Thos. Rea and Norman Dawn, is very fine, clean cut and artistic, with many stereoscopic effects and beautiful mountain scenery. The lightings are soft and natural and uniform throughout. The double-exposures are the very best that the industry can boast.

All in all the "Fire-Cat" is an artistic, first-rate picture and will well repay anyone in entertainment as a story and for its value as a specimen of advanced screen craft.

Screen Titling

A department devoted to the subject of photoplay titles in their literary, artistic and technical phases.

Conducted by Frank F. Greene

Without pretending to be a court of last appeal on the subject, this department is intended to be of service to the industry. Letters directed to Mr. Greene at his studio, at 907 Central Building, will receive his personal attention.

BEAUTIFUL BUT INAPPLICABLE

Please give me your opinion on the following: We have received a very pleasing design for an art title. The illustration shows a little country home in the lower right corner of the card. A light filmy smoke issues from the chimney and drifting to the upper left forms a cloud in which is shown a vision effect of a great city. This idea admirably supports the reading matter, yet we cannot bring ourselves to decide upon it.

Judging from what you say, you are suffering from three angles in regard to this design: (1) Counter attraction, (2) point of attention, (3) divided interest.

If I could see the card I might further analyze it. In the first place, your idea may seem appropriate, but it is too complex; it leads you too far from the main path of the story—instead of a simple psychological hint you have a concrete counter attraction. Next, a point of attention is needed, especially where there is the amount of detail you enumerate. This, through our habit of reading "from left to right, is unconsciously sought at the left, though it may be placed anywhere if the composition is in accord with the location. In this case, following the reading, attention should begin at the little country home. The third and gravest error is divided interest. On the left you have one proposition and on the right another, while your lettered message strives for attention. In the confusion of locating the point of attention, projection continues, the observer reads hurriedly, and when the title is off we hear, "What was that last line?" "Was that a picture of a ship in a storm?"

MISUSED WORDS

The screen, with its great power for educating, is looked to by many as an authority on most subjects and is without doubt the greatest single factor of education of the day. Considering the great amount of matter projected and the complexities of English it is wonderful that so few errors creep in.

The American folly, or should we say virtue, is to speed—to save time. This is elsewhere no more apparent than in his misuse of English. Words and grammar uncountenanced in type pass in conversation. Now when this condition reaches the screen conversationally what are we to do? Take the words "liable" and "likely." Liable signifies exposed to undesirable consequences, subject to penalty; likely, in all probability. Johnny is likely to arrive late. Johnny is liable to be spanked. These are correct, but: Returns are liable to reach $100,000—won't do. Recently misused, unquoted, appeared on the screen the word "loan." This is always a noun and cannot denote an act. For the verb form say "lend."

Let us follow good grammar to the greatest extent permitted by the type of character quoted, and let faulty grammar, when required, be obviously incorrect—the words of an uneducated character.

Can You Qualify for Screen Authorship?

A NATIONAL educational institution to train photoplaywrights by correspondence during spare time at home has been established in Los Angeles to meet the needs of the motion picture industry.

This institution is directed by experienced writers and sponsored by Cecil B. DeMille, Thos. H. Ince and other prominent producers.

The field for photoplaywrights is lucrative and applicants drawn from every walk of life respond to the call.

Only persons naturally endowed with the gift of creative imagination and dramatic insight, however, can hope for success in this profession, and applicants must be selected accordingly.

All applicants, therefore, are requested to apply by mail to Frederick Palmer, Director of Education, for the Palmer Home-Test Questionnaire to determine their fitness to undertake this course of vocational training.

This questionnaire, scientifically compiled by Professor Malcolm Shaw MacLean, A.M., formerly a Northwestern University instructor of English composition, in collaboration with H. H. Van Loan, noted photoplay author-producer, is the first test of its kind ever adopted by an educational institution.

The purpose of this questionnaire is to help applicants determine the degree of creative imagination possessed by them and consequently their eligibility to enroll in this curriculum.

If successful in making this home test, the Palmer Plan of Instruction in Photoplay Writing is available to you.

CHRISTIE COMPANY ON FULL SCHEDULE

Two directors are this week working on pictures for release through Educational, and two more pictures are in preparation, keeping the Christie Company well up on its schedule of releases of short films.

The new pictures just undertaken include another Christie two-reel film, in which Neal Burns and Dorothy Devore are featured, and a new single reel picture under the direction of Scott Sidney.

The pictures are a part of the regular schedule which has been adhered to since last February, at which time Christie began furnishing two two-reel comedies per month for release through Educational.

E. W. Hammons, president of Educational, and Charles H. Christie have been in conference the past week, and during their trip here from the East by way of New Orleans, with reference to productions which are planned for in the immediate future.

DWAN UNDER WAY

Allan Dwan has started work on his third Associated Producer's production at the Hollywood studios. The tentative title of the picture is "Johnny Cucabod." The story of that name by Wilbur Hall originally appeared in the Saturday Evening Post. James Hogan, who has been directing Fox pictures, will co-direct with Allan Dwan on the new production. Lyman Broening is photographing the production.

Do You Believe in Yourself?

Of course you do, or you wouldn't be working, hoping, observing, studying and scheming to get ahead in the film world!

And if you have studied the situation in Los Angeles carefully, you know that publicity, aside from talent, is the one best and biggest bet.

Here is what I do for my clients, what I will do for YOU if you will give me the opportunity:

I send out news about you every week to 350 newspapers of the United States—

To every local trade publication—

To every newspaper in Los Angeles—

To the New York and Chicago trade journals which every director reads.

I constantly supply the local papers with stories about you—what you are doing, and I make every effort to get your picture into the local press, especially when you are in a picture playing locally.

I devise and carry out, with my clients, dignified publicity stunts that have gone like wildfire over the country.

And many other things.

My fees for this service, partially or entirely, for one week or one year, are well within YOUR ability to pay, no matter what your salary may be.

Climbing fast towards the top, your name frequently mentioned by directors, working steadily with no long waits between pictures, your salary constantly increasing as your ability and your talents win recognition, with stardom on the near horizon?

Just plugging along, hoping, wishing, wondering, puzzled why you cannot make headway?

Publicity is the real key to success.

Without it you may grope along for years, unknown, or picked for bits now and then.

Here is what I do for my clients: Send out news about you over the country once a week to a carefully selected list of 350 newspapers, to trade journals, to fan magazines, and to every channel of publicity which offers itself, regardless of what that may be. ## A Fraternity Invades Filmland

The history of the motion picture industry is dotted with many organizations and associations formed for the financial and artistic improvement of the various classes whose combined abilities provide the world with its most popular diversion. Some of these bodies have proven highly beneficial to the film business; others through mismanagement and cramped visions have been detrimental. The original desire behind each one of them, however, has been for the advancement, usually the monetary advancement, of someone. Results alone have determined their merits, which accounts for the many that are with us today and the others that were left by the way as the procession speeded along.

Peculiarly enough, in all of these years there had not, until a few weeks ago, been organized an entirely social order for the profession—or even a branch of it. Apparently the idea that this type of thing might eventually be of just as great importance to the industry as the more “practical” variety given over to the promotion of work and higher salaries, was slow in presenting itself. But when an organization of the kind finally did put in an appearance, a month or so ago, it received a welcome that was as strange as the former general ignorance of its need had been.

The exception, which bids fair to divorce the film people from the old theatrical tradition that the show business is no place for fraternities, is a branch of the Orioles, a lodge of national importance that was originated in Baltimore.

Under the guidance of Mr. Henry Meyers a Screen Nest has been formed which counts among its members representatives of practically every department of studio activity. The names of stars and extra men, directors and electricians appear upon the list, which has been accepted by the governing body of the Orioles as a valuable addition to its ranks. (We might here state that to our knowledge the profession as a class has never before been received by a social body.)

The local nest has been established with one idea only in mind—the furtherance of fraternity among our people. Many will concede that the heretofore rather noticeable absence of this quality in some quarters has not been conducive to our best development.

If this entirely unselfish project is carried on in a manner that equals in fairness and helpfulness the accomplishments of its instigators, it will occasion much comfort by providing for its unfortunate members and—this last is even more important—it will result in much happy social growth for every one connected with it. An almost unexplored field stretches advantageously before it. We may well anticipate great things from this maiden effort.

Word From The Alliance

We might ask the gentleman who is responsible for the following statement, which was recently published in the Dramatic Mirror, where he obtained his marvelous knowledge of the motion picture people. Probably his informants were the same bigotted cranks with whom he associates himself in the Lord's Day Alliance; the same job hunting reformers who dare to declare that the blue Sunday conforms to the religious traditions of the race. Rather amusing, isn't it, to picture a cosmopolitan country like this with one set of religious observances? Moreover, America is known the world over for a tradition far more important than any that Mr. Bowlby or his co-agitators have mentioned. It is the principle of personal freedom that will not tolerate the religious dictation of any aggressive long-hairs no matter how much lung power they can display.

Remember the swing of the pendulum, you Blue Law advocates, and take heed lest it brushes down your former accomplishments upon its return trip!

“The Lord's Day Alliance made public through its general secretary, Dr. Harry L. Bowlby, an official bulletin comprising a statement by its board of managers, a letter to ‘pastors, official boards and all whom it may concern,’ and a ‘statement by the clergy.’ The bulletin is headed, ‘The Truth About the Blue Law Propaganda.’

“In the statement the alliance charges that the motion picture interests, certain business interests and commercialized amusement and sporting interests are supporting anti-Sabbath legislative measures and commercializing Sunday in various ways.

“The alliance names motion pictures as No. 1 of the ‘enemy's’ ranks. The objective of the motion picture interests, the statement declares, ‘is the wiping out of every vestige of laws protecting Sunday from the statute books of every state in the United States,’ and ‘the procuring of legal sanction for their Sunday business.’

“‘We do not say,’ the statement reads, ‘that there are no men of Christian principle and character in the motion picture business. On the contrary, we know that there are such, and we earnestly hope for an increasing number. But it is common knowledge that at the present time the motion picture enterprise is largely controlled by a group unfaithful to the religious traditions of their race concerning the Sabbath, with whom we have become only too familiar—sordid, soulless, Godless worldings. Associated with them are persons of other races and faiths—Protestants, Catholics and blatant atheists—who, ignorant of the evil consequences involved, favor the importance and the establishment in America of the so-called Continental Sunday—the Sunday of work, dissipation and commercialized sports.’”

DAVID BUTLER CONTRACTED BY IRVING LESSER

David Butler will star in his own productions, according to an announcement by Irving M. Lesser, who has contracted with him for a series of five-reel comedy-drama productions.

Work on the first picture will commence immediately and space has been leased for this purpose at the Hollywood Studios, where sets are now in the course of construction. The first story will be an adaptation of the Saturday Evening Post story, "Sophie Semenov," which was written by Wallace Irwin.

George W. Stout has been selected as business manager of the organization, which will be known in the future as the David Butler Productions.

Irving Lesser and Fred Butler are now busily engaged in selecting a cast to support the star in the Irwin story. The initial scenes should be ready for filming by the first of the coming week.

MAURICE TOURNEUR TO FILM "LORNA DOONE"

After finishing his production of "The Last of the Mohicans," Maurice Tourneur ceased production activities and refused to issue any statement as to his future plans, except that he was preparing his next production for the Associated Producers.

He now announces that he will start in the immediate future filming R. D. Blackmore's story, "Lorna Doone," and that he intends to take his entire company to Devonshire County in England to film the scenes that are laid in the rugged valley which is still known as "The Death Valley of the Doones."

NUMA PICTURES TO MAKE NEW TARZAN SERIAL

A new Tarzan serial is to be placed in production immediately, according to an announcement made by the Weiss Brothers' Numa Pictures Corporation.

It will be a fifteen-episode feature, and at the suggestion of Edgar Rice Burroughs, the author, it will be entitled "The Adventures of Tarzan."

Numa Pictures Corporation recently produced "The Revenge of Tarzan," a six-reel feature adapted from one of Burroughs' stories.

SNOWY BAKER PRODUCTIONS

Preparations are now under way for the filming of the first of the series of Snowy Baker Productions at the Selig studio. Reg. L. (Snowy) Baker will be the star of these pictures, which will be produced by Col. Wm. N. Selig and Sam Rork. The first story has already been selected, and the case is now being assembled.

TENTH MAC DONALD PICTURE UNDER WAY

Katherine MacDonald has started her tenth production for release through Associated First National. The direction is in the care of Jerome Storm.

Although the complete cast has not as yet been chosen, production manager Bernard Fineman announces that two prominent players who will assist Miss MacDonald are Betty Ross Clark and Roy Stewart.

MOROSCO SIGNS WITH ASSOCIATED

Oliver Morosco has signed a contract in New York for the release of all his pictures through Associated First National Pictures, Inc.

MAKING COMEDY SERIES

Jimmie Thompson, formerly known on the vaudeville stage as "Cycling Zamora," has entered pictures and is now at work on a series of two-reel comedies under the title of "The Smiling Hobo." Each production tells a story in itself, but the main character is carried throughout the series.

B. B. HAMPTON NOTES

Benjamin B. Hampton, who has just completed his eleventh all-star production, announces that he has a steady production program mapped out. The picture just completed is "The Man of the Forest," Zane Grey's story. In a few days cameras will begin turning on the next production, "The Mysterious Rider," Zane Grey's latest novel, which has outsold all of his previous best sellers and set a high water mark for book sales by an advance sale of 200,000 copies before publication.

Other novels by other authors who are on contract with Mr. Hampton will follow. Two continuity writers, E. Richard Schayer and Rex Taylor, are busy with adaptations of the two productions which are to follow "The Mysterious Rider."

The personnel of Benjamin B. Hampton's film organization includes Hewlings Mumper, Mr. Hampton's partner; William H. Clifford, production manager; Norris Mumper, general manager; Eltinge Warner, vice-president and eastern manager; Jay Chapman, publicity manager; Guy Davis, comptroller; E. Richard Schayer and Rex Taylor, scenario staff; H. Libbert, Robert Odell and James Townsend, art and technical staff. The producing staff for the last two pictures consisted of Directors Howard Hickman and Eliot Howe, and Cameramen Joseph Dubray and F. H. Sturgis.

AT GOLDWYN

Will Rogers, his director, and other members of the Goldwyn company making "The Bashful Romeo," left the studio last week for Jackson, California, where they will spend two weeks making exteriors.

Victor Schertzinger is supervising the cutting of "Made in Heaven," starring Tom Moore.

E. Mason Hopper and company, making "The Bridal Path," will leave this week for another trip to Santa Barbara to make additional exteriors for Thompson Buchanan's story.

The photography on "The Alibi," under the direction of Frank Lloyd, will be completed this week at the Culver City studio. The story is by Charles Kenyon and has House Peters and Irene Rich in the leading roles.

AT VITAGRAPH

The biggest event of the week at Western Vitagraph was the completion of William Duncan's chapter play, "Fighting Fate," in which Edith Johnson is co-starred. The stars and their staff will enjoy a brief rest before undertaking their next production, which is now nearly ready in continuity.

George Randolph Chester is now casting "The Son of Wallingford," his latest story, which he will personally direct for the screen as a Vitagraph special.

David Smith has started Earle Williams in "The Secret of the Silver Car," from Wyndham Martyn's novel.

Larry Semon will finish "The Rent Collector," a special comedy, within another week. While incapacitated from an accident in his last picture he wrote three comedies, of which "The Rent Collector" was the first. This will enable him to produce the next two without an interval between.

The twelfth episode of "The Purple Riders," Joe Ryan's western serial, was shipped this week to eastern Vitagraph. The other three episodes will be completed shortly.

Jess Robbins is preparing to start a new Jimmy Aubrey two-reeler.

"THE PASSIONATE PILGRIM"

The much anticipated adaptation of Samuel Merwin's popular story, "The Passionate Pilgrim," is showing at Grauman's. The many who have looked forward to its screen appearance will be greatly pleased with the entire production, since its scenario is faithful to the original, as are also the characters, and Robert Vignola's direction of the newspaper story leaves little to be desired technically or artistically. The plot's big punches are taken care of beautifully and each bit of action means something to the whole. Matt Moore appears in the title role, which he interprets with rare understanding. He immediately attracts and holds to the end the audience's sympathy with his human performance which includes all of the retiring, bewildered and infinitely tender traits of Henry Calverly, a talented victim of circumstances. This work of Moore's will be long remembered as his best.

Ruby de Remer plays the leading feminine role and as Miriam Cantey, the invalid heiress to her dead father's millions. She is more interesting by far than we have ever known her to be. Her character's physical fragility is convincing, and yet she displays something of the strength of mind of Merwin's heroine, a combination which in itself might make any part.

Qualters, the smoothly scheming trustee of the Cantey estate, is cleverly accomplished by Charles Girard. His heavies, without ever becoming monotonous through similarity, may be depended upon to be uniformly good.

Frankie Mann characterizes the role of Margie Daw, sob writer for the Evening News. Her work shows much enthusiasm and real ability. She misses no chance to establish her very typical lady of the press with small but valuable details.

Julia Swayne Gordon very effectively does a few scenes as Madame Watt, a murderess, who through the loyalty of her friends and a freak of fate is not apprehended.

Claire Whitney is good as Esther Cantey, the little invalid's jealous, petulant sister who is made weak through flattery. Miss Whitney's work improves steadily.

Sam Ryan plays McIntyre and Van Dyke Brook is Hiitt, the "morgue keeper" of the News.

Mary Newcomb, Tom Guise, Arthur Donaldson, Albert Roccardi and Bernard A. Reinold all do minor parts.

"The Passionate Pilgrim" is a Cosmopolitan production released by Paramount.

"HER FIRST ELOPEMENT"

A sprightly Realart comedy starring Wanda Hawley and containing far more entertaining material than that star's last vehicle is playing at Clune's. The picture, which is entitled "Her First Elopement," contains nothing particularly startling and nothing markedly reasonable; however, it is the prerogative of a farce to be inconsistent so long as it holds the attention which this one does. The photography is standard. Some of the locations are beautiful, and Wanda's admirers will not be disappointed. The cast's work varies.

Miss Hawley herself giggles her dimpled way through sequence after sequence, despite the somewhat dignified title Christina Elliott, which was evidently bestowed upon her by a scenarist whose sense of the appropriate was vacationing. Christina's emotions are nothing if not happy.

Jerome Patrick puts in a few good comedy licks of his own as Adrian Maitland, who obtains a wife through an error.

Nell Craig makes an entertaining adventuress, by name Lotta St. Regis, whose vice is recognized through her snake dancing tendencies.

Helen Dunbar and Herbert Standing form the necessary conventional background as Christina's guardians, Letitia and John Varden.

Complications arise chiefly through the infatuation of Gerald Elliott and Ted Maitland for the fair Lotta. The former, also a ward of the Vardens, is walked through by Jay Eaton. The latter, a brother to the hero, is done by Lucien Littlefield.

Edwin Stevens is "there" as usual, as Maitland, Sr.

Margaret Morris, Betty Carlisle and John Mackinnon do "bits."

Sam Wood is responsible for the direction.

"THE FIRECAT"

A colorful story of South America, written and directed by Norman Dawn for Universal and starring Edith Roberts, is running at the Superba. It deals with the remnants of the Spanish and Indian races that are still found isolated in the Andes, and contains considerable entertainment value. Some of the mountain scenery is unusually beautiful and the photography is standard. Earthquake and volcano scenes are features of the production. Some of them are more effective than others.

The little star gives one of her fiery performances as Dulce, a descendant of old Spain.

David Ross, the male lead, is played by Wallace MacDonald, who does it picturesquely.

Walter Long plays one of his crude, blustering heavies, Gringo Burke, vividly.

Arthur Jasmine, in our estimation, wins the real sympathy of the entire picture, with his characterization of Pancho, the Indian lad, whose cowardly nature and dog-like devotion to the spirited Dulce, make his performance beautifully wistful. Jasmine should have a big future in the character juvenile line.

Olga de Mojean is typical as the Spanish mother and William Eagle Eye does Cholo Pete.

"LYING LIPS"

The formal opening of the New Symphony, which was recently taken over by the Associated Producers, occurred Tuesday evening. Under the changed management much that this theatre has never enjoyed heretofore in the line of high-class productions, good showmanship and efficient direction is insured.

The initial Associated offering, which has commenced an indefinite run, is the Thos. H. Ince Special, "Lying Lips." This May Edington story of London society and the Canadian backwoods may fairly be classified with the season's best modern dramas. It deals with an intensely interesting theme which, together with an unusually lucid scenario, renders it at all times absorbing. Its characters are absolutely human and while the moral that they point is marked, the picture happily lacks the sticky conventional note that mars so much of our otherwise satisfactory screen entertainment.

Technically, "Lying Lips" leaves nothing to be desired. Particularly and equally effective are its sets and exteriors. The photography is also beautiful.

Florence Vidor heads the cast in the role of Nance Abbott, a superficial product of an artificial environment and a mercenary mother, who discovers within herself a heart. Her work is that of a finished actress and her appearance that of a charming representative of modern femininity. Naturalness and simplicity are the keynotes to her performance which might easily have been made heroic in less capable hands. Nothing is lacking in her role.

House Peters interprets Blair Cornwell, the male lead. He convincingly accomplishes the big man of the day, whose set of values is based upon the world's realities instead of sentimental slop. The two leads work well together.

Joseph Kilgour characterizes Willie Chase, the man whose wealth, while failing to purchase refinement, nearly buys a woman. His scenes are cleverly put over and he is exceptionally well cast.

Margaret Livingston is more than satisfactory as Leila, Nance's jealous little country cousin. Her part is a valuable touch.

Margaret Campbell takes all possible advantage of her footage as Mrs. Abbott, a woman typical of her class and circumstances. We should like to see her in a larger roll.

Edith Yorke, Calvert Carter, Emmet King and Stanhope Wheatcroft all do minor parts.

John Griffith Wray is to be congratulated upon his careful direction of the picture.

"THE KID"

The inimitable Charlie in his latest and most famous production, "The Kid," is at the Ambassador theatre this week. This First National release is due to have a long run at one of the other Lesser houses here, and, indeed, it will amuse the country as long as human nature calls for a simple little tear and an abundance of hearty laughs in its entertainment. The picture, which is undoubtedly Chaplin's best, is his own. It is marked by a scarcity of subtitles and many subtle touches.

As the Tramp all of the comedian's rare talent is displayed, which impresses one with the idea that no matter how long the intervals between his appearances may be, he will never become less than America's Charlie.

Chief in the star's support is Jackie Coogan, who does the title role, or the Kid. We have never seen a more clever performance given by a child. He has an unusually sensitive little face, and the audience laughs and weeps at his wish. We will look for-

SEVERAL FILM ARTISTS AT THE COMMUNITY

The Hollywood Community Theatre is presenting another play which begins its third week Monday, February 28th. ## GETTING ACQUAINTED WITH INTERESTING PEOPLE

George Kern

George H. Kern, now producing "The Unfoldment," a shadow play of his own creation, which he is also directing personally, with Florence Lawrence and William Conklin in the leading roles, has had a wide experience as a creator of cinema dramas. For a long time he was production manager at the Christie Film Co. He also staged a number of western photo dramas in Texas, one of which commemorated the siege of the Alamo, and which was financed by Texans who wished to hand down the historical Alamo via the celluloid route, to posterity.

Prior to this, Mr. Kern made the first photoplay ever produced in the Argentine republic. He was invited by the Argentine government to make a historical pageant film commemorating the anniversary of the discovery of the South American country.

Mr. Kern is a graduate of Columbia University, and before his entrance into the picture world was a member of the Metropolitan Opera Company. He had a wide training in various lines of artistic endeavor before taking up his work in motion pictures.

"The Unfoldment" gives promise of being one of the most noteworthy modern films. The entire all-star cast is also a notable one. Aside from the featured players, Miss Lawrence and Mr. Conklin, it includes Raymond Cannon, the juvenile lead, Barbara Bedford, who was seen in "The Last of the Mohicans," Albert Prisco, late of the Mary Pickford company, Wade Boteler, and George and Harry French.

IRVIN S. COBB JOINS THE MOVIES HERE

America's humorist has fallen for the call of the silent drama. Irvin S. Cobb is now a member of our local film world. He has been secured by Irving M. Lesser and will edit and write titles for the forthcoming "Peck's Bay Boy" film starring Jackie Coogan.

Fred J. Robinson, former assistant to Thomas Heffron, is now attached to the Chester M. Franklin company.

Cobb will finish his coast speaking tour and will return to Los Angeles in about ten days to occupy a desk in the Lesser organization.

There is a possibility that his family will make a trip west and remain with him while he is here.

Frank Holland has been engaged by Universal for an important role in "The Truant," the story which will be filmed by Robert Thornby with Frank Mayo in the stellar role.

Le Roy Browne, architect, has been added to the staff of the Willat Productions, Inc., at the new Culver City studios. Mr. Browne is working under the personal supervision of Mr. Harold G. Oliver, technical and art director of the studio.

Clarke Irvine, who put out the exhibitors' advertising matter on Maurice Tourneur's "The Last of the Mohicans," has been secured by the Dial Film Company to arrange a special press campaign on "The Light in the Clearing," T. Hayes Hunter's production of Irving Bacheller's novel of the same name.

FILM MEN TO FORM LEAGUE OF DEFENSE

Recognizing the need of immediate and united action on the part of the motion picture industry to fight menaces of censorship and blue laws, the Motion Picture Directors' Association through its director-elect, William D. Taylor, has taken the first steps to form a central committee of film organizations.

Seventeen organizations representing different phases of producing, distributing and exhibiting motion pictures, have been invited to send one representative apiece to a meeting at the Los Angeles Athletic Club on February 28th to affiliate "for the purpose of protecting ourselves from all enemies, and of furthering our common interests."

William D. Taylor has been appointed by the Directors' Association as its representative on the central committee.

THIRD "BIG FIVE" FIRST NATIONAL PRODUCTION RELEASED

Associated First National has set March 4th as the publication date for the third of its series of "Big Five" pictures. R. A. Walsh's production, "The Oath," which has been seven months in production, has been chosen as the successor to "Passion" and "The Kid."

A Broadway house in New York has been secured for the premiere showing, which will take place immediately after the release date.

Frank Holland is playing De Forbes in Frank Mayo's current production under the direction of Robert Thornby at the Universal.

Charles Ray, assisted by his staff, has completed the titling and editing of his fifth production, "Scrap Iron."

This picturization of the Charles Van Loan's popular Saturday Evening Post story marks the debut of the star as a director.

Gladys Leslie, the former Vitagraph star, has just completed an important role in Lionel Barrymore's fourth and last production under his contract with Whitman Bennett, "Jim, the Penman."

A double program, including William S. Hart's "O'Malley of the Mounted" and Buster Keaton's latest Metro comedy, "The Haunted House," will open at the Grauman Million Dollar Theatre Monday.

After several weeks of debate, "Elmer Harris, Jr.," has been finally chosen as the name of the new heir apparent to the literary fortunes of Elmer Harris, supervising director for Realart.

Eight acres in Hollywood Park, recently purchased by Reginald Barker, are now being graded for an orchard and a home of modern Spanish architecture.

George Hackathorne, playing Amos in T. Hayes Hunter's new production, "The Light in the Clearing," was tendered a birthday dinner Sunday by the Duchess of Conant, who is enjoying the winter in Los Angeles.

Hal Mohr, in charge of the camera department of the George H. Kern productions, arrived at the studio the other morning with two full boxes of two-bit cigars under his arm, and a happy grin on his face, proudly announcing the fact that it was an eight-pound boy, named Michael.

DIRECTOR LEAVES SENNETT

Word has been received to the effect that Erle Kenton, director for Mack Sennett comedies, has resigned.

Mr. Kenton was responsible for the direction of "A Small Town Idol," "Down on the Farm," "Married Life" and "Love, Honor and Behave."

GOLDWYN PUBLICIST WEDS

They will take only a short honeymoon now, but expect later to visit their respective families in Ohio and Kentucky. Miss Marion Hunter, Secretary of the Hollywood Studio Club, and Director Paul Bern were the attendants.

"LADIES MUST LIVE" GOING EAST SOON

After more than twenty months of studio and laboratory work, "Ladies Must Live," the latest production made by George Loane Tucker, is ready for shipment to New York for a private viewing. Owing to Mr. Tucker's illness work on the film has been delayed.

Pauline Bush has arrived in Japan on her tour of the world in search of photoplay story material and "color."

Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford recently endowed two beds in the Children's Hospital of Los Angeles.

Wallace Reid, who hasn't had a vacation in several years, is to be treated to a round-the-world pleasure trip by his employers, beginning next summer.

Bessie Love has been invited to be a guest of honor at a carnival to be given under the auspices of the Associated Motion Picture Theatres of San Francisco, and has left for that city.

MUSIC EXCHANGE OPENED

With the forming of the West Coast Theatre Service Co. this week, Los Angeles is the second city in the United States to open a synchronized music exchange—a place where theatre men may be provided with musical scores for their pictures.

The music exchange was started to handle the sales campaign just inaugurated by the Synchronized Scenario Music Co. of Chicago. The West Coast Theatre Service Co. will be managed by Harold D. Neides, exchange man, and will be located at 730 South Olive Street for the present, or until other quarters can be secured.

For several years Mr. Neides was connected with the Triangle Film Corporation. He left it in 1918 and joined Goldwyn's staff in the Los Angeles exchange. From Goldwyn he went to Shanghai, China, where he established a motion picture supply shop. He returned from the Orient last month.

Charlie Conklin has started producing two-reel comedies for himself.

Emmett Dalton is preparing to produce five or six five-reel semi-western features.

Charlie Ray's next release, "The Old Swimm' Hole," hasn't a sub-title to its credit.

The Pacific Film Company, of which Johnny Hayes is manager, is building a $100,000 studio.

Al Haynes has completed two of his series of twenty-six single-reel comedies under the direction of Jack Jevne.

Gale Henry is preparing the first story for her series of two-reel comedies and will start work on same shortly.

A two-reel feature, "The Savage," starring Bebe Daniels, has been released for the first time and will be marketed on the state right basis.

The Oakley Film Company is now at work cutting its initial effort—a two-reel satirical comedy, "The Poor Rich," produced under the direction of J. W. Earley.

Allen Holubar and Dorothy Phillips are preparing for an early return to Los Angeles, according to Albert A. Kaufman, producer of the Holubar feature, "Man, Woman, Marriage."

According to reports from the Louis B. Mayer studio, but one more week's work is necessary for the completion of "The Invisible Fear," an Anita Stewart starring vehicle, being directed by Edwin Carewe.

"Playthings of Destiny" has been chosen by Louis B. Mayer as the releasing title for the Anita Stewart picture which was completed some time ago under the working title of "The Tornado."

Albert Kaufman announces that Sidney Franklin has completed the filming of Andrew Soutar's absorbing drama, "Courage." The production is now in the cutting room under the care of Billy Shea, while Director Franklin and Sada Cowan are preparing the titles.

In the latest Capitol Comedy, entitled "Indigo Sunday," produced by the National Film Corporation of America for release through Goldwyn, and starring George Bunny, son of John Bunny, is Aaron Mitchell the little colored boy who received screen recognition in Marshall Neilan's picture, "Dinty."

ward to his first starring vehicle, "Peck's Bad Boy."

Edna Purviance has more and better work than usual to her credit as the Woman. Two or three of her scenes display real emotional ability.

Carl Miller is also good in the small role of the Man.

Tom Wilson contributes much to the picture's comedy element with the Policeman as does B. F. Blinn, who plays the orphanage Trustee. They both have some highly amusing scenes with Chaplin.

The public will undoubtedly concede that "The Kid" was worth waiting for.

"THE GREATEST LOVE"

Directly due to her success as the mother in Frank Borzage's "Humoresque," Vera Gordon may be seen this week at the California in a similar role in "The Greatest Love." This time, however, she is the featured player in a piece which provides her with an even greater chance to reach the heart of the public through her incomparable ability to portray the much that combines to make real mother love, than did the other picture. Her work is truly beautiful, largely due to the fact that she has one of the most sensitive and expressive faces on the screen today. Moreover, her work is done, at all times, simply. This interpretation of Mrs. Lantini is another artistic achievement for Miss Gordon, "the greatest mother."

The picture itself is much on the order of "Humoresque," and has very nearly as many subtle little touches as the Fannie Hurst story. Its sub-titles assist it generally and the photography is satisfactory.

Bobbie Connelly again plays the little son, Lorenzo Lantini. The lad is always clever. Francesca, his rather frivolous little sister, is well played by a kiddie who really characterizes the part.

Hugh Huntley is cast as the grown Lorenzo and Yvonne Shelton does Francesca, the little flapper, who develops from the dancing child. She is just the type to play the part, and Huntley is also appropriately placed.

Donald Hall's comparatively few scenes as Mr. Sewell are effective and his action is easily accomplished.

Sally Crute does Mrs. Sewell with much of her well-remembered fire.

Mr. Lantini is rendered rather weakly by Bertram Marborough, who makes little impression at all.

William Tooker, Roy Don and Jessie Simpson complete the cast of this Selznick production.

"THE LURE OF EGYPT"

Pre-View

A pre-release showing of the Benjamin B. Hampton production, "The Lure of Egypt," was held at the Windsor Theatre last week. The picture is an adaptation of Norma Lorimer's rather thin story, "There Was a King in Egypt." It is only fairly entertaining, despite the rather good cast and photography and some extraordinarily striking art titles by Ferdinand Pinney Earle. This is because of its weak plot and jerky continuity. However, this Eastern type of thing always attracts the public.

Carl Gantvoort plays the leading masculine role, that of a wealthy young artist studying in Egypt. Some of his action is somewhat stilted, but he shows many possibilities, and on the whole gives a very fair performance.

Claire Adams is cast opposite him as the daughter of an archeologist whose life and fortune have been spent in a search for the mummy of a renowned Egyptian king. Her work is not particularly interesting, but neither is her part.

Bob McKim is as superbly polished and devilish as ever in the role of Prince Dagmar. His performances are always fascinating.

Maude Wayne offers the best heavy in which we have seen her in this picture. She does the slangy, breezy little vamp, who is more dangerous than she appears, convincingly and with ease.

William Lion West plays the second heavy with marked poise and no little display of screen technique. Many good actors are there who cannot provide a quiet part with personality.

Joseph J. Dowling excellently portrays the invalid excavator.

Harry Lorraine and Frank Hayes complete the cast as natives. The former is a prophet; the latter, a servant.

Howard Hickman directed the production.

"CINDERELLA'S TWIN"

Tally's Theatre changes its bill after a long run of "Kismet," with the Metro picture, "Cinderella's Twin," starring Viola Dana. The story itself is a foolish, inconsistent little affair that suffers by comparison with the ordinary program picture. The photography is uneven. It seems a waste to spend time casting such pictures at all since it takes more than a modernized Cinderella line to entertain in comedy-drama today. Several laughs are fished for with old, oh, very old, slapstick ceremonies (for instance, the dropping of food, which, by the way, is repeated to the picture's detriment).

The little star really should have better vehicles because her work is almost always charming, and a few real ingenue characterizations would help somewhat to regather the popularity that she once enjoyed.

CHINESE SCENARIO BEING PREPARED

Mr. George M. Nohalem has just finished the continuity of "Fanny Herself," for Tod Browning, and is now working with Mr. Charles Furthmann on the script of "Lotus Blossom," a James B. Leong Production. This company is backed by Chinese merchants.

The original story was written by Mr. Leong, and is the first story written by a Chinese author adapted for the screen.

HARTFORD COMPANY COMES SOUTH

Word has been received at the office of Sol Lesser, from Joseph Montrose, that the David Hartford company has completed the filming of the far north scenes for James Oliver Curwood's story, "The Golden Snare," and that the entire retinue of players are now enroute from the Canadian location to a more southerly one in the Sierras.

HUNTER GOING NORTH

Director T. Hayes Hunter, making "The Light in the Clearing" for the Dial Film Company, is preparing to leave for San Andreas, near San Francisco, to secure exteriors.

In the company will be Eddie Sutherland, Clara Horton, Eugenie Besserer, and Jack Rosleigh, the principals, together with a dozen other players and twenty-five rural character extras.

AT THE REALART STUDIO

Wanda Hawley has completed work on her latest production, temporarily titled

"Sweetie Peach," and will have a short rest before commencing upon her next. She will spend the coming week at San Diego.

Within a few weeks two new power wagons being built now will be ready for the night location work of Bebe Daniels and Wanda Hawley features. Each will provide electricity sufficient for 60 Klieg lights.

Thomas Heffron will direct Wanda Hawley in her next picture with Maynard Laswell as assistant.

AT UNIVERSAL

Five directors will begin production on as many Universal pictures within a few days. Jacques Jaccard will start filming "Renunciation," the Peter B. Kyne story; Tod Browning has sent William Fildew, his chief cameraman, to New York to register atmospheric shots for "Fanny Herself," the Edna Ferber story which he will produce with an all-star cast; Fred Leroy Granville, who has just completed "The Girl and the Goose" with Eva Novak, is waiting for a new story upon which to begin work; Gladys Walton is soon to start on "The Man Tamer," in which she will again be directed by Harry B. Harris; while Rollin Sturgeon is assembling an all-star cast to appear in "Human Hearts."

Stuart Paton has begun editing "False Colors," the feature in which Priscilla Dean will next be seen; Marcel de Sano is busy in his cutting room getting "The Dangerous Moment" down to footage; and Reeves Eason is assembling "Patches," in which "Breezy," his four-year-old son, is featured.

Norman Dawn has left Universal City for northern Canada, where he will direct Eva Novak in "The Evil Half," a story of Alaska.

Eddie Polo is working on one of the fast-moving episodes of "The Seal of Satan," his latest serial.

"The Homeward Trail," Harry Carey's forthcoming feature, is being filmed under the direction of Jack Ford at Universal City.

The opening episodes for "The White Horseman," Art Acord's next serial, are being filmed under the direction of Albert Russell. Iva Forrester and Beatriz Domingues have leading roles.

Edith Roberts is at work at Universal City on "The Opened Shutters," a story by Clara Louise Burnham, in which she is being directed by William Worthington.

Lee Kohlmar is directing Jack Perrin, the Universal star, in "Fighting Blood," a two-reeler, while Edward Laemmle, who usually directs the star, is editing "The Guilty Trail," his last production.

"Way Out West," a burlesque on the wild and wooly photodrama, is being filmed with "Billy" Bletcher in the starring role. Ward Hayes is directing.

"Roman Romeos," a rollicking burlesque on ancient Rome, is being produced by Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran. The production is a two-reel comedy.

Hoot Gibson is being directed in another short-reel thriller by William Craft. The story is called "The Desert Spotlight," and Marcella Pershing plays opposite the star.

"When Zulu Meets Zulu" is the title of a one-reel merry-go-round now being made under the direction of William Beaudine and featuring Eddie Barry.

DWAN PREPARES NEXT PRODUCTION

Allan Dwan is at work upon the script of "The Gold Woman," from the Red Book story by Mildred Cram. He expects to film it after the completion of "Johnny Cucabod," upon which he is now working at the Hollywood studios.

Listen, Supes!

I overheard the other day
A bunch of Supes complaining
About the photographic way
Of their good dough obtaining.

"At every beck or call we come
A-skipin' to the director.
He gives us hope, but seems quite dumb
When 'Work,' we cry, 'or we will war.'

"And those who take our stills, well, they—
Sure keep us absolutely broke,
The work they do!—all I can say
Is, I hope to goodness that they choke!"

Now, listen, Supes, and all you folks
That need good stills and know them, too.
I argue not, nor plead, nor coax,
Just slip a hint what you should do.

I know a wizard who can take Stills where Beauty dwells;
His prices no one else can stake.
Go over and judge for yourselves.

AT INDEPENDENCE CITY

All interiors for Neal Hart's newest story, "God's Gold," have been shot, and the company is now on location at Balboa, where the final scenes in the production will be taken. Webster Cullison is directing.

Pete Morrison, under the direction of George Beranger, started work on the second of his series of two-reel western specials this week. Ethel Ralston has the leading feminine role.

James Clemens is preparing to start work on Max Roberts' sixth Pinnacle Comedy in a few days. The star's fifth subject bears the title "The Ting Tong Man," and will be shipped to Chicago this week for release by the Independent Films Association.

"Go Get 'Em" is the title of Ray Gallagher's newest story that has just entered its final stages of production under the direction of Charlie Roberts. The star will start work on the next in his series at once.

Arthur Henry Gooden, author of "The Gentle Intruder" and "The Innocence of Lazzette," starring Mary Miles Minter; "The Ghost of the Rancho," starring Bryant Washburn; "The Flaming Disk" and "Elmo the Fearless," starring Elmo Lincoln," etc., has a record of having written 110,000 feet of film during the past fifteen months.

Dixie Lamont, who has been co-starring in comedies and westerns at the Universal studios, has signed a long-term contract with the Independent Films Association, whereby she will play the lead in a series of two-reel outdoor dramas starring Ray Gallagher.

AT LASKY'S

Jesse L. Lasky arrived this week from New York City, with the announcement that elaborate plans are being made for Betty Compson's pictures. Miss Compson's contract extends over a five-year period.

Before leaving for the East, Thomas Meighan had a brief conference with Mr. Lasky, and on his return to the New York studios will begin work on "The Conquest of Canaan," the Booth Tarkington story, under Roy Neil's direction. Tom Forman, who has been directing Mr. Meighan, remained behind to collaborate with Peter B. Kyne upon the latter's stories collected under the title of "Cappy Ricks," the adaptation of which will be by Albert LeVino. Thomas Meighan will star in them later. The picture will be directed by Tom Forman, who will go east as soon as his work here is finished.

Ethel Clayton is at work under the direction of Wm. D. Taylor in the picture, "Wealth," adapted from Cosmo Hamilton's "Almighty Dollar," by Julia Crawford Ivers. It is expected that Geo. Melford will return from the far north the last of the present week to complete "The Money Master" at the studio.

Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle has completed work on "Crazy to Marry," a picture written by Frank Condon and adapted to Walter Woods. James Cruze is the director. It is understood that the star will start in a few weeks on George Pattullo's amusing story, "Gasoline Gus," also under Mr. Cruze's direction. The scenario is being done by Walter Woods.

COMPOSE SONG HIT

King Vidor now blossoms forth as the writer of a popular song. In collaboration with Verne Elliott, he wrote both words and music to "Lying Lips," a song dedicated to the Thomas H. Ince film production now playing at the Symphony Theatre. In it Florence Vidor, who is King Vidor's wife, has the leading feminine role.

The Symphony Orchestra and Anderson, the new Symphony organist, are going to feature the song during the entire run of "Lying Lips."

The Film Music Co., manufacturers of the "Pop" music rolls, are making a player piano roll of the song hit, and have listed it in their March catalogue.

Vidor and Elliott are planning to publish seven other songs written by them in spare moments during the past several months.

MUMMERS HOLD MEETING

The Mummers will hold their regular monthly meeting Tuesday evening at the Workshop. Dr. Allison Gaw of the University of Southern California will be present to talk upon Bernard Shaw and give some of the English author's readings. Miss Eli Beneche of the Lasky art department will also present and explain some models of originally designed stage sets.

The business meeting which is called at seven-thirty is for the active members only, but the general session, which starts an hour later, is open to associate members and their friends as well.

STAHL SIGNS LEWIS STONE

Louis B. Mayer announces that Lewis Stone has been secured to play the leading male role in "Muffled Drums," a John M. Stahl production which Mr. Mayer will present through First National.

Current Reviews

She does Connie McGill, a ninety-dollar-a-month cook who dresses like a five-dollar-a-week slavey, or an inmate of an orphan asylum. In a gorgeous evening gown, however, the little servant is perfectly at ease.

Wallace MacDonald appears in the leading male role of Prentice Blue, a real blue blood who invariably runs to the assistance of his hostess' maid when she spills the dinner about the room. The part naturally affords little opportunity for a real performance. In fact, none of them do.

Ruth Stonehouse is cast as Lady Ruth, whom she plays stiffly.

Pa and Ma Du Geen are amusingly done by Edward Connelly and Victory Bateman. Gertrude Short, Irene Hunt, Cecil Foster, Edward Cecil and Calvert Carter do "bits." Dallas Fitzgerald directed the picture.

Press Loyalty

From the various editorials which appear in the Los Angeles Times concerning the motion picture, one would naturally be led to believe that that enterprising publication is at least interested in the industry which has put the Angel City on the map. Evidently it is, but with a few sarcastic reservations.

The following comment upon the extravagant picture might pass as a mere observation were it not for the insinuation in the last sentence. We resent that thinly veiled insult, partly because it only further proves the attitude of the Times in cinema matters. It is also plain to be seen that the article's only excuse lies in its last remark.

Rather different indeed is the position of the Examiner and several other of our dailies who have taken up with spirit the really important film questions, such as censorship and the Blue Laws, treating each fairly and squarely for the local picture world. Although some interests apparently fail to recognize, or even to consider, the fact that most of the city's business activities have been made possible by the film colony, it is interesting to note that there are other equally powerful forces working all about us in full appreciation of the accomplishments and the resultant importance of Los Angeles' greatest industry. They are tendering us the respect and championship that is due any huge block of population; in return they will receive our support.

Now is the time to find our friends and "spot" our enemies. The Times and its insolence doesn't go. What does it mean, "the nearer its dissolution is at hand?"

F. R.

"Some of the screen geniuses say that the day of the costly and extravagant picture has passed and that $40,000 will be about the limit for a future production. Of course, there can be no hard and fast rule. Some pictures full of heart interest, throbs, and passion may be enacted in a simple and inexpensive environment. But there will be producers who think that a myriad of faces and a mint of money make the picture. Griffith tells of a picture in mind which will require over $2,000,000 to produce and the book rights alone of which will cost $600,000. It will furnish a three-hour show and seats will be sold for $5. Pictures like that may create epoches in the camera art, but they can hardly be said to do the picture industry any good. The farther it gets away from the dimes the NEARER its dissolution is at hand."

The Police Quit

We understand from recent articles in the local newspapers that the city government has at last taken a stand against the histrionic tendencies of the police force. No more will the festive motor cop or patrolman desert his post that he may grace the screen and incidentally multiply his income.

It is good to know that effort is rewarded, isn't it?

National Association

Bids for Exhibitors

The following account in Variety of an attempt upon the part of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry to receive the exhibitor into its theater division is certainly interesting. The results may be more so.

"Considerable comment has been caused among the exhibitors' ranks affiliated with the Motion Picture Theater Owners of America, as a result of the new resolution adopted by the executive committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, soliciting exhibitors to join its theater division.

"A statement of the association, just issued, declares that the 'action of individual members of the National Association in inviting the exhibitors to join the organization was approved and confirmed by the executive committee; that the appointment of a committee to organize the theater division was authorized and this committee will be chosen in the near future.'

"A new committee was appointed to amend the by-laws of the association and to provide for the proper functioning of all divisions of the association. It consists of Gabriel L. Hess, J. D. Williams, Lee Counselman, Paul H. Cromeline and Saul E. Rogers. A general meeting of all members of the association will be called later to pass upon the recommendations of this committee.

"The resolution inviting exhibitors to join is as follows:

"Whereas, members of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry recently invited exhibitors of the United States to join the theater division of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, and

"Whereas, the purpose of such invitation was to bring about a more perfect co-ordination of all branches of the industry to combat legislation seeking to establish legalized censorship of motion pictures prior to publication, the enactment of so-called blue laws, and all other adverse legislation, it being always understood that membership in the theater division of the National Association would and shall not in any way conflict with membership in any local state or national exhibitor organization now existing or that may hereafter be formed; now therefore be it

"Resolved: That the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry approves and confirms such action of its members and now as an association invites and solicits the exhibitors of the United States to become members of its theater division."

Louis B. Mayer announces that he has purchased "The Price of Happiness," by Florence Auer, for picturization, with Anita Stewart in the stellar role. The scenario is now being prepared by Finis Fox, who recently wrote the continuities for Charles Ray's "Scrap Iron" and Katherine MacDonald's "My Lady's Latchkey."

Meanwhile Edwin Carewe, who has been directing Miss Stewart in her last two productions, is selecting the cast for the new picture.

WILL JOURNEY TO SAN FRANCISCO FOR CAFE SCENES

The entire David Butler organization, headed by Director Fred Butler, will shortly jaunt northward, where the bright lights of San Francisco's night life will be filmed for "Sophie Semenov," the Wallace Irwin story which Irving Lesser is producing.

Arrangements have been made whereby the Butler company will occupy the "Tait's Beach Resort," near Golden Gate Park, and here all the cabaret scenes will be filmed. About a week or ten days will be consumed by the trip.

ROACH STUDIO PREPARING FOR ACTION

A process of expansion is under way at the Hal Roach studio, where the Milwaukee Building Company is putting in $75,000 worth of improvements. These include a new 100x200-foot stage, and extra dressing room buildings, which will accommodate the new companies to be featured by Roach.

The new Ruth Roland serial, "The Golden Canyon," started on March 1st. Also, Gaylord Lloyd, brother of Harold, is to be featured in a new series of one-reel comedies under the direction of Alf Goulding.

TO MAKE WESTERN COMEDIES

Under the name of South and Western Comedies, J. T. (Mac) Skinner and J. E. ("Buck") Wallace have organized a company to make a series of one-reel Western situation comedies. Studio space is being arranged for, and work will be started March 7. Wallace, as featured lead, will be assisted by Laurell Bishop and a cast that is being assembled. Bob Gray will direct, and W. C. Thompson will photograph. Wallace will also act as studio manager. C. O'D. Blanchfield will supervise the business management of the organization.

AT THE SENNETT STUDIO

With the completion of work on Mack Sennett's first romantic comedy, "Heartbalm," production activity at the Sennett studios will cease for a period of from four to six weeks. It is understood that Mr. Sennett has entirely fulfilled his obligations to the Paramount people for two-reel comedies, and that, in view of his new policy, he will create in 1921 fewer two-reel features—perhaps not more than a dozen. These will be distributed by Associated Producers.

Another five-reel comedy is likewise ready for the cutting room. The production name is "Furnished Rooms."

Charlie Murray is on his way to New York, where his daughter lies seriously ill. This occurrence will postpone, if not prevent, Mr. Murray's contemplated trip to Honolulu.

Ben Turpin is at this writing eastward bound on a vacation of from four to six weeks.

Phyllis Haver will spend some time in San Francisco.

Kalla Pasha expects to make some club appearances in central and northern California during the period of his vacation.

James Finlayson will spend his vacation period in San Francisco.

Active work at the Sennett studios will be resumed just as soon as the scenario and continuity of "Molly-O" is completed. Miss Normand's supporting company will be assembled and at work, it is stated, within six weeks.

AT INDEPENDENCE CITY

"Crooked Trails" is announced as the title of Ray Gallagher's second two-reel outdoor drama for the Arthur Gooden Productions.

Pete Morrison started work this week on the second of his series of two-reel western productions. The story bears the title, "The Good Black Sheep," and was written by Morrison's director, George Beranger. Ray Reis is behind the camera.

A new two-reel comedy has been selected for Max Roberts of Pinnacle Comedies, and production on the story will commence in a few days. The star's latest picture, "The Ting Tong Man," is now on its way to the Independent Films Association in Chicago for release on the state rights plan.

AT UNIVERSAL

The event of the week at the Universal was the signing of King Baggot to direct Carmel Myers in "Thou Art With Me," a story of life in the New York Ghetto, from the pens of Lucien and Doris Schroeder. The star is now at work on the opening scenes.

Norman Dawn is in the north country with Eva Novak and a company of players who are enacting "The Evil Half."

Harry Carey is at work on the concluding scenes for "The Homeward Trail," a story written for him by Eugene Manlove Rhodes. The company is on location on the desert near Universal City. Jack Ford is directing.

Laguna is being utilized as a location for a number of scenes in "The Opened Shutters," the photodrama in which William Worthington is directing Edith Roberts.

Frank Mayo is at work on "The Truant," his next starring vehicle. Robert Thornby is directing from the continuity by Lucien Hubbard.

Current Reviews

MAMA'S AFFAIR At the Ambassador

Daughters of mothers, particularly daughters of hysterical mothers, do not fail to see "Mama's Affair" starring Constance Talmadge, and receive the biggest kick of your young lives. It is a Loos-Emerson adaptation of the stage farce and although in spots it might be considered a little risqué, we will wager that a picture of its type never made a more excellent point. With beautiful sarcasm it outlines the effect of the nervous "martyrish" mother on a normal innocent daughter. Yes, it gives us all something to think about.

Technically this First National production is good.

Connie is her usual flapperish self as Eve, the victim of a woman's sloppy sentiment. Her performance is as enthusiastic as ever and very pleasing.

Kenneth Harlan has the forceful part of Doctor Harmon, the masculine lead. He is very entertaining.

Effie Shannon plays Mrs. Orrin, Eve's mother, very cleverly. Her characterization is really unusual.

George Le Guere does some highly amusing work in the role of Henry Marchant, another and more willing victim of complaint "too much mother."

Gertrude Le Brand completes the confusion as Mrs. Marchant, dear Mrs. Orrin's confidante and sympathizer. "Heavens! haven't we known them!"

"O'MALLEY OF THE MOUNTED"

The latest William Hart release, "O'Malley of the Mounted," is at Grauman's. It is another virile Hart story that has been given an unusually good production. Gorgeous exteriors and beautiful photography are made use of to assist this thrilling tale of the mounted police. Slight exaggerations are easily overlooked in this star's pictures.

Hart himself plays O'Malley, a lieutenant of the mounted police. His adventures while searching for a murderer and his final decision against capturing his man form the plot and provide some wild action. O'Malley is another fair and fearless Hart hero, which will receive the children's worship, and in which even our own exacting grown up selves will believe for the moment.

Eva Novak plays Rose Lanier, the leading feminine role, in fact, the only feminine role, to everyone's satisfaction. She rather "fits" as a western girl.

Antrim Short is good as Bud Lanier, the youthful murderer, whose crime was, at least in part, justified. He gives an impression of impulsive tenderness that is exactly what is necessary in his role.

Alfred Allen is strikingly cast as the iron master of the hill gang. His work is excellent.

Leo Willis does the heavy, Red Jaeger. His fight scenes with the star provide considerable suspense.

Bert Sproutte plays the sheriff.

The story was written by Hart and directed by Lambert Hillyer.

"THE MARRAGE OF WILLIAM ASHE"

Metro presents May Allison in "The Marriage of William Ashe" at Tally's. The well remembered novel by Mrs. Humphrey Ward probably doesn't have the entertainment value screenically, that the original possessed. Nevertheless it makes a fairly interesting photoplay. It is only fair technically. Such incidents as the star's donning kilts upon visiting Scotland upon her honeymoon will undoubtedly be considered unnecessary to our unfortunately consistent American minds. Credulity is disappearing from the fan ranks.

The star plays Kitty Bristol, the youthful wife of William Ashe, a British political leader. Some of her whimsical and capricious action is exceptionally well executed, and the entire role is good.

MERIVYN GEIGER

Who has just finished with G. M. Anderson Productions

Wyndham Standing does William Ashe, and does him very well indeed. His grace and personality are never submerged.

Frank Elliott accomplishes the heavy, Geoffrey Cliffe, a somewhat supercilious individual, whose suggestions are almost always wicked.

Zeffie Tilbury does the star's mother and Clarissa Selwynne is Lady Lyster.

Robert Bolder and Lydia Yeamans Titus have an amusing sequence.

"BOYS WILL BE BOYS"

Irvin S. Cobb's humorous little story, "Boys Will Be Boys," which was adapted some time ago for Will Rogers by E. A. Bingham, is released this week at the California by Goldwyn. It is a typical Rogers vehicle and will please those who enjoy simple entertainment, since the plot is a bit slimsey and very obvious, and the scenario has a tendency to drag. The photography is standard.

The star is truly delightful as Peep O'Day, an illiterate native of a Southern poorhouse. His wistful desire to enjoy a belated boyhood, when wealth is suddenly his, and his naive insistence that his lady friend accept financial aid in her need, from himself, are beautifully interpreted. It is Rogers' whimsical personality that has created his national popularity despite his weak pictures.

Irene Rich has the pleasant little part of Lucy, the village school teacher, while C. E. Mason does a few scenes as her lawyer fiancé.

Sidney Ainsworth and H. Milton Ross form the opposition in the parts of Sublette, a shyster lawyer, and Bagby, a lively stable keeper. Their deep-dyed villainy reminds us of the Horatio Alger, Jr., tales of our extreme and indiscriminating youth, but that is all right.

Edward Kimball is responsible for a clever addition to the cast in the role of the shrewd Judge Priest. Mr. Kimball's parts are always just what one would like to have them.

Mae Hopkins plays the city manicurist, Kitty.

C. E. Thurston, Cordelia Callahan, Nick Cogley and Burton Halbert do minor roles.

Clarence Badger directed.

"A ROMANTIC ADVENTURESS"

"A Romantic Adventure," a Paramount picture featuring Dorothy Dalton, is showing at Clune's. It is a rather inappropriately titled but fairly entertaining story by Charles Belmont Davis and was produced by Harry Knoles in the east. Many effective and well photographed sets and exteriors are employed and, on the whole, the production is more satisfactory than Miss Dalton's recent ones have been.

She portrays Alice Vanni, a role which might be considered too young and unsophisticated to be ideally cast. The idea of the mature Miss Dalton doing a classical dancer may also receive criticism, but, taken altogether, her work has more life than has marked her recent performances.

Charles Meredith plays Captain Maxwell of the Yale team, whose position naturally writes the word hero all over him. His evident lack of technique hurts his screen work.

Augusta Anderson offers perhaps the most finished interpretation of the entire production as Mrs. Martyn, the "little" heroine's mother. As the selfish woman who lives by her wits and who commercializes her daughter, she is absolutely convincing. Her movements mean something always.

Ivo Dawson is also clever as the parasitical Louis Fitch, who assists Mrs. Martyn in the manipulation of her little schemes.

Howard Lang is rather appealing as Alice's danceur father, Professor Vanni.

John Ardizoni, Robert Schable and Lewis Broughton are included in the cast.

"POLLY WITH A PAST"

The very delightful Belasco farce, "Polly with a Past," was recently picturized by Eastern Metro with Ina Claire in the featured role. It is now running at the Mission.

The play was carefully scenarized by June Mathis and Arthur Zellner, who made all possible use of the original farce lines to the picture's advantage.

The photography, while a little uneven, is, on the whole, good. The cast is also entertaining.

Miss Claire's work as Polly is at all times interesting. She might, however, do well to eliminate, while before the camera, one or two little stage mannerisms that do not screen prettily. For instance, a quick flutter of the eyelashes, which she repeatedly employs, detracts from her close-ups.

Ralph Graves appears opposite Miss Claire as Rex Zile, a rather awkward swain, who seems not to know his own mind matrimonially.

Maxwell Karger personally directed the picture.

Harvey Benham and his pal (whose name the press sheet omits) do some clever comedy team work as Rex's chums and brother plotters. It occurs to us that these were their respective roles in the original.

A good type was chosen for the irate Myrtle.

coe Arbuckle will star. Walter Woods will do the scenario and Mr. Pattullo is at the studio to co-operate in the work.

William D. Taylor is progressing with "Wealth," in which Ethel Clayton is starring, and which is an adaptation by Julia Crawford Ivers of Cosmo Hamilton's story, "The Almighty Dollar." It is understood that Mr. Taylor will next do Henry Arthur Jones' play, "The Lifted Veil." Mrs. Ivers will again prepare the screen version while Miss Clayton will appear in the stellar role.

Wallace Reid is completing work on his new picture by Byron Morgan with the tentative title, "Watch My Smoke," under the direction of Frank Urson. This will be followed by "Tall Timbers," the first original picture story written by Dr. James L. B. Scherer, the educator and magazine writer. Mr. Urson will again direct Mr. Reid and Eugene B. Lewis will do the scenario.

Cecil B. de Mille has completed the cutting of his all-star production, "The Affairs of Anatol," and will, it is understood, start work on a new picture somewhere about the 21st of the present month.

Sam Wood is about half way through the picture that he is directing with Gloria Swanson in the stellar role. It is Elinor Glyn's "The Great Moment."

Approximately the first of the month Betty Compson will begin work at the Lasky Studio under the direction of Penrhyn Stanlaws, the American artist on Ernst Klein's "At the End of the World."

TO DO RURAL PICTURE FOR EUROPE AT VITAGRAPH

The Italian-American Film Company has been incorporated under the laws of California and will produce two and also five-reel pictures depicting rural life in the mid-western states. The purpose of these pictures is to disabuse the European mind of the idea that the American farmer is a wild west cowboy. The company is being financed by Italian capital.

BRUNTON RETURNS FROM S. F. WITH MATERIAL FOR KIPLING PICTURES

Robert Brunton, who is to make the screen productions of three of Rudyard Kipling's stories for Pathe, has returned from San Francisco with a parcel of rare old fabrics and metal filigree work which was sent to him for use in the first Kipling picture, "Without Benefit of Clergy." It was sent by Paul Brunet's representatives in India.

While in San Francisco, Mr. Brunton was the guest of Major Loring Pickering, proprietor of the San Francisco "Bulletin," who gave a luncheon for the producer, at which the guests included Atholl McBean, President of the Chamber of Commerce; S. M. Schlesinger, and several other banking and financial representatives.

Major Pickering, who is a warm friend of Mr. Kipling, and who has traveled extensively in India, presented Mr. Brunton with several Hindu sun helmets and trinkets which he collected during his tours of the Orient. While the production of "Without Benefit of Clergy" is in progress at the Brunton studios, Major Pickering will be Mr. Brunton's guest for several days.

Screen Titling

A department devoted to the subject of photoplay titles in their literary, artistic and technical phases.

Conducted by Frank F. Greene

Without pretending to be a court of last appeal on the subject, this department is intended to be of service to the industry.
Letters directed to Mr. Greene at his studio,
at 907 Central Building, will receive his personal attention.

ANIMATED TITLES

Animation offers opportunity for cleverness and skill to put over ideas in titles in a way that is brilliantly effective. We recall a comedy situation in which a pair of young honeymooners were separated in a strange hotel during the night. Young husband awakes to find his bride missing. In letters of normal size and style he calls her name.
Action progresses—clearly he gets no response. Action shows a much louder call, which is supported by a greatly increased size of letter (which gets a ripple of mirth and leads up to the animated title feature).
Still no response. Apprehension is registered and title gives third call, which is a climax in large letters of thin, animated, wavering lines, very legible and in support of the action, clearly and effectually putting over the quavering, apprehensive voice idea.
Very simple; yes, but clever. The idea registered and "brought down the house."

Animation in titles may also be very dull and out of place. A strip of action over which the reading is superimposed is ordinarly an example of poor judgment. The tendency is to follow the action at the expense of the reading. Action that is introduced into titles merely because it is material on hand is most likely to fail, while that which is produced in support of a clever idea, consistently handled, may be a knockout.

Some companies have made effective use of animated trade marks as "trailers," and thereby have secured valuable screen advertising that could not be obtained otherwise at any price. If their production is a success, they have presented their trademark most effectively to the ultimate consumer at a time when he is most receptive and favorably inclined.

COLORED ART TITLES?

What is your opinion of colored art titles?

If you refer to tinted titles of a single color, there are often subjects that may be rendered more convincing; a fire scene of red, a moonlight scene of blue as commonly done in action scenes. A hand-colored series of art titles recently came to our notice—titles beautifully colored, an exquisite harmony of red and green. But they were too beautiful—too much a feature to remain in their place as a contributing factor, and tended to monopolize the production.

SPOKEN ART TITLES

Why is it customary to avoid spoken titles for art work?

Now you have us up a stump. There must be some good reason or the custom would not be so general. Yet we find that drawings in various publications are, to a great extent, illustrative of spoken situations, especially in case of fiction. It seems to us that many an opportunity for a good psychological art title has been needlessly lost.
Will someone kindly enlighten us?

"COLORADO"

The very "meller" screen version of Augustus Thomas' old melodrama, "Colorado," plays at the Superba with Frank Mayo in the star role. The picture is in spots very poor entertainment and in others burlesque. Near its introduction it mixes serious business with some incongruous slapstick scenes, which utterly ruin the first sequence. The photography and lighting are both below standard.

Mayo hasn't the chance for convincing action as Frank Austin, the old-time hero, that many of his recent Universal parts have afforded him. In fact, we only know that he is the hero, because he saves a man's life at the picture's start, and from there on the subtitles explain how unusual he is. We like to see him characterize his roles.

Gloria Hopes appears opposite him as Kitty Doyle. Her work misses fire some way also; besides which her namby pamby part is against her.

Charles Le Moyne does Kincaid, the dirty villain as heavily as possible, thus perfecting the old blood and thunder triangle.

Leonard Clapham assists the opposition as Dave Collins, a rival for the fair Kitty's hand.

Charles Newton and Lillian West are cast as Mr. and Mrs. Doyle, while Dan Crimmins and Rosa Gore supply the comedy element with the family servants.

Everything considered, "Colorado" is one of the most unsatisfactory Universal pictures we have lately seen.

Reeves Eason directed.

Pick-ups*WESTERN COMPANY FOR GLOBE

The Apache Trails Production Company started work last week on a dual series of two-reel westerns at Globe, Arizona. J. B. Warner and Vester Pegg are the featured leads. Warner is supported by Kitoria Beveridge, "Billie" Bennett, and Lew Meehan. The megaphone is in the hands of A. J. Scott, with V. L. Acklin at the camera.

Vester Pegg is supported by Isabelle Wilford, William Rino and Abe Farra. Buck Connors is directing Pegg, with Charlie Cronkhite at the camera.

The organization is headed by Senator F. A. Woodward. A. W. Snyder is vice-president, and H. V. Snell, secretary and treasurer. The above, together with J. Watt Hogue, B. J. Ponkey, and D. L. Meloy, all of Globe, form the board of directors. W. F. Tobias is the Los Angeles representative. C. O'D. Blanchfield is business adviser and sales manager of the organization.

PACIFIC FILM COMPANY STARTS WORK

Work will start Monday morning at the studio of the Pacific Film Company at Culver City upon the production of single-reel comedies by Vernon Dent. One comedy will be produced semi-monthly, alternating with George Ovey and his White Cap players, thus completing the schedule of a comedy a week.

Meanwhile building operations are being rushed on the new administration buildings and a 100x130 foot stage. Manager John J. Hayes expects to have these ready for use by early spring.

Waking Them Up

Into his very big, spiritual story, "The Unfoldment," George H. Kern has incorporated a novel idea, at least one angle of which promises to prove beneficial to the entire industry. It is merely this: he utilizes, to reform the heavy characters in his story, an "inside" photoplay which he has them witness. By means of the characterizations in this "inside" picture he points out and accentuates the wrong in the natures of the people in his main story, and through this process of having his principals "see themselves as others see them" the author and producer leads up to a striking climax. This innovation naturally insures a great amount of entertainment value for the Kern production, as interest always follows that which is different.

We are more concerned, however, with the fact that this one feature is liable to materially assist a project which the profession would do well to have in hand. To explain—

That great mass of humanity which we have taken the liberty to collect and casually term the public attends the cinema theater every week. It does so that it may be amused, and is, oftentimes unconsciously, educated and reformed, which is just another case of the sugar-coated pill.

The fact that a year of picture-going accomplishes more for the mind and morals of the average man than does the devotion of an equal space of time to the lecture room and church is recognized more or less indefinitely by many; others who think less often have continued loyal to the motion picture without classifying its appeal, or merely because it pleases their understandings.

Month in and month out they view productions with great spiritual themes by which they are interested, affected and influenced. Every tenth picture hits a given individual with its depiction of the faults and virtues of a character like unto his own. If he is an ordinarily susceptible man, he finds a lesson for himself in it, and whether he takes it or not, he has been exposed to good, which is the point. Furthermore, he believes quite implicitly that which is shown him on the shadow stage. He might, however, be spoken of as believing instinctively, since it is true that, even in the face of his own faith, the actual moral stimulus of the photoplay has never been brought home to him.

We have for some time been convinced that the one way to surprise a recognition of his own esteem for the moving picture from this type of fan is to inform him, via the screen, that in it lies his greatest teacher. If he will credit one filmed principle, he will another; and it is now vital as it has never before been vital for him to know the truth. This is because the cries of the fanatics who are urging the acceptance of censorship and the Blue Laws must be answered intelligently and their odious infringements upon personal freedom must be curtailed if we are to maintain in our own country the principles for which our armies were sent to Europe in 1917.

Once the populace realizes the extent of the screen's influence upon its attitudes toward the big things in this life, the efforts of the lusty-lunged minority to limit its scope will come to naught.

If the Kern photoplay assists in the education of the people along this line, if it brings them an appreciation of the immortal power of the screen which they only vaguely recognize as yet, we will acclaim it one of our foremost missionaries.

Income Tax Exemptions

For the Actor

In view of the inevitable last-minute rush to make out income tax returns, we are printing the following list of actors' exemptions, which may simplify things a bit.

It will be noted that chief among the exemptions mentioned is advertising, an all-important item in this business. We will be more than willing to supply those artists who use Camera! as a publicity medium with the exact figures of their 1920 accounts. Such a service may possibly prove a convenience to those individuals who do not keep accurate records of their expenditures. Correspondence or phone calls relating to this matter will be given immediate attention.

Tax is not charged on money spent by the actor for:

Advertising.

Business telephones, telegrams and taxis.

Commissions to agents.

Dresses used exclusively in the play and lasting less than one year.

Express on trunks.

Fees to stage hands.

Grease paint, makeup, wigs.

Hats and gloves.

Laundry, pressing and cleaning bills.

Lingerie.

Maid or valet for theater only.

Photos.

Scenery depreciation when you own the act.

Shoes and stockings.

Sleepers when not paid by employers.

Wardrobe for men, when used exclusively in the play.

"THE FOUR HORSEMEN OF THE APOCALYPSE"

Mission

Metro releases Rex Ingram's production of the Vincente Blasco Ibanez story, "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," this week. Despite the apparent unsuitability of the complicated original to the screen, June Mathis accomplished a far more comprehensive scenario than could have been justly expected. In many ways this picture is unusual. Certainly it is an artistically handled, beautifully photographed spectacle with its stupendous sets and its crowds of effective atmosphere.

We might question the advisability of offering a world so lately through all the miseries of a world war a rehearsal of its accompanying sad experiences, but, leaving that, "The Four Horsemen" is a real triumph for its director, Mr. Ingram. The cast is mostly exceptional.

Pomeroy Cannon plays Mariaga, the old Spaniard whose fortune was made in Argentine. As the dominant grandfather of the three scorned little Germans (whose Spanish blood failed to take), and the beloved children of his French son-in-law, Cannon is very good.

Joseph Swickard has in Desnoyers the biggest role in the picture. He plays it beautifully and occasions every tear in the production with his subtle interpretation.

Julio Desnoyers, his son, is fascinatingly done by Rudolph Valentino, who takes complete advantage of his opportunities. The technique of this player is improving rapidly.

Alice Terry appears opposite him as Madame Laurier, the young wife of a man whom she doesn't love. Miss Terry makes a satisfactory foil for Valentino.

Laurier himself is interpreted by John Sainpolis, whose work renders the part more than impressive.

Stuart Holmes does Carl the oldest German grandson of Mariaga. The role provides him with very little opportunity, but his action is handled in his usual competent manner.

Alan Hale is very appropriately cast as Carl Sr., his Teutonic father.

Harry Northrup, Wallace Beery and Arthur Hoyt all enact officers in the German army. The former is good as the general, and the others afford some clever comedy relief.

An excellent type plays the mysterious stranger who provides the story of "The Four Horsemen."

Smoke Turner, Mable Van Buren, Henry Klas, Virginia Warwick and several others do small but interesting parts.

This picture will undoubtedly enjoy a long run over the entire country.

"THE OLD SWIMMIN' HOLE"

Ambassador Theater

Charles Ray is to be congratulated upon his latest First National release, which is an adaptation of James Whitcomb Riley's renowned poem, "The Old Swimmin' Hole." It is both an innovation from the standpoint of production and an artistic triumph for the star. To begin, no subtitles are utilized to explain or assist the story in any way. That none are required is due to the exceptionally lucid scenario and the clever interpretations of the cast.

The rural locations are as beautiful as any that we have witnessed on the screen and the photography of them leaves nothing to be desired. The entire production resembles a simple, perfectly proportioned painting set to life. It is the utmost in refinement.

Quite naturally Mr. Ray's characterization of Ezra, the thoroughly human fifteen-year-old Hoosier lad, leaves little room for the other roles which merely form an effective background for his work. This particular offering gains rather than loses as a result. All of the star's artistry, his ability to delicately shade the finer feelings of youth, is brought into play in the accomplishment of what we consider his best portrayal.

Marjorie Prevost and Lincoln Stedman are well cast as Myrtle, the pretty little country coquette and Skinney, a tattle tale.

Laura La Plante also has a small but

RUTH RENICK

Playing Nellie Ramsey in "She Couldn't Help It" well cared for part. She plays the plain little girl who worships Ezra consistently, even through his neglect.

Good types do the country school teacher and Ezra's mother.

The realistic little story was ideally handled by Joseph de Grasse.

"THE STEALERS"

Tally's

Robertson-Cole releases "The Stealers," a photoplay written and produced by William Christy Cabanne. Much of the story is apparently borrowed bodily from "The Miracle Man," but due to a lack of the subtle handling that made the latter one of the great pictures of 1919, it cannot be included in the list of recent spiritual photoplays that has marked a new screen era.

Speaking from the standpoint of the scenario, "The Stealers" is all wrong. It attempts to divide the interest and sympathy of one production among nine or ten principals who are all reformed by faith. Consequently, the action is now incomplete and again draggy. Far more subtitles are employed than are necessary. The photography is uneven.

Wm. H. Tooker appears to head the cast as the crook whose activities are covered by his ministerial position. His work is convincing.

His daughter, Julia, is played by Norma Shearer who at least looks her part. She has very little action.

Walter Miller enacts Stephen Gregory, a thief. His part is undoubtedly the most professionally rendered one in the picture.

We would like to see him given a real opportunity, for the fact that he has unusual talent is obvious.

Jack Crosby, as the aristocratic Pritchard, accomplishes a quiet but effective role.

Ruth Dwyer does Mary Forrest, another of the production's various reformed thieves. She is apparently an amateur.

Jack O'Brien has a few picturesque scenes as the poetically named "Man of the Dawn."

Robert Kenyon, Myrtle Morse, Eugene Borden, Matthew Betz and Downing Clarke are also cast here and there.

Altogether the picture is somewhat too mixed to satisfy.

"CHICKENS"

Grauman's Theatre

The screen version of Herschel Hall's Saturday Evening Post story, "Yancona Yillies," retitled "Chickens," is released locally this week with Douglas McLean in the stellar role. Its many amusing comedy situations and its effective handling succeed in eliminating adverse criticism which under less entertaining circumstances might be occasioned by the story's various inconsistencies. Bert Cann's photography of the Thos. H. Ince production is good.

McLean plays Deems Stanwood cleverly and with his customary naturalness. That his comedy, in the role of the amateur chicken raiser, is appreciated, is audible. His type of work is becoming very popular.

Gladys George is cast as Julia, the little country sweetheart of the unsquelchable Stanwood. Her part is played prettily and interestingly.

Modesty will not permit us to review the performance of Raymond Cannon who does Willie Figg, the rural heavy. We are leaving that pleasurable task to the critics whose papers he does not publish.

Charles Hill Mailes and Edith Yorke are seen in the roles of Farmer and Mrs. Belows, while Claire McDowell is Julia's Aunt Rebecca. All are more than satisfactory.

Willis Marks and Al. Filson complete the cast.

Jack Nelson is responsible for the direction of the picture.

"BILLIONS"

California

Nazimova's latest Metro release, "Billions," is another and a very successful comedy attempt upon the part of the artist whose reputation has been mostly made through her dramatic and even fantastic portrayals. The refreshing little story, which is the work of Jean Jose Frappa and Henry Dupuy Mazuel, has several interesting turns (despite its many far fetched features) that have been used to advantage by Charles Bryant in the scenario.

The picture's photography and effects are excellent. Particularly artistic is the work in the "Garden of Twilight."

The star interprets the Princess Triloff, a Russian billionaire who travels America incognito in search of life. Needless to say she finds it and passes on the joy of it as the great Nazimova alone can do. Her eccentric clothes and odd little mannerisms only add fascination to the youthful characterization of the Princess who is at all times essentially Nazimova.

Charles Bryant again plays opposite the star in the role of the millionaire Krakenfeller whose professional alias is Owen Carey. He is satisfactory.

William Irving does Frank Manners, the rather rusty principled individual who assumes Krakenfeller's poetic responsibilities.

Library of Screen Tests

The BEST system for casting pictures.

Directors SEE the actors at their "screen" value. "Stills" are so often deceptive and unsatisfactory.

Photographs have never been a true indication of the actor's "screen" personality or dramatic ability, and should be thrown into the discard.

If You Are Not in Our Library We Cannot Cast You

Some written endorsements:

John Fairbanks, General Manager and Treasurer.

"I should imagine your plan would appeal to a majority of the companies who are making pictures."

Jack White, Director, Astra, Lehrman, Sunshine, etc.

"I am heartily in favor. It will save time for employees and employers. I intend to avail myself of your assistance."

Wycliffe A. Hill, President Photoplaywrights' League, formerly head of several independent producing companies.

"Your system impresses me as a progressive and practical step, and I believe that every motion picture producer in Southern California will come to you for people."

Norval McGregor, Director, Treasurer Motion Picture Directors' Association.

"I heartily endorse your idea. This, I am sure, will be far more satisfactory both for the director and actor."

J. J. Quinn, General Manager, Francis Ford.

"Looks good and should effect economies that are sorely needed." More next week.

Current Reviews

Victor Potel has the small but amusing part of Pushkin, the frantic government pursuer of the Princess.

John Stepping, Marion Skinner and Bonnie Hill form the not very strong opposition as the plotters after the Krakenfeller dollars.

Emmett King and Eugene Klum are included in the cast.

Ray C. Smallwood directed "Billions."

"SOMETHING DIFFERENT"

Clune's Broadway

An airy little comedy drama silhouetted against a romantic Central American background, punctuated with miniature revolutions and military balls is Constance Binney's latest Realart vehicle, "Something Different." Despite its title there is nothing alarmingly different about the production which contains, however, much material that forms good entertainment. Taken altogether, the picture will appeal to anyone who does not demand consistency with his color.

Several beautiful locations and many elaborate sets assist the Alice Duer Miller story. The photography and lighting are satisfactory.

Miss Binney is undoubtedly in her element when facing a fluffy little role on the order of Alicia Lea, which she skips through easily, lending it all of her sprightly personality and attractive grace. The little actress should continue to do this type of work.

Ward Crane as the polished, quite Spanish, and just-insolent-enough, General Mariano Calderon, is no less at home than the star. Both his characterization and the unusual manner in which the gracious Don controls the situations in which he finds himself is reminiscent of McCutcheon's Graustarkian heroes; but Crane in good faith carries the part along a romantic path to a colorful climax.

Crane Wilbur enacts, after a long absence from Los Angeles screens, Don Luis Vargas, "subtitled" termed "a palm tree Bolshevik."

Lucy Fox, Gertrude Hillman, Mark Smith, Grace Scudiford, Wm. Riley Hatch, and Adolph Millar complete the list of players.

R. William Neil directed the Kathrynne Stuart scenario.

Matilde R. Blackhall, eastern picture actress, is in Los Angeles, where she will remain indefinitely.

Elmer Dewey is playing the part of Mozack in "The Silver Motor," with Earl Williams.

Louis F. Natheaux is now playing the heavy with Douglas MacLean "In Passing Through."

Donald Mack and company (including Elsie Hanneman, world's champion fancy diver) have arrived in Los Angeles from New York. Mr. Mack will produce a five-reel picture entitled "In the Water," in which Miss Hanneman will be featured. This is to be followed by a series of athletic pictures in which Mr. Mack himself will be starred.

Art Hickman, song writer, jazz expert and composer of popular music, has written a song in honor of Mack Sennett's forthcoming production, "Molly-O," the star of which is to be Mabel Normand. The song is titled "Molly-O." It will be remembered that a song similarly dedicated to "Mickey" appeared when that comedy production was put forth by Sennett.

Prisoners Deny Charges of of Blueshivists

During recent months we have heard the motion picture accused of corrupting the youth of the land a wearying number of times by the hypocritical cranks who are loudly insisting that we, who form a sane nation, accept censorship and the Blue Laws for their various selfish reasons. Just as frequently we have listened approvingly to the refutations of the narrow ones' pet statement by big business men who are continually hiring the younger generation (which has been brought up on the photoplay), and to the denials of the many juvenile judges who have taken exception to the unfair charges of the agitators. All this general championship has been both enlightening and strengthening to the cause of justice.

It has occurred to us, however, that no one is so absolutely capable of explaining what influences create a criminal as is the lawbreaker himself. Thus we offer for the consumption and possible digestion of those who are in danger of passively allowing their liberty to be snatched from them, the following extracts selected from recently received communications from some of Uncle Sam's most intelligent prisoners. The reader will probably agree that they are in a position to know.—F. R.

Louis Victor Eytinge, formerly an actor and a member of the famous Eytinge family, writes from Florence, Arizona:

"In all my twenty years' prison experience—an experience which was not that of the ordinary prisoner and was one wherein I had especial opportunity to study all inmates, a study which has been faithfully maintained and includes an observance of more than 20,000 individuals, I never knew one to be influenced for wrong by the cinema."

Jos. A. Kerwin, editor of New Era, the paper issued from Leavenworth Prison, says:

"Whenever any mind is influenced for evil by the showing of any motion picture, that mind would never have amounted to a hill of beans, picture or no picture. As for the younger generations, more of them have been helped to better things, in multitudes, by the moving picture, than the few who have been taught evil, which last I doubt. Pictures cannot show anything that kids of today do not know. If any one doubts this, let some shrewd student take a group of ten-year-olds and read them certain extracts from the Bible and watch their covert glances and actions. The 'bad picture' scare is more hysterical than the Lucy Page Gaston cigaret bug."

Jesse P. Webb, editor of Oregon Prison's Lend a Hand, and author of the most recent book on penology, The American Prison System, states:

"If all things influencing the young for evil were tabooed in this world, I cannot imagine how people would exist. Books and newspapers would be suppressed above all, and about everything a healthy young mind would desire would necessarily be cut off, and personally, I do not believe that the movies' influence for evil is half so great as that of our half-baked reformers, whose every utterance is directly opposite to common sense. The boy who never liked to play Injun, or Pie-rut or Bad Bandit, is the kid who will grow up into a man who will bear watching. That occasional extremes are sometimes reached in this kid play is nothing more than natural and nothing worse than extremes in all other phases of life."

Frederick Marek, chairman of Sing-Sing's Mutual Welfare League, expresses himself vehemently:

"Rot—utter rot! Baby talk! After knowing about 30,000 inmates I cannot recall a single case that was influenced toward crime by any picture or by pictures! As a matter of fact, the pictures here are so much a part of the educational, reformatory, thought-provoking program that I do not see how it would be possible for us to achieve one-fifth of our results without them."

J. McPherson Shockley, Utah's most famous inmate, is responsible for the following:

"Oh, the bunk! In the first place, any chap who offers any excuses except his own folly as an alibi for his offense against laws is a whining whelp, seeking to arouse sympathy and inspire his own self-pity. These kind create the toadies and the stool-pigeons that make prison life a hell, and even these, for all their weakness, would be vastly helped (if that were possible) by the moral lessons taught in all pictures. I've never seen a picture where virtue did not triumph, where vice was not punished; and how in blazes some of these jackassie and jurassic reformers can blame the pictures for parental paralysis and lack of home training is more than I can see. These are the same reformers who told us that with the passing of booze, all the social evils would disappear; now, viewing the very complete failure of their work and seeking an explanation and a 'fall guy,' they select the picture as the excuse for their own failings and proceed to whoop it up."

Screen Writers Protest Alleged Hamon Exploitation

That the proposed exploitation of the Clara Smith Hamon case on the screen as a feature production would be considered damaging to the motion picture industry and will be met with organized opposition from picture people, is indicated by action just taken by the Photoplaywrights' League of America, a national association of screen writers in Los Angeles.

"Right now, when everybody is talking about cleaning up the pictures, is a poor time to permit the exploitation of a woman like Clara Smith Hamon," says Wycliffe A. Hill, president of the league.

The following resolution expresses the sentiment of the writers' organization and calls upon the rest of the profession to take definite action:

"Whereas, There has appeared in the daily press which is served by the International News Service a conspicuous news item to the effect that moving picture producers are besieging

LESSER OBTAINS SERIES OF "SCATTERGOOD" FILMS

Irving M. Lesser has consummated a deal with Edna Schley, producer of the Scattergood pictures, whereby he will distribute the entire series of twenty-four productions.

The pictures will be in two-reel comedy-drama form and are patterned after the stories which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post for more than two years.

Under the terms of the contract, Mrs. Schley is to produce and place in Lesser's hands one comedy each month. The contract extends over a period of two years. Three productions are already completed, "Scattergood Makes a Match," "Soothing Syrup," and "Down the Line."

FOLLY COMEDIES FOR ARROW RELEASE

The Arrow Film Corporation has contracted for a series of twelve two-reel situation comedies to be produced by the Metropolis Productions, Inc.

These comedies will be released one a month and will be made at the studios of the Morris Schlank Productions, under the personal supervision of H. S. Somson, President of Metropolis Productions.

The first release will be ready in April. The following cast has been assembled to appear in the comedies: David Warde, Patricia Palmer, Hugh Fay, George French, and Polly Allen. Work will be under the direction of Wilton Welch who will also write and collaborate in conjunction with the staff of scenarists.

THIRD CUNEO PRODUCTION STARTED

Production has been started on the third Lester Cuneo five-reel western by the Doubleday Production Co. The picture will be made in the new studio leased by the Capital Film Company at Sunset and Gower, formerly occupied by the Clermont Company.

It is titled "Blue Blazes," and the story and continuity were written by Henry McCarty and Leo Meehan, who also wrote the last Cuneo vehicle, "The Ranger and the Law." Robert Kelly will again direct and will be assisted by Frank G. Fanning.

Francelia Billington will be seen opposite Cuneo in "Blue Blazes."

AT VITAGRAPH

George Randolph Chester will finish casting and commence production on "The Son of Wallingford" within another week. Not all the principals have as yet been decided upon, but a complete cast is expected to be announced shortly.

John M. Quinn, general manager of the Vitagraph distributing organization, has left for New York after a tour of Vitagraph exchanges which ended in Los Angeles. While in Los Angeles Mr. Quinn arranged for the construction of a new branch.

Earle Williams and troupe, under the direction of David Smith, are spending the week in the mountains obtaining exteriors for their current feature, "The Secret of the Silver Car." A new title will be announced soon for this subject.

Larry Semon's next comedy is "The Bakery."

Jimmy Aubrey, under the direction of Jess Robins, has resumed production of his comedies.

Joe Ryan will finish "The Purple Riders," his western serial, this month.

HUNTER ON LOCATION

T. Hayes Hunter, making "The Light in the Clearing," with his company of Dial players and Henry Ballman, business manager, is somewhere in Northern California, filming small town exteriors for this Irving Bacheller story. They will be gone about two weeks.

IMPROVEMENTS AT THE WEBER STUDIO

Production of her new photoplays will soon commence at the Lois Weber studios in Los Angeles.

At the same time architects and landscape gardeners will begin work on the improvement of the Weber studio and park grounds. Palms, eucalyptus and cypress trees will be planted and the swimming pool will be cemented and opened for the use of the studio players.

ANOTHER BUNNY COMEDY

George Bunny, starring in Capitol Comedies, is busy supervising the erection of sets at the National studios for his next production which is titled "Indigo Sunday."

AT GOLDWYN

Frank Lloyd's most recent production, heretofore called "The Alibi," will be released as "The Invisible Power." Charles Kenyon wrote the story and the screen version. "The Grim Comedian," an original story by Rita Weiman, which will be Mr. Lloyd's next production, is now being cast.

Victor Schertzinger announces that work on "Beating the Game," Tom Moore's next starring vehicle, will begin on March 24th.

Anzia Yezierska, author of "Hungry Hearts," will return this week to the Goldwyn studios from San Francisco. Julien Josephson is collaborating with her on the screen version of "Hungry Hearts," which will soon be produced.

Kathleen Norris, the novelist and short story writer, has been signed by Goldwyn to write original stories as well as to contribute other of her writings for screen adaptations. She will begin her first continuity immediately upon her return from Europe.

The photoplay on "Look Before You Leap" will be completed this week under the direction of E. Mason Hopper. It is based on Thompson Buchanan's stage play, "The Bridal Path."

The cast of "The Ace of Hearts," the original screen story by Gouverneur Morris, which is being produced under the direction of Wallace Worsley, was completed this week.

The name of Will Rogers' latest starring vehicle, "The Bashful Romeo," has been changed to "Doubling for Romeo."

AT UNIVERSAL CITY

Grace Darmond has begun work in the featured role of "Renunciation," the Peter B. Kyne story which is being filmed under the direction of William Worthington with an all-star cast.

Frank Mayo's next starring vehicle will be "Three in a Thousand," from the story by Ben Ames Williams. Fred LeRoy Granville will direct the feature and is now assembling his cast.

Priscilla Dean's latest feature, "False Colors," will be ready for the screen within a few weeks.

Gladys Walton is ready to begin work on "The Man Tamer," a circus story in which she will be directed by Harry B. Harris.

Rollin Sturgeon is assembling an all-star cast to play the important roles in "Human Hearts," a forthcoming photodrama which is to be filmed from the stage production of the same name.

Edward Laemmle has started work on another two-reel western in which Jack Perrin is to be featured. This time it is "Double Crossed."

Jack Ford is preparing to begin work on "Christmas Eve at Pilot Butte," a forthcoming vehicle for Harry Carey. He is now assembling the cast.

William Fildew, chief cameraman for Tod Browning, is on his way back from the middle west where he filmed atmospheric scenes for "Fanny Herself," to be used in that picture.

Edith Roberts is preparing for her starring role in "My Lady of the Island." It is probable that Norman Dawn will direct her. The cast is now being selected.

Eddie Polo's present location trip to Balboa will finish his latest serial, "The Seal of Satan." Director J. P. McGowan will probably be given an opportunity to guide Polo through a six-reel special feature which will be the star's next venture.

Erich Von Stroheim is now on the eighth month of his special feature, "Foolish Wives," which will probably be a full year in the making and cutting.

Current Reviews

"THE NUT" California

After viewing Douglas Fairbanks' latest offering, "The Nut," we must admit that our own outlook was far from lucid. Even now we fail to remember the story, if there is one, surrounding the light-hearted Doug and his inevitable stunts in these reels of squirrel-chased merriment; but we do recall the hearty laughs and really foolish giggles in which we indulged during our review of the United Artists production. More seriously, "The Nut" doesn't compare with "The Mark of Zorro" from any standpoint, but it does provide light entertainment for those of us who are, or who have upon our acquaintance lists, just such "nuts" as the one here offered for our amusement. These many souls it will delight. In short, the picture, although impossible as to story and theme, is made acceptable through its never-failing comedy appeal. The photography varies.

As Charlie Jackson, a young inventor who is "simply crazy" about one girl and her ideas, the star is again just Doug. His rapid-fire comedy always pleases.

Marguerite de la Motte has little to do but look pretty in the role of Estrell Wyn, but she is a perfectly satisfactory foil for Fairbanks.

William Lowery plays Feeny, the gambler heavy.

Gerald Pring, Morris Hughes and Barbara La Marr all do minor parts.

Ted Reed directed "The Nut."

"TRUST YOUR WIFE" Ambassador

"Trust Your Wife," First National's latest Katherine MacDonald release, is another pictured story of a wife's duty to her husband.

It presents several not particularly novel viewpoints convincingly, and makes, everything considered, very fair diversion. In any event, California's Iowa populace is due to receive a kick from its depiction of Des Moines ideals.

Technically the production is good.

Miss MacDonald offers a far more finished and altogether more interesting performance as Mary Hastings in this picture than she has recently. She makes good use of the one different twist in her part, and the result is a doubled entertainment value for the role.

David Winter is somewhat disappointing in the male lead, Hastings. The ambitious but disheartened and exceedingly jealous husband which he plays might have proven a gold mine for any actor. As executed, all sympathy for the character is lost.

Charles Richman establishes himself as a very clever heavy in this picture. His work as the self-indulgent millionaire who desires the other man's wife until he is shown the light by the woman in question, is really excellent. We would suggest that Mr. Richman continue to do this type of thing. His leads were not nearly so enjoyable.

Mary Alden has a few well-played scenes as "the woman of fate." Her work is quiet but effective.

J. A. Barry directed the production.

"THE KENTUCKIANS" Grauman's

John Fox, Jr.'s story, "The Kentuckians," which was recently cinematized by Paramount, is released locally this week. The scenario embraces a huge cast, a somewhat ponderous plot, and much uninteresting speech making. The subtitles attempt to provide the information which is not clearly told by the slow-moving action, but many of them miss. Everything considered, a political fight between two sections of one state is not sufficiently entertaining to occasion a motion picture.

Scenically the production is a huge success. The photography is standard.

Monte Blue heads the list of players as Boone Stallard, a mountaineer. Mr. Blue always pleases in this type of thing, but his action gives him little opportunity to either

FRITZI BRUNETT

Playing Janet Ashley in "The Coast of Opportunity," at the Hippodrome gain sympathy or create a characterization.

Wilfred Lytell plays Randolph Marshall, a son of the Blue Grass section. His work holds the attention as much as does that of the other principals, although his lack of action is also against him.

His sweetheart, the daughter of the Governor, is enacted by Diana Allen. She does more than could have been expected with her role.

J. W. Johnston as Daws Stollard, a murderer, plays a few good scenes.

Frank Joyner, J. H. Gilmour, John Milner, Thomas Brown, Russell Parker, John Carr, Albert Hewitt, and several more, have much jumbled minor parts and bits.

Charles Maigne directed this picture, which somehow missed its punch.

"IF ONLY JIM" Superba

Universal offers Harry Carey in "If Only Jim" this week. The story contains much of that material which was once considered heart interest or appeal, but it is poorly handled in spots. For instance, it may claim many near laughs but they rarely materialize. The same is true of the pathos. Photographically the picture is scarcely fair.

Carey plays Jim in his usual appealing manner. We've seen him provided with much better roles, however.

Carol Hollaway appears opposite him as Miss Dot. Her work is not entirely convincing.

Duke Lee does Kino satisfactorily while Charles Brinley plays Parky, the heavy.

Thomas Smith is the kid.

Ruth Royce, Roy Coulson, George Bunny, Joe Hazelton, and Minnehaha are included in the cast.

"FORBIDDEN FRUIT" Grauman's Rialto

"Forbidden Fruit," which has commenced and indefinite run here, is another typically elaborate Cecil de Mille production, dealing with a marital mix-up. It is rendered interesting chiefly through Jeanie Macpherson's story and the good cast, although the picture's well-cared-for details also lend it entertainment value. The sets and costumes fairly drip luxury, which atmosphere, we grant, goes a long way in satisfying certain fan classes. The photography is good.

Agnes Ayres enacts Mary Maddock, the long suffering wife who finally finds love outside her miserable home. Besides being beautiful to gaze upon, Miss Ayres handles her role cleverly. She is particularly well cast.

Clarence Burton accomplishes the best work which we have seen him do in the role of Steve Maddock, the lazy, weak and yet domineering husband, who is withal at all times human.

Forrest Stanley is very pleasing as Nelson Royers, the man whom Mary loves. He divides the picture's sympathy with the feminine lead.

Theodore Kosloff enters the heavy field with a carefully rendered part in this production. He makes Pietro Guiseppe, the pseudo butler, interesting and impressive.

Kathlyn Williams is superb as Mrs. Mallory, a super-civilized woman of wealth. Such characterizations as hers have done much to make de Mille pictures.

Theodore Roberts amusingly does Mr. Mallory. Always he gets a laugh.

This production will undoubtedly prove a big box office attraction.

"SHE COULDN'T HELP IT" Clune's Broadway

Bebe Daniels is starred in this week's local Realart release, "She Couldn't Help It." The story is a new version of "In the Bishop's Carriage," and it forms a very satisfactory afternoon's entertainment. It succeeds in holding the attention right through, for which the cast is largely responsible. This latter is unusual for a program picture.

The photography is below standard, however, and the print which we viewed was inexcusably poor.

Miss Daniels is quite convincing as Nance Alden, the well-remembered little artist-thief of the story. Certainly she could scarcely have had better support.

Emory Johnson in the role of William Latimer, attorney and heroine reformer, has little to do, but we must credit him with doing it fascinatingly.

Wade Boteler handles the production's dramatic action very capably. He plays Tom Dorgan, an almost lovable thief, and creates for him an effective personality.

Vera Lewis is seen in the part of Mother Hogan to good advantage.

Herbert Standing has some of his customarily good scenes as the Bishop.

Mrs. Ramsey is majestically accomplished by Helen Raymond. Her work always means something.

Ruth Renick enacts Nellie Ramsey, the jealous fiancée of the romantic Latimer, with considerable spirit, and to everyone's satisfaction, although we prefer her in sympathetic roles.

Z. Wall Covington, Gertrude Short and Milla Davenport all supply well-handled touches.

Maurice Campbell directed the production.

ASSISTANT DIRECTORS' NOTES

The second quarterly business meeting of the association will be held at the clubrooms at 8 p. m., Friday, April 1st.

Pete Gerald has returned with the George Kern Productions from Florence, Arizona, where they used the state penitentiary in their current picture.

LOCAL BLUE LAW FIGHT WAGES

Last week marked the first drastic steps taken locally to quench the blue law agitation. The town of Pomona, situated thirty miles from Los Angeles, is in a state of great unrest. A petition has been circulated in favor of closing all places of amusement on Sunday, and to date those circulating the petition have obtained many names on same. Were this petition permitted to be taken from house to house and were those interested in it permitted to wage their battle for Blue Sunday without any interference, the outcome would be hard to determine. With the day of voting on this serious subject but two weeks away, film executives of Los Angeles, realizing the seriousness of the affair, formed a committee to visit Pomona and endeavor in some manner to explain to that city's residents and voters just how serious a closing law would be.

Benjamin B. Hampton, representing the motion pictures in general; Sol L. Lesser, owner of several of Pomona's picture theatres and representing the theatre owners and himself, motored to Pomona to meet on friendly terms those opposed to Sunday amusements, with a view to pointing out to them the chaotic results that would be forthcoming were the closing law put into effect.

These men obtained an audience with several of Pomona's prominent business men who were interested in the closing law, and Mr. Hampton gave an appeal for fair play to the silent drama.

Mr. Lesser quoted statistics showing that, were the law enforced, his organization would have to discontinue showing pictures in Pomona in the near future. He stated that a six-day business could not be carried on; that Sunday was the big day, in fact, the only day looked forward to by managers to obtain a fair return on their business.

The results of this effort will be noted when Pomona votes next week.

GRAUMAN ENTERTAINS NORTHERN EXHIBITOR

Mr. John Partington, manager of the California Theater in San Francisco, is the guest of Sid Grauman this week.

Can You Qualify for Screen Authorship?

A NATIONAL educational institution to train photoplaywrights by correspondence during spare time at home has been established in Los Angeles to meet the needs of the motion picture industry.

This institution is directed by experienced writers and sponsored by Cecil B. DeMille, Thos. H. Ince and other prominent producers.

The field for photoplaywrights is lucrative and applicants drawn from every walk of life respond to the call.

Only persons naturally endowed with the gift of creative imagination and dramatic insight, however, can hope for success in this profession, and applicants must be selected accordingly.

All applicants, therefore, are requested to apply by mail to Frederick Palmer, Director of Education, for the Palmer Home-Test Questionnaire to determine their fitness to undertake this course of vocational training.

This questionnaire, scientifically compiled by Professor Malcolm Shaw MacLean, A.M., formerly a Northwestern University instructor of English composition, in collaboration with H. H. Van Loan, noted photoplay author-producer, is the first test of its kind ever adopted by an educational institution.

The purpose of this questionnaire is to help applicants determine the degree of creative imagination possessed by them and consequently their eligibility to enroll in this curriculum.

If successful in making this home test, the Palmer Plan of Instruction in Photoplay Writing is available to you.

Address all inquiries to

GETTING ACQUAINTED WITH INTER-ESTING PEOPLE

Irene Tams

Irene Tams, who was recently featured in "Determination," has just arrived on the coast to complete arrangements for the formation of her own starring company.

Miss Tams was born in New York and at an early age took up dramatic work. She will be remembered as the ingenue in "The Elixir of Youth," a production which played on Broadway for nearly a year. Later the youthful actress sang in vaudeville.

The past seven years Miss Tams has devoted to moving pictures. For some time she was featured in society dramas by the Regent Film Company. Included in the list of pictures in which she played were: "Entanglement," "The Storm," "Oh, Boy!" and "Taxi."

Due to injuries sustained while working in a scene for "Determination," Miss Tams has been resting for several weeks. Since she contemplates producing her first picture at once, however, her return to the screen may be anticipated immediately.

Sir Arthur Steele Maitland, traveler and student, was a visitor at Metro's Hollywood studios the other day.

Ruth Roland is on her way back to California from St. Louis. Plans for her next serial are being formulated.

J. D. Williams, general manager of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., left Los Angeles last Monday for San Francisco.

Gladys George is leading woman for Thomas Meighan in "The Easy Road," his Paramount picture which is playing at Grauman's.

Pathe has announced the selection of Virginia Brown Faire for the role of Ameera in Rudyard Kipling's "Without Benefit of Clergy."

In Katherine MacDonald's tenth Associated First National picture, as yet untitled, Roy Stewart will play the lead and Bertram Grassby enact the heavy.

"The Timber Wolves" is the next of the Holman Day series which Pathe will release March 29. Edgar Jones and Edna May Sperl are the featured players.

Monte Montague, who has been playing heavies in Roy Gallagher westerns, is to be featured in his own right. Production on his first two-reel western for Arthur Gooden will commence about April 1.

After finishing her work in "Uncharted Seas," Alice Lake spent a few days motoring through Southern California in company with her father and mother, who have just recently arrived from New York.

The Anajuac Film Corporation will soon introduce their productions with a double dissolve effect, featuring the capitol building of Mexico and its Aztec trade mark. The drawings are being made by Frank F. Greene.

Constance Talmadge has just started work in New York on "Beauty or Brains," an original story purchased by Joseph Schenck from John Emerson and Anita Loos. "Beauty or Brains" is the temporary title only. Victor Fleming is directing the picture.

Scenario Writers!

A well known independent producer—whose name is familiar to millions—spent an hour in my office today, telling me his story troubles. Here's what he wants the Photoplaywrights League to dig up for him:

Four big stories—woman lead—outdoor stuff—tense dramatic situations—strong characterization—emotional part—big thought or moral behind plot—smashing climax!

She can be Western girl—Mountain lass—Country girl—Fisherman's wife or daughter—Dance hall girl—Actress—Working girl—Working man's wife or daughter—Derelict—Immigrant—Half-breed—Nurse—Shepherdess—Dope fiend—Smuggler—Spy—Prophetess—Martyr—Nun—or any other picturesque character—no Society or Costume part.

While he was here, another producer 'phoned me that he wanted 20 two-reel straight comedies with female lead. No slapstick or "hokum."

Who can show me the goods?

Honesty and the Distribution Problem

W. W. Hodkinson of the film exchange bearing his name recently opened a campaign for the independent exchange system by attracting the attention of the M. P. D. A. to the startling, if not appalling, condition which, he states, exists today between the various commercial branches of the motion picture industry. Mr. Hodkinson emphatically affirms that many of our producers are cheating themselves out of millions which could be saved by decreased production. He claims that the big picture men are losing at both ends as a result of wasteful filming of inferior program pictures. In the first place, he considers that their original investments are too ridiculously large; secondly, they are overlooking the opportunity for a doubled revenue which they might easily receive from the exhibitor in return for bigger and better pictures than they are now offering. This entire condition, according to the exchange man, has been brought about by the fact that the heads of the film-producing business are frenziedly turning out cheap material in an attempt to maintain the distributing organizations which they have established for the disposition of their products. Briefly, the majority of huge producing concerns handle their pictures through their own exchanges which are run at a tremendous expense. This can only be met by flooding the market with rapidly turned out entertainment which costs much, despite the fact that it fails to satisfy the public to which it is sent. This to-be-regretted producer-control has been brought about, Hodkinson holds, by suspicion. In other words, co-operation in the distributing line is now impossible so long as each fears the insidious underselling of the other, which is one of the industry's most dangerously undignified practices.

On the whole, this speech made by Mr. Hodkinson with a view to assist all departments of the business, to which he is devoting himself, is to be commended. His belief in the independent exchange is both well grounded and sensible, and we are more than willing to credit him and his organization with the accomplishment of much that will further the interests of this plan. Nevertheless, there are various phases and angles to this problem which will bear further consideration.

Going back to the statement that the exchanges may not be satisfactorily co-operated because of the lack of faith which repeatedly manifests itself among them, we are struck with the idea that there is much to observe concerning that very distrust and the practices which have brought it about. We believe that, without doubt, the unfair treatment and dishonesty, if you will, of some of our independent releasing organizations, have encouraged the wariness that has led to the continued producer-control policy. For instance, several complaints have recently been brought to our attention by independent companies whose productions have been released through such concerns. These companies had been promised, and consequently expected, anywhere from 40 to 60 per cent of their pictures' profits. Needless to say, when their returns fell far below what had been anticipated, they were led to doubt the integrity of their distributors. Action, however, was impossible, since there were no chances to check up. Therefore, they were left silenced but unsatisfied.

Perhaps some of these outfits have exaggerated their wrongs. There is even a bare chance that there are cases where none existed, but doubt sufficed to occasion the same result. In this way, both the growth of all independent film agencies and the development of the trust which is necessary to the success of any commercial venture have been dwarfed.

Only through an adherence to and a recognition of honesty on both parts will the present muddled problem of motion picture distribution solve itself. No other plan will do.

To quote Roger W. Babson of the Babson Statistical Organization in "The Fundamentals of Prosperity": "While fifty-one per cent of the people have their eyes on the goal of integrity, our investments are secure; but with fifty-one per cent of them headed in the wrong direction, our investments are valueless."

Integrity then is the principle upon which the world depends. Might it not, therefore, be appropriate to observe that in its closer application lies the salvation of the third industry and its various departments?

"THE CONCERT"

California

Goldwyn's filmed version of Leo Dietrichstein's stage success, "The Concert," may be seen here this week. This well remembered comedy is very rich in entertainment value as a result of its careful handling and the inclusion in the scenario of many of the original's amusing details. The sub-titles, while a bit too numerous perhaps, are in great part the clever lines of the play which renders them always enlivening. The production's beautiful sets and locations are excellently photographed. The cast is adequate.

Lewis S. Stone, whose recent work has established him as a leading screen dramatist, is seen to advantage in the comedy role of Maximilian. He cares for the temperamental, impressionable pianist amply and supplies much individual entertainment.

Myrtle Stedman is perfectly cast as Mary, Maximilian's considerate and understanding wife. Her attempt to teach him the big lesson, gains for her the story's sympathy which she manages with delightful artistry.

Mabel Julienne Scott is also successfully placed and plays Delphine Hart, the great musician's "wonder child," true to type. Some of her action is certainly risqué, but that, in all probability, will only add interest for the much entertained public.

Raymond Hatton's work, as Dr. Hart, the husband of the musically intoxicated Delphine, leaves nothing to be suggested. His interpretations rarely do.

Eva, an Instrument of Fate, is well done by Gertrude Astor.

Russ Powell and Lydia Yeamans Titus as the Pollingers complete the cast with still more comedy.

Victor Schertzinger capably directed "The Concert."

"ALL SOULS' EVE"

Clune's

Mary Miles Minter appears this week in her latest Realart offering, Anne Crawford Flexner's "All Souls' Eve." Elmer Harris wrote the scenario. The story makes several worth-while points despite its sordid features, some of which seemed superfluous to us. The sets employed are both beautiful and effective.

It might be observed that the inevitable spot which follows the star's blonde head about the screen and sometimes lands unexpectedly in the middle of the floor, does not greatly improve the production technically.

Miss Minter gives two performances in this vehicle. They are Alice Heath and Nora O'Hallahan. Both roles are sympathetic and at least the latter is engaging. We prefer seeing this actress in quiet parts such as these.

Jack Holt assists the picture generally with his interpretation of Roger Heath, a sculptor.

Carmen Phillips is responsible for the interpretation of Olivia, the very obvious heavy. Her work is quite typical of the one time popular vamp.

Mickey Moore presents his following with another of his lovely baby characterizations, as the Heath child in this film. Mickey's power of concentration is remarkable in one so young.

Clarence Geldart, Fannie Midgely and Lucien Littlefield all do small parts competently.

Chester Franklin directed this production.

"THE EASY ROAD"

Grauman's

Paramount's "The Easy Road," featuring Thomas Meighan, is a rather interesting little story by Blair Hall of the marriage of wealth and genius. It suffers somewhat from an overly long introduction, but as the story progresses its entertainment value

OTTO LEDERER

Playing the heavy with both the David Butler company and the James Young company.

Photographically the production is good. Its slum district sets could be much more convincing, however. They are reminiscent of the Argyle lot.

Meighan appears to advantage in the role of Leonard Fayne, the author, whom luxury ruins. The fact that about half of his business is played heavily does not gain him part much sympathy, but, as usual, he satisfies.

Gladys George makes a delightful opposite for the star as Isobel, Fayne's wealthy little wife. Her pleasing personality makes the gracious role one of her best.

Lila Lee does by far the most entertaining work of her career as the tacky little guttersnipe whom Fayne saves from the river. Her comedy as the near-sighted, overgrown child is good for a real laugh. She should continue to do character work.

Arthur Carew plays Hemingway, the unimportant heavy, capably. We naturally prefer to see him in the subtle type of thing which he has proven himself so able to handle.

Grace Goodall, Lura Anson and Viora Daniels do minor parts satisfactorily.

Tom Forman directed the picture.

"THE FIRST BORN"

Ambassador

Francis Powers' Oriental stage success, "The First Born," serves Sessue Hayakawa as a very effective screen drama. The somewhat heavy play has been well adapted and its beautiful theme of father love is picturesquely clothed with realistic Chinese atmosphere.

Some of the sets are quite gorgeous and the photography is both consistent and excellent.

Hayakawa presents the public with another of his customarily human and deliberate performances. In it his tender interpretation of the Chinaman's love for his first born son is particularly artistic. He has possibly devoted too much footage to the business which leads him directly to the climax, and thereafter something is lost as a result of an awkward anti-climax, but leaving that, his work as Chan Wang is an achievement.

Helen Eddy's accomplishment of Loey Tsing is one of her cleverest. As the pathetic fisherman's daughter who is sold into San Francisco Chinatown slavery she makes a quaint little figure. Each moment of her action gathers sympathy for her role.

Sonny Boy Ward in the title role offers a remarkable characterization. As Chan Toy he is convincingly Oriental, but primarily boy.

Goro Kino plays the heavy, Man Low Lek, unusually well, while Wilson Hummell is satisfactory as the slave trader.

Marie Pavis and Frank Seki complete the cast.

Colin Campbell directed the production for Robertson-Cole.

"SOCIETY SECRETS"

Superba

Eva Novak is starred in this week's local Universal release, "Society Secrets." The Douglas Doty scenario from the Helen Bennett story forms quite an interesting little picture on the program order and the cast lives up to all that is expected of it.

The lighting and camera work of the film, however, leave much to be desired. The direction was in the hands of Leo McCarey.

Miss Novak's part, Louise, is scarcely significant enough or beguiling enough to be featured, but it is executed quite convincingly.

William Buckley enacts Arthur, the leading masculine role, sufficiently.

Gertrude Claire and George Berrell keep most of the heart interest of the picture to themselves with their beautiful performances of "Ma and Pa."

Clarissa Selwynne is good as Mrs. Mortimer.

The remaining parts are filled by Ethel Ritchie, Leonard Shumway, Carl Stockdale, and Lucy Donohoe.

FIRST "SCATTERGOOD" RELEASED

"Scattergood Makes a Match" is the title of the first of the series of twenty-four reel "Scattergood" comedies which are being produced by Edna Schley from the book of Clarence Buddington Kelland and released through Irving M. Lesser's Western Pictures Exploitation Company.

The "Scattergood" series have appeared in fiction form in the Saturday Evening Post, Cosmopolitan and American magazines.

AT THE MUMMERS' WORKSHOP

The performance which the Mummers have been giving all week at their Workshop on Morgan Place have undoubtedly proven the most successful attempts ever made in the little theatre line locally; which merely proves that real joy in uncommercialized art does exist to a great degree among the greatly compensated screen players.

This week the Workshop presents "Window Panes," a one-act play by Olga Printzlau and "The Lotus Fire," a drama in three parts by Mallory Remsen.

The former, a religious piece, is beautifully handled by its players which headed by Conrad Nagle include Clarence Burton, Claire MacDowell and Frankie Lee. Both Nagle and Miss MacDowell as the wanderer and Marya do some wonderful work, while little Frankie is remarkable in the role of the dumb child. Burton is also good as Artem, the Russian peasant.

"The Lotus Fire," a Chinese play, has been provided with highly effective settings by Milton Monroe and Ralph Willis. Peggy O'Neill and Charles Meredith enact the leads cleverly. Commendable work is also done by George Gramlich and Florence Deshon. Margaret Fransioli, Floyd Taliaferro, Paul Vickers, Mary Mayer and Joseph Sadony, Jr., complete the cast.

Both plays have been staged by Clarence Thomas.

WADE BOTELER

Wade Boteler, who is at present playing in George H. Kern's all-star production, "The Unfoldment," was born in Santa Ana and educated in Southern California schools.
He originally intended to study medicine, but after one year he left it for the oil business, to which he devoted four years.

Thereafter the enterprising young man decided to study music in New York. After a year in this direction he succumbed to the lure of the stage and "broke into" the profession via the stock route. Three years passed with various stock companies, followed by a season with Charles Frohman.

About this time Boteler was added to the faculty of the American Academy of Dramatic Arts. For this school he taught play-analysis and stage mechanics, and directed modern drama for three seasons.

In 1918 he was appointed dramatic director at Camp Travis, Texas, in which capacity he served until February, 1919, when he was released by the war department.

Then it was that Wade Boteler arrived in California and entered the picture field. He has been seen in the following list of photoplays in the last two years: "A Very Good Young Man," "Crooked Straight," "23½
Hours' Leave," "Water, Water Everywhere,"
"The False Road," "Let's Be Fashionable," "Laboma," "An Old-Fashioned Boy" and "She Couldn't Help It."

We may safely expect much from this widely experienced artist.

Daisy Robinson is recovering from a severe attack of tonsillitis.

Gertrude Astor has been signed to support Anita Stewart in "The Price of Happiness."

Charlie Lamont will assist George Hill in the direction of Elmo Lincoln's latest serial for Universal.

Kinema Bureau will accept five-reel dramas and comedy-dramas for a female star.

Betty Blythe will appear as Cleopatra at the Children's Hospital Benefit to be given at the Ambassador Monday evening.

Arthur Thalasso, who is playing the heavy in "The Forbidden Thing" at the Symphony this week, entered motion pictures with Chaplin in "A Day's Pleasure."

After two months spent in the Bahamas and one in New York, where she portrayed the leading role in "The Woman God Changed," Seena Owen is back in Los Angeles.

King Vidor announces the signing of L. B.
DuPont and his son, Max DuPont, as art director and director of cinematography respectively for future King Vidor productions.

William P. Carleton will go to San Francisco the latter part of the week to aid in the observance of "Movie Week" in that city. He will make personal appearances at the leading theaters, and while in the Bay City will be the guest of Eugene Ross of the California Theatre.

The framework was raised this week for the new administration building of the Pacific Film Company at Culver City. Upon completion of this structure the production of five-reel pictures will be started. Neither title nor star has been chosen for the first picture to be screened at the new studio.

Misdirected Publicity

We are in receipt of a communication which, having appealed to us as striking a vital note, we print below. It denounces the tendency of so many press agents to explain the methods utilized by our technical artists to gain realistic effects for the motion picture. The writer is perfectly fair in accusing these disillusionists of harming the industry to which we all belong. Of course, the tricks of our interesting trade make good stories but shouldn't the temptation to write them be squelched if they accomplish in the public a frame of mind that discredits our most bona fide efforts? To hold its popularity the cinema play must be real to its audiences.

What fascination would surround the magician were his tricks explained upon the vaudeville program? Would we blast the early belief of our children in Santa Claus and fairy tales for the fun of telling them?

In this case to explain too much is to approach treason.
F. R.

"In glancing through the pages of our widely-read motion picture periodicals published for popular consumption, in other words—for those people outside the gates of the industry, one is struck by the current activities of the over-worked publicity man, whose nearly exhausted brain has finally evolved the happy idea of exposing, what might be termed, trade secrets, to an eager and expectant public. With his stills and copy he proceeds to tell us how we are being fooled every day of our lives—how the horrible predicament of Oswald the Flighty at the end of the seventh episode was no predicament at all—how the hero's thrilling stunt, which left us limp in our seats, was nothing but a fake—how that gigantic train smash-up was just a miniature setting—and so on, without end. Every single detail of production technique, never visible on the finished film, is hauled mercilessly out into the light for the layman's inspection.

"Such display of the inner workings of picture making is undoubtedly serving as a successful means of exploiting the star or corporation involved, but whether it is good propaganda for the industry as a whole, is a matter of speculation. It is altogether probable that it is not good propaganda. Of course the audience is fully aware, upon witnessing a picture, that things are not always what they seem, that the screen, as well as the stage, has its methods of stage-craft; but to deliberately emphasize that stage-craft, its tricks and deceptions, is to catalog the picture as a thing of cheap device and claptrap, a mockery of tawdry spectacularism, designed to deceive and delude. And it is reasonable to assume that the ultimate result of this type of publicity will be detrimental, not only to those pictures which, of necessity, employ a large amount of stage-craft, but to the picture field as a whole, since it will kill a certain amount of interest in the cinema, and tend to curb its popularity.

"I dropped into a neighborhood theatre the other evening to view a production which I had witnessed in the filming and afterwards edited, and upon the completion of a certain stunt of bona-fide nature, my neighbor rebuked his wife's gasp of amazement with the remark, 'Aw, that's just a fake!' So there you have an effect of this mis-directed publicity which makes audiences mistrustful of even our most sincere efforts. Such publicity should be discouraged. Certainly there are enough interesting phases of the country's third industry to furnish material for the popular periodicals without resorting to an exposure of that which is merely a means to an end, its stage-craft."

L. H. Y.

Educational Films

William Horsley of the Horsley Laboratories has organized a company which is to be devoted to the production of educational pictures. This is one of the first definite steps toward the development of the cinema in this much-discussed line and it occurs to us that it will prove a milestone in the history of the motion picture.

That he will not turn out useless material, Horsley is canvassing the great educators and teachers of the country to discover what subjects they desire treated by the camera. It is planned to film lessons which may be applied from the second grade up through the university. They will be scientific, geographical and historical. Some of the work will be accomplished by means of highly microscopic lenses.

One of the first films turned out upon this schedule is a novelty depicting the vision of a house fly. It is entitled "Through a Fly's Eye."

There isn't a doubt, as we have always held, but that the real value of the screen is yet to be appreciated. It will one day entirely inform the publics of every land.

The Actor:—The Super Man

by KING VIDOR

(EDITOR'S NOTE.—The following article by King Vidor, a producer well known for his picture accomplishments along rural and other lines, struck us as one which would be sure to interest our readers. It sets forth many ideas which we have held silently for some time. It is good to hear them expressed.)

The actor is really a superior type of human being, a super-man. Not a super-man in the Nietzschean sense, not a super-brute, but a super-personality.

The business man—take the banker, for instance—lives in a groove or rut, be he ever so successful, for his very success

FAZENDA-CONKLIN HEAD NEW COM-EDY CAST

Louise Fazenda, Chester Conklin, "Teddy" the comedy dog, little John Henry, Jr., Neely Edwards, Charlotte Merriam, Jack Duffy and Eddie Baker are cast for a series of twelve productions which were recently put under way by the Warner Brothers for release through Educational Films. The first of the comedies, which will be two-reels in length, is practically completed. It is titled "The Love Egg" and is by Jean Havez.

The series of productions are to be finished in the course of a year. Warner Brothers, who are already operating three production units here, have leased the Jesse D. Hampton studios.

Earl Kenton is directing the series.

President Earl Hammons of Educational will announce release dates for "The Love Egg" shortly.

COMPLETE BUTLER PICTURE

Final filming of David Butler's newest production, "Sophie Semanoff," first of a new series of features starring this actor, was completed Saturday last at the Brunton studios. Butler and his father, Fred J. Butler, who is directing him in the series, will take a week's rest after which they will start production of another feature.

It is expected that Wallace Irwin, the author, will retitle the picture which Irving M. Lesser will release through his Western Pictures Exploitation Company.

The exploitation Department of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company has engaged Charles J. Giegerrich to work in connection with the national exploitation campaign projected for "Reputation," the forthcoming Universal-Jewel picture starring Priscilla Dean.

WORK BEGINS ON INITIAL DRESSER FILM

Louise Dresser and Jack Gardner have at last entered pictures in earnest. Gardner is the producer and Miss Dresser is the star. Space has been leased at the Brunton studios where twelve two-reel comedies will be turned out in a year's time. Irving M. Lesser will distribute the pictures. Work on the first comedy, the title of which is "The Fat Fighters," begins April 15th.

KING VIDOR BUYS RIGHTS TO NEW BOOK

He will start production on his new story upon the completion of "The Cottage of Delight." Both of these productions will be released under his Associated Producers contract.

NAVARRA COMPANY DOING SERIAL

"A TALE OF TWO WORLDS" California

A Chinese melodrama written by Gouverneur Morris and filmed by Frank Lloyd for Goldwyn is released here this week. The story is impossibly inconsistent, but we must admit that it rivets the attention with its wild suspense and depiction of Oriental torture chambers.

At that, once away from the scene of action the incongruity of the whole is very apparent. The foolishness of the fact that an educated white man of high social standing falls in love with a Chinese woman as a matter of course is only overshadowed by the more ridiculous assumption that all Chinatown could for years mistake a white girl for one of its own people.

The Chinatown atmosphere adds interests to the intense story. The photography is good.

J. Frank Glendon is seen in the role of Newcomb, a collector of antiques and a student of everything oriental. He hasn't a great opportunity for dramatic action but easily establishes sympathy for his role.

Leatrice Joy plays Sui Sen, the white girl who believes herself Chinese. She is appealing as usual, but also has only sympathy to support her part.

Wallace Beery is obviously in his element as Ling Jo, the inhumanly cruel and stoical villain. His make-up and interpretation are remarkable.

E. A. Warren is good as Ah Wing, the merchant who poses as Sui Sen's father.

Jack Abbe accomplishes a few beautiful scenes and is an important cog in the plot as "the Worm" who loves Sui Sen enough to save her from Ling Jo for Newcomb.

Margaret McWaldie, Togo Yamamoto, Arthur Soames, Edythe Chapman, Dwight Crettenden, and Irene Rich are included in the cast.

stoical villain. His make-up and interpretation once in a great while by the general public and always by the ten year old boys who, we must remember, count materially at the box office.

"ALL DOLLED UP" Superba

The current Universal release is "All Dolled Up", a comedy-drama featuring Gladys Walton. Even considering its unrealistic blood and thunder heavy element, it is quite an interesting little story of an unaffected shop girl and her search after romance.

Although too much footage is probably given the exaggerated section of the picture, that is, in a great part, overcome by the well handled comedy situations of the little star. Technically the picture is fair.

Miss Walton improves with each appearance. This time she further establishes her versatility in the role of Maggie Quick, a peppy little department store cashier, whom she plays consistently and typically. We have never seen a woman put on a more spirited screen fight than does the sincere little Gladys toward the climax of the story, when she battles with the three villains who confront her in a manner that would be a credit to our most pugilistic heroes.

Ed Hearn plays opposite the star as James Montgomery Johnson, a romantic chauffeur. While we have seen Hearn provided with far better opportunities for clever work, his action never fails to ring true. His presence always benefits a picture as it does this one.

Florence Turner's characterization of Eve Bundy, the wealthy maiden lady whom real love has passed by, is very good.

Fred Maltesta accomplishes the designing heavy according to form.

Frank Norcross and John Gough do the blackmailing editor and "staff" of the town sheet.

Muriel Turner and Ruth Royce complete the somewhat involved opposition as Mme. DeJercosse and Mlle. Scarpa.

GEORGE WEBB

Who is playing in George Randolph Chester's
"The Son of Wallingford"

That reminds us, some day soon we expect to ask a scenario writer why a female cigarette smoker in this enlightened age must inevitably be a bold, wicked woman who trots around wrecking male lives. Nine pictures out of ten make her such.

Richard Norton, Helen Breneau and Lydia Yeamans Titus complete the cast.

Rollin Sturgin directed.

"A MESSAGE FROM MARS" Tally's

There is nothing about the Metro production, "A Message from Mars", which stars Bert Lytell, to recommend it for filming. In fact it has nothing upon which to depend but the star's characterization and that in itself is not sufficiently entertaining to carry this boring subject which should never have been adapted for the screen. It approaches the criminal that such insipid material should be forced upon any actor. The picture is good from the standpoint of photography and general technique, however.

The star's work as Horace, a very English, amateur astronomer who is frightened out of selfishness by a dream, is really excellent. He characterizes every minute and some of his comedy gets over beautifully. His situations, though, sent us back to the days when we read "The Youth's Companion," gullibly and even avidly.

Raye Dean plays Evelyn, the star's ward and fiancée. She does not impress.

Frank Currier does a good "bit."

Maxwell Karger directed the picture in the East.

Both the Metro and Vitagraph companies have transferred their entire production activities from the east to the Pacific Coast.

"THE LOVE SPECIAL"

Grauman's

"The Love Special" is probably Wallace Reid's most uninteresting recent Paramount production. It is a draggy adaptation of what must have been a snail moving story, "The Daughter of Magnate." However, we didn't read the original, which was by Frank S. Spearman, so we mustn't misjudge it. The entire picture is just a series of not even thrilling heroics upon the part of a young man whose unusual ability in nearly every line is dwelt upon so insistently in the subtitles that one is inclined to argue with the scenario, or at least remind it briefly that "there ain't no such animule." Several weak climaxes ruffle the surface now and again, but not one of them is convincing enough to save the picture.

Scenically and photographically it is thoroughly enjoyable.

Had Wallie's action as Jim Glover been of such a nature as to either render the printed extolling of his great capabilities unnecessary, or to have at least backed the subtitles up in their loyal stand, the role might have proven quite entertaining. As it is, the part only requires "walking through." The two or three laughs that it occasions may be credited to the star's customarily entertaining mannerisms.

Agnes Ayres is also only called upon to be among those present in the leading feminine role, Laura Gage.

Theodore Roberts, as usual, is responsible for considerable merriment. He can inject comedy into anything.

Lloyd Whitlock forms the story's flimsy opposition as Harrison.

Sylvia Ashton, William Gaden, Clarence Burton, and Snitz Edwards all play minor parts.

"SCRAMBLED WIVES" Ambassador

Sprightly indeed is the diverting farce, "Scrambled Wives," in which Marguerite Clark returns to the screen after more than a year's absence. It is the product of her own company and has been released by First National. The beguiling little story, which is by Adelaide Mathews and Martha Stanley, provides the diminutive star with several highly amusing situations, which have been well handled by Director Edward H. Griffith.

The picture's photography is somewhat uneven and in the case of the star there is considerably too much "spot" to keep the lighting consistent.

Miss Clark makes Mary Lucile Smith, the precocious heroine, more than fascinating. All of her well remembered mannerisms which enchanted us of old are brought into play in this interpretation. Her comedy is excellent.

Leon P. Gendron appears in the leading male role. There is something about the self-contained youth of this actor that is very pleasing.

Ralph Bunker is of material assistance to the comedy element as John Chiverick, Mary Lucile's first matrimonial partner.

Alice Mann, as Connie, Chiverick's kittenish second wife, adds to the general confusion, as do Virginia Lee, Florence Martin, America Cheddister and John Mayer. We might remark, however, that Miss Cheddister scarcely fills the bill as Mrs. Halsey, a wealthy society matron. Even small roles carelessly cast often prove detrimental to a production, although in this case it is but a detail.

Taken all in all, "Scrambled Wives" forms an appropriate vehicle to bring Miss Clark back to the silver sheet.

Sonny Boy Ward, who is playing the title role in "The First Born," the Robertson-Cole production featuring Sessue Hayakawa, at the Alhambra, has had a varied screen and stage career, his mother, Beatrice Ward, being a well-known actress herself, found it but natural to place the kiddie in a professional atmosphere, where he was discovered by and became the protege of Theda Bara. His first part in support of Miss Bara was accomplished when he was but a year old.

He then went on the road with the San Carlos Opera Company, appearing for two seasons as Trouble, the baby, in "Madame Butterfly."

Sonny Boy is at present learning eccentric dancing under Ernest Belcher.

The Actor—The Superman

depends upon his devoting most of his waking hours to the one thing, banking. It is almost impossible for the actor to crystallize, because in the course of a year he is called upon to interpret many different characters, thereby widening his sympathies, stimulating his imagination, and expanding his consciousness; the actor is never as liable as the business man to be narrow or local in his viewpoint.

The business man is only too apt to allow his business to dominate him and to feel like a fish out of water in a new environment; he is often ill at ease and self-conscious when drawn away from his own little circle. Now, the first thing that every actor has to overcome in order to successfully "act" is this very self-consciousness; he learns to control "self"; he is obliged, in order to interpret some character quite alien to his native environment, to transcend his personal mannerisms and idiosyncrasies.

The business man's life is apt to flow along like a sluggish stream; he may possess the quality of one-pointedness, that sure formula for material success, but he will for that very reason always be the banker or merchant and nothing more. The actor lives more completely, as he acts out episodes of a thousand different lives in the characters he portrays—all of which build themselves into the matrix of his own soul.

The business man may beautify his existence through recourse to the fine arts during his leisure moments; but these moments are not enough, and sometimes this culture only touches the surface. The actor lives with the arts, for in his occupation he comes in contact with music, literature and painting, all more or less related to the drama—a noble art in itself.

Almost every young man who starts out in life to be an actor does so because he wishes to express something lofty or at least heroic; the making of money is either not a consideration or is secondary.

"Actors are known to be generous and sympathetic—as a class—with their fellow humans, because, through lacking the commercial instinct, they are often "broke," and know both the bitter and sweet in life; they give readily, truly following the Master's wisdom: "Take ye no thought for the morrow." Most business men, in the pitiless grind of competition, are forced to hoard, and think twice before extending "the helping hand."

A good percentage of business men remain in one city or town over great periods, instinctively knowing that long-lived trees take root first. The actor must travel, whether he will or not, as the public constantly demands new faces; and practically everyone will admit that travel is a broadening influence.

The traditional and present day popularity of actors with the gentler sex is due to the fact that the actor supplies the romantic, colorful, broad personality that the bank clerk and the grocery store proprietor often lack.

The actor is a very useful citizen; he makes folks laugh, cry and think, and affords them some of the most pleasant moments of their lives. The screen actor, with his millions of followers, influences far more people than any business man. Douglas Fairbanks, Charles Ray and Will Rogers, among others, are patterned after by the youth of the nation and actually idealized by many. A character like "The Miracle Man" surely elevates the nation's ideals.

Of course, the world could not get along without business men, but neither could it get along without actors, who fill a very great place in the public heart.

Editor Camera! Enclosed you will find order for Camera! starting with the edition of Saturday, April 2nd, but I wish to add a few words that might mean more to you than the money for subscription.

Camera! is certainly a newsy little sheet, especially, a valuable little magazine to all interested in the business of the moving picture industry. Also your criticisms of pictures showing at local theaters are always good, which, being fair to all, leaves no doubt as to the ability of the critic. And many times (whenever the case warranted it) I have noticed that you have given more space to some minor part than to the "star" of the picture in review. That certainly is merit, and makes your publication worthy of support.

As Rip Van Winkle would say, "May you and yours live long and prosper."

Yours very truly,

AMERICAN LEGION OPPOSES CENSORSHIP

At the regular meeting of Hollywood Post, American Legion, (the motion picture post), a resolution was passed which hotly decries the movement proposing national censorship.

It follows:

Resolved: That Hollywood Post No. 43, American Legion, at its regular meeting in American Legion Hall, Hollywood, California, on Monday, March 14, 1921, does hereby go on record as being strongly opposed to any and all forms of motion picture censorship by individual or body, national or otherwise, not only because it is unjust to the nation at large, but because it is in direct opposition to the ideals and principles upon which our forefathers founded this country and the government which is founded upon the idea of being against government by oppression.

AT THE REALART STUDIO

Wanda Hawley has completed "A Kiss in Time," temporarily titled "It Can Be Done," and will rest until April 13, when a new production is scheduled.

Out on bail pending the appeal of her speeding case to Orange County's Superior Court, Bebe Daniels is completing a current Realart production in which Harry Myers ("A Connecticut Yankee") appears in support. As Miss Daniels' next offering for Realart is not scheduled to start before April 26, there will be sufficient time should a failure of the current appeal make it necessary for Miss Daniels to fulfill her sentence of ten days in the Santa Ana jail.

Chester M. Franklin has just completed work on "The Lady of the House," by Hector Turnbull. The offering will be an all-star special.

Monte Blue, William Boyd and Guy Oliver are a trio of determined suitors in "Moonlight and Honeysuckle," which Mary Miles Minter is now making.

Harvey O'Higgins, who is now at the Realart studio writing an original photoplay under the direction of Elmer Harris, is to return East for a period this summer to collaborate with Harriet Ford in the dramatization of "Main Street," Sinclair Lewis' novel.

Frank O'Connor, former assistant director to William D. Taylor, is preparing to start on his first picture as a director. The story is "Everything for Sale," by Hector Turnbull, who will personally supervise the production.

June 10 marks the second birthday anniversary of the Realart Pictures Corporation.

Mary Miles Minter celebrated her birthday anniversary Friday, April 1.

EASTERN PRODUCER HERE

That reports of impending panic in the motion picture industry in New York are greatly exaggerated is the statement made by H. F. Jans, Eastern producer and exhibitor, and one of the original incorporators of the Metro Pictures, Inc.

Mr. Jans is here for a conference with T. W. Chatburn regarding the Los Angeles premiere of "Madonnas and Men," his latest feature.

A. Kraemer, Ohio theater owner, is here on his honeymoon. Kraemer is one of the partners of the firm of Schuman, Fine & Kraemer which controls a circuit of motion picture playhouses in the Buckeye State.

"THE SNOB"

Clune's Broadway

Wanda Hawley appears again in the film capital in another Reartart production, this time entitled "The Snob." It is impossible to say that the picture contains much which might be considered adequate entertainment. It is, in fact, a foolish tale of an impossible little prig who having unmercifully upstaged a college lad because he worked his way through school, hastily reforms without any apparent reason, and by way of paying penance accepts a waitress' job behind a lunch counter. As may be noticed, the plot is a little bit skimpy.

The photography of the star is disappointing. Most of the cast is very good.

Miss Hawley plays Kathryn, the snob. She has collected a few pleasing little mannerisms, but without clever support this actress' pictures would not carry any kind of weight.

William Lawrence satisfies as Captain Bill Putnam, an all round college man.

Sylvia Ashton and Edwin Stevens offer some of their always-to-be-depended-upon comedy in the roles of Mr. and Mrs. Haynes, the parents of the particular Kathryn.

Walter Hiers as Harry Welland, the snob's Mr. Fixit, is very good. His ever amusing fat man's troubles have made him very popular.

Julia Faye is cast as his sister Betty. Her work grows more and more obvious, rendering it far from convincing.

Josephine Crowell, Richard Wayne and Althea Worthley all appear in this picture, which was directed by Sam Wood.

Dorothea Wolbert

CHARACTER COMEDIENNE

(At Liberty)

"Dorothea Wolbert will certainly amuse any audience when they see her. Her droll ways and her ability to put over a comedy situation are a novelty to witness, especially in these days when 'slapstick' and bathing girl comedies hold the screen.

"As the designing maid who tries to inveigle the butler into a marriage, only to be rebuffed in her efforts, she gives a pleasing performance." — Frank Leonard of the Motion Picture News.

"Miss Wolbert is a scream all by herself. Her get-up alone, without appearing ridiculously artificial and 'made-up,' is comedy in itself. She offers the biggest laugh in the production when friend husband traces her to the hotel room where she is to compromise the young husband that he may secure a divorce. 'La La Lucille' is one of the so-called 'bedroom farces,' but if accepted in the proper spirit there is nothing that should cause extreme blushing." —Wid's Daily.

The Board of Trade Misses

The Hollywood Board of Trade, after expending a great, and in many respects, a commendable effort to pass its better street lighting bill, finds that it has backed a losing venture, has failed in a very particular attempt. Does this body of men whose desire it apparently is to guard the commercial and municipal interests of the community even as yet realize wherein it made its mistake? In pointing the error, we consider ourselves privileged. Certainly we would be less than human if such were not the case.

How long will this or any other group of more glorified citizens, no matter how nearly representative it may be, imagine that it can carry any vital political movement when it completely ignores the members of the film colony in its campaign plans? That is what the Board of Trade has consistently done to its own and to Hollywood's detriment. Today its really necessary lighting project is a fizzle because of the unfair and clearly unprofitable policy which it entertains.

Had it invited and otherwise encouraged the support of the picture men for this issue, we haven't a doubt but that success would have attended it. As it was, the industry gave the entire affair nothing more than a casual notice.

When—oh when are the local Powers going to “get on” to themselves?
F. R.

Poor Pomona!

There are fifty-three more reformers in a little town hereabouts called Pomona than there should be in any settlement operating under the Constitution of the United States. From whence did they come? We don't know for a fact, but as every one present is allowed (still allowed) to suspect, in the legislated-to-death age, we will say that our very private suspicion is that they arrived tucked in among the other hundreds of thousands who have been regularly shipped to California since its discovery, when the folk at home could tolerate them no longer.

Anyway we will wish them the best for maybe they can't help their condition; but let us fervently hope that they'll all remain in that purest of citadels which they have thrown protectingly about their own spotlessness. Then partly because we loathe sneaks, we will further hope that the entire half hundred will be able to keep as good therein as they would have their neighbors, and that their own harshness won't lead them into deceiving themselves.

The rest is up to old Dame Balance Wheel, who, we have noticed, is very nearly always on hand. Which one of the many suggested agents she will choose to accomplish her levelling act is only a matter of conjecture. Some of us, however, would be more than gratified were she to employ the slow torture method and keep Poor Pomona enmeshed for a space in its own folly. The idea has also presented itself that she might save money for the state by doing away with its jails and establishing an exile law in favor of this good and righteous town. We'll wager here and now that it would prove the most marvelously effective punishment yet invented and just think of how beautifully the fallen ones would occupy the attention of the fifty-three. Yes, the benefits would be various!

Comedy aside—we are for them—they'll kill themselves first.

May Copyright Scenarios

Sidney T. Graves, Assemblyman from the sixty-third district, which we inhabit, informs us that the following bill relating to copyrights has been passed by the Assembly at Sacramento. It will prove interesting to our scenarists:

Current Reviews

"THE DOLLAR A YEAR MAN"

Grauman's

If Douglas Fairbanks thinks that his last offering was the utmost in "nuttness" we wish that he would make it a point to witness Roscoe Arbuckle in his latest Paramount release, "The Dollar a Year Man." We believe that he would learn thereby much that he has never even suspected heretofore about that which lurks in the corners of a rampant comedy imagination. We did!

Never has farce or slapstick either (this production is a combination of both) boasted an insaner plot. Because the picture contains much clever laugh-producing material, however, the story is saved for the amusement of many and the rare joy of not a few.

The photography is good generally and some of the now rather popular tinting is utilized advantageously.

"Fatty," in the role of Franklin Pinney, a wealthy laundryman and an amateur sleuth, presents possibilities amply cared for. It soon percolates over the audience (or should one say through?) that this "near nut" means well and from then on his part is a riot.

Lila Lee makes a satisfactory opposite for Arbuckle. She plays Peggy Bruce, a young lady who although she must "ask papa" before accepting her sweetheart's proposal of marriage, quaimlessly gallivants about the countryside and "takes in" the beaches at night in company with a strange young run-away prince.

Edwin Stevens is good as Colonel Bruce, Peggy's detective father.

J. M. Dumont does "Bertie, the Blood," who it is early announced is a Bolshevik and therefore the villain, and Winifred Greenwood acts in the capacity of general situation mixer. Her part, which is labeled Kate Connelly, also revolves about the lure of the crime scenting profession.

Edward Sutherland does all that could be expected with the handsome Prince Rupert.

James Cruze directed this Walter Woods' screen story.

"THE MISTRESS OF SHENSTONE"

California

Pauline Frederick's latest Robertson-Cole release is a photodramatization of Florence Barclay's very human novel, "The Mistress of Shenstone." Whereas the scenario follows itself too much in circles to accomplish a wholly rounded climax, the very clever performances of the leads leave little to be adversely criticized.

The sets and locations are unusually effective. The photography and lighting both vary.

The star enacts the title role, or Lady Myra Ingleby, a companionless widow whose problem appears in the form of the Earl of Airth with whom she falls completely in love while in ignorance of the fact that he had been inadvertently responsible for the death of her husband, Lord Ingleby. As the affectionate, whole-souled woman whose love means more than even seemingly justified prejudices, Miss Frederick is again the finished actress who has consistently offered the public sincere and representative characterizations of the modern woman. She plays Lady Myra with beautiful subtlety.

As Jim Airth, a big-natured, conscientious son of the nobility, Roy Stewart is ideally cast. He divides the picture's sympathy with Miss Frederick and his work has never exceeded that which he offers in several of his scenes in this picture.

Emmett C. King does Sir Deryck Brand, Lady Ingleby's friend and counselor.

Lydia Yeamans Titus, Rosa Gore, and Helen Muir provide a bit of necessary comedy relief as the Murgatroyd sisters.

Helen Wright plays Mrs. O'Mara, while Arthur Clayton and John Willink complete the cast.

Henry King is responsible for the direction of "The Mistress of Shenstone."

BETTY BRICE

Playing Psyche Bines in "The Spenders"

"THE GREAT ADVENTURE"

Ambassador

Lionel Barrymore appears this week locally in his latest First National production, a comedy this time, entitled "The Great Adventure." Despite poor direction the picture is a riot, due to several clever situations and the always original star. At that the careless handling of other points, loses them entirely. The unusually bad photography also proves detrimental to the story, in that it oftentimes fails to register important expressions.

Barrymore himself offers a performance that is a continual delight. All of his screen artistry goes into the creation of Priam Farll, a genius, who simply cannot manage any situation. At first through stupidity and then that he may escape matrimony which threatens him through the aggressive Lady Sophia, he even allows his famous name to be buried with his valet, while he fulfills the deceased's lowly role. His characterization is typically consistent.

Doris Rankin appears opposite the star as Alice Challice, a practical member of the English middle classes. Her personality often serves her in place of a knowledge of technique, but it serves her well.

Octavia Broske, as the pursuing Diana, is very good, while Thomas Braidon has a few effective scenes as the much-talked-of Henry Leeks.

Katherine Stewart, Arthur Rankin and Paul Kelly, as Mrs. Leeks and the two little Leeks, provide further amusement.

Ivo Dawson, Charles Lane, Jed Prouty, E. J. Ratcliffe and Maybeth Carr complete the cast with well cared for minor parts.

Kenneth Webb handled the direction.

"THE KILLER"

Miller's

It is a mistake to film in this day any story which does not present either whole-some entertainment or a big point for the grave consideration of the public, no matter how much sounded the name of its author may be. In our estimation, Stewart Edward White's "The Killer," which has been filmed and released by B. B. Hampton, makes just about the worst screen drama that we have seen since the time when western and serial thrillers were popular on Broadway.

In the first place, the novel is merely a wild tale of impossible murderers and it is only rendered more greswome and morbid when visualized on the screen. Even its good cast and fair technique do not rescue it.

Frank Campeau's characterization of the title role is excellent. He makes Henry Hooper over and over again "the killer." We doubt the advisability of ever featuring this type of criminal, however. It helps neither the juvenile nor adult public since it has nothing of good—and too much seen becomes depressing.

Claire Adams doesn't appear to be particularly sincere in the role of Ruth Emory, one of "the killer's" victims; but then we wonder who would seem so in the part.

Frankie Lee adds the only really enjoyable touch to the picture as Bobby, Ruth's little brother who is "a regular kid." Nevertheless he too is eventually dragged into the bloody melee. (We stopped counting murders after about the fifth or sixth.)

Jack Conway is quite interesting as the dashing, courageous hero, Sanborn, who manfully protects the Emorys, while from behind an improvised fortress (consisting of a mattress, a chair and a lamp or so) he holds off a half dozen Mexicans with fiendish intentions. Jack Conway is a very clever director!

Edward Peil's work and make-up as Ramon, Hooper's right hand man, leave nothing to be desired.

Tod Sloan, the well remembered jockey, is suitably cast as Artie Brower, an ex-racer who finally saves the day. Someone had to!

Frank Hayes plays Windy Smith and Milton Ross is Buck Johnson.

Will Walling, Tom Ricketts, and Zack Williams are included in the cast.

Howard Hickman directed the production.

"AN OFF-SHORE PIRATE"

Tally's

A diverting little musicless comic opera is Viola Dana's new Metro release, "An Off-Shore Pirate." From its clever little ingenue and its "musical comedy-ish" leading man down to its six African chorus boys, it remains consistently true to type. As may be gathered from the above, everything about it is exceedingly light save the boys, whose antics, by-the-way, are permitted to occupy too much footage now and again. As has probably been suspected the action occurs mostly upon the customary yacht. The rest is merely a matter of mixed identity with a little bribery and a surprise finish thrown in for good measure. On the whole, the story contains many laughs. Incidentally there are spots where it drags.

Very poor laboratory work resulting in a badly scratched negative detracts greatly from its entertainment value, however.

Miss Dana employs all of her ingenue charm, both precocious and naive, in the interpretation of Arditia Farnum, a millionairess with a streak of unreasonable rom-

The opportunity for actual exhibition of talent is always the big factor in 'getting together,' and I am in hearty accord of your system. As a producer I would always be glad to SEE, WITHOUT BEING TOLD, what one can do. This is not only of benefit to the applicant but to the producer as well and I am sure he will endorse this plan as I and Mr. Walter J. Forrester, President, Lone Star Co. do herein."

B. W. SINGER. Casting Director, Metro:

"Your method I think will bring much better results in selecting artists than the Still photographs."

ance. Her work in this play is much more pleasing than was that in her last.

Jack Mulhall sails breezily through his part, or Toby Sanderson alias Curtiss Carlyle. He is more than competent to care for this sort of thing.

Edward Jobson is good as Ardita's uncle, while Edward Cecil enacts with fitting mystery the Russian heavy. It goes without saying that his front name is Ivan.

Dallas Fitzgerald directed.

"THE PLAYTHING OF BROADWAY"

Clune's Broadway

A stilted, much done story of a girl who forsakes Broadway and her evil ways for the slums and her true love, is "The Plaything of Broadway," Justine Johnstone's current Realart starring vehicle. Its theme is too antiquated to lend it general appeal, but a sincere woman located one row behind us wept bitterly (far more bitterly than did Miss Johnstone) throughout the heroine's heart-rendering pathos, so maybe other expectations will be equally touched.

The star plays Lola just Lola, "a notorious woman." As long as her work runs in a light channel, or just as long as she can smile and pout prettily, Miss Johnstone is pleasing. Unfortunately her grief and even merely serious moments are far from convincing.

Crauford Kent satisfies as Dr. Jennings, the man whose sincerity and incidentally whose unsusceptibility wins Lola's love.

Macey Harlam, Edward Davis, and George Cowl, as men of affairs and "affairs," all do effective minor parts.

Gertrude Hillman and Lucy Parker complete the cast.

Jack Dillon directed.

"Pirates of the West" is the title that has been given to the first of the new two-reel Western pictures which C. Edward Hatton has contracted to make for release by the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation.

Walter Hiers is enjoying a short vacation following the completion of "A Kiss in Time," in which he appeared with Wanda Hawley.

Eddie Polo has returned to Universal City from two weeks at Byron Hot Springs, where he went to recuperate from the strenuous effects of his recent serial production, "The Seal of Satan."
